Corrections in List of Transfers.

The transfer of the block bounded by Columbus and Manhattan Avenues, One Hundred and Ninth and One Hundred and Tenth Streets, as published in this column on Tuesday, made it appear that Max S. Hellman had conveyed that property to William T. Hookey and another. The item should have read "Max S. Wilson and William T. Hookey to Harris L. Rosenthal."

The records for the same day also contained no mention of the transfer of 13 East One Hundred and Twenty-seventh Street—Sarah Raphael to Jackson & Stern—or of a purchase-money mortgage for $10,000, due in one year, given back by the buyers.

VENTNOR BY THE SEA
ADJOINING
ATLANTIC CITY
ON THE SAME ISLAND AND SAME BEACH

Not a barren tract, but already built up, flourishing under a prosperous city government, with well conducted Hotels.

LOTS $150.00 Each and upwards ON INSTALLMENTS $10 down, $1.50 per week.

The entire investment world has often marveled over the wonderful fortunes which have been amassed by buying Atlantic City real estate. The same opportunity is now being offered in Ventnor, immediately adjoining Atlantic City, on same beach, on same island, the regular terminus of the Atlantic City Trolley Line, with a five-cent fare from any part of Atlantic City through to Ventnor. Never before has this tract been placed on the market; it has been held by a large corporation who were independent as to its disposal.

When one considers that lots there only 1,000 feet from the ocean can be purchased for $150 per lot, and then compare it with lots on the same beach, not half a mile away, which are worth $25,000, the tremendous opportunity for profit is most plausible. We pay railroad fare within a radius of 1,000 miles to all who purchase. Full information, references, testimonials, etc., on application to the

SCHOOL OFFICIAL KILLS HIS WIFE AND HIMSELF

Aged Hackensack Man's Mind Affected by Long Illness.

USES TWO PISTOLS FOR DEED

Mr. and Mrs. Terhune, Left Alone in House, Agreed to Die Together, the Police Say.

Special to The New York Times.

HACKENSACK, May 3.—In a moment of despondency brought on by long illness, John Terhune, Superintendent of Public Schools in Bergen County, shot and killed his wife and then himself at their residence in Bergen Street, this city, to-day. The police believe the aged couple agreed to die together.

Mr. Terhune and his wife were a devoted couple. For two years the husband, who was fifty-nine years of age, had been suffering from rheumatism and severe headaches, from which he could get no relief, and which of late had prevented him from attending to the duties of his office. His wife, from watching over her suffering husband, was undermined in health and well nigh an invalid herself. She was three years her husband's junior.

The double tragedy was enacted in a small bedroom on the second floor of the Terhune residence. Mr. Terhune and his wife were alone in the house at the time. It was shortly aftern 10 o'clock yesterday forenoon when the neighborhood was aroused by the sound of three shots fired in rapid succession. Mrs. Amy Belding, the nearest neighbor, sent her servant to the Educational Hall to notify Wilbur Terhune, the youngest son of the dead couple, who attended to his father's office during his illness.

The son upon reaching the house found the front door locked and gained entrance to the house by forcing a back door. On reaching the bedroom he saw his mother's body lying across the bed. One bullet had penetrated her heart and another had entered the right side of her chest near the breast bone. At her feet on the floor was the body of the husband. He was shot through the heart. Nearby, as though it had dropped from his right hand when he fell, was a large calibre revolver.

When Coroners Pell and Lees made an examination of the bodies it was found that, while the husband had been shot with the 44-calibre revolver found on the floor, the bullets which had gut an end to the woman's life were from a smaller weapon. Later the police found a 32-calibre revolver on a dresser in the room.

The School Superintendent had been confined to his bed for several weeks and was up for the first time after his illness this morning. He had breakfast with his wife and their youngest son, Wilbur, at 9 o'clock.

"Go down to Educational Hall, and I will join you before long,' said Mr. Terhune to the son after breakfast. The latter had not been half an hour away when the shooting occurred.

It was the opinion of all who knew Mr. Terhune that the suffering he had undergone had unbalanced his mind.

For some time Mr. Terhune had been moody. Only a couple of weeks age he said to a friend:

"I cannot stand this much longer. In addition to my other troubles I feel that I am failing mentally. I would be far better dead.

Mr. Terhune had been County Superintendent of Public Schools for nineteen years. His wife was Miss Elizabeth Hall of Paterson. They had two sons, Wilbur B. and Warren J. The latter is a senior Lieutenant of the United States Navy, and at present an instructor in physics and chemistry at Annapolis.

CABBY'S CHASE AFTER WOMAN

Her Check Bad, He Says—Tells His Tale Chronologically.

William P. O'Connell, the Astoria cabman, had Anna T. Rowland arrested yesterday afternoon after a mad cab race up Lexington Avenue.

O'Connell said that she gave him a worthless check for $5 on Tuesday. The stylishly dressed young woman said that she lived at 20 West Twenty-first Street, and that she was twenty-eight years old. She said she thought that the check was good.

Thus spake the cab driver:

"April 28, she takes me cab, an' I drives her to a Sixt' Avenue store. She went in one door where I takes me stand to wait for her. She goes out another, an' leaves me on the stand.

"May 2, I sees her in another cab on Broadway. I chases her; I stops her. She gives me a check for $5. It is on a bank at 41 Wall Street. The check is phony.

"May 3, 6 o'clock, I sees her gittin' in a cab at Twenty-first Street. 'Hold,' sez I. She says somethin' to her driver, and the other cab sails away up Lexington Avenue. I am on. They are trying to outrun me.

"Oh Bingo, me horse, he is on, too. He settles down for the race. I holds him in because I knows the wind of the other horse is short. Thirty-fift' Street, they are gaining on me. Thirty-seventh they are weakenin'. Forty-second, I've got 'em. 'Arrist 'em, policeman,' sez I. He did."

Hope to Pay Debt of $29,000.

The Colored Men's Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association, at 252 and 254 West Fifty-third Street, is planning to hold a jubilee mass meeting in Carnegie Hall next Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, when the officers hope to be able to announce the payment of the indebtedness of the branch, which is now about $29,000. Bishop Potter, Bishop Alexander Walters, the Rev. Dr. R. S. MacArthur, the Rev. Dr. S. P. Cadman, and Booker T. Washington have volunteered to speak.

If you ever could tell before a season starts, just what was going to sell best in suits, the clothing business would beat a get-rich-quick concern.

But there is such difference in taste that clothiers doing a large business must provide for all sorts and conditions of men; and have everything any of them might want.

We believe that in our Spring suits we've come pretty near doing that.

LIVES AFTER 7-STORY FALL

Clothes on Lines He Breaks a Cushion —Attempted Suicide Charged.

Edward Botts, a journeyman jeweler, employed by George Schuler of 51 and 53 Maiden Lane, and giving his address as 106 Macdougal Street, is a prisoner in St. Vincent's Hospital, charged by the police with attempted suicide. He either fell or jumped from the seventh story window of the tenement house at 105 Macdougal Street, landing in a narrow areaway eight stories below.

Botts's wife occupies a furnished room on the seventh floor of 105 Macdougal Street, nearly opposite where Botts is said to live. He called several times a week to see her.

Yesterday morning, about 7:30 o'clock, Botts called at the flat and went to his wife's room. Frank Graffin and his wife, who live on the floor below, some time later were startled by hearing the woman scream, and found that Botts had either fallen or jumped from the window, falling to the yard.

As Botts fell he passed between that house and another house not so high. There were five clothes lines strung with clothes, and he carried them all down with him, the clothes acting as a sort of cushion. There is a fence separating the yards of the two houses, and only a space of about 2½ feet at the areaway, but Botts did not strike the fence. Botts was apparently suffering only from shock when picked up. At 106 Macdougal Street where Botts said he lived, it was said that he was not known.

KINGDON GOULD GIVES BOAT.

Presents New Shell to Managers of Class Crew.

Kingdon Gould, son of George Gould, and a much-hazed freshman at Columbia, yesterday presented to the management of his class crew a new shell, which will be used at Poughkeepsie. The cost of the new boat is $600.

Although the name of the donor of the shell is withheld for the present by the manager of the crew, it is well known that it came from young Gould, and the gift is generally regarded by his fellow-college men as an attempt to efface the memory of the unfortunate incident which followed an attempt by the sophomores to haze him.

Young Gould is not a member of the crew, but he is deeply interested in Columbia oarsmanship, as was his father before him. The $25,000 boathouse of the Columbia Rowing Association at One Hundred and Fifteenth Street and the Hudson River was the gift of his father, George Gould.

Justice John Fleming of the Court of Special Sessions in Brooklyn is grieved over the loss of a pocketbook he had carried for more than thirty-three years. The old purse is ragged and worn with age.

It disappeared a few days ago while Justice Fleming was traveling between the Hoffman House and Times Square. It contained $35 in bills and some private papers. If the finder will return the purse with all bills and papers intact, he will receive $5 and no questions will be asked.

DUNNE REFUSES TO ASK GOVERNOR FOR TROOPS

Chicago Mayor Looks to Local Force to Check Riots.

DISORDER STILL RAMPANT

Mobs Patrolling Streets and Shooting Indiscriminately—One Woman Wounded.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May. 4.—Although rioting and bloodshed continue with unabated fury in the streets of Chicago, Gov. Deneen refuses to call out the State troops until Mayor Dunne or Sheriff Barrett acknowledges that the local forces are unable to cope with the strike.

The Mayor and the Sheriff still contend that they will be able to handle the situation and restore order, but the rioting and indiscriminate shooting continue.

To-day a woman was shot. The victim was Mrs. W. Claret. She had no part in the strike disturbances, but was attending to her household duties in her flat, at 139 Twenty-eighth Place, when some one in a mob below fired a shot through a window. The bullet shattered the window pane, and wounded the woman in the neck. The shooting was the result of an attack upon several non-union negro teamsters.

Otis Keith, a non-unionist, who was being pursued by a mob, fell under a trolley car and received severe injuries. In his efforts to elude the mob Keith boarded a swiftly moving street car, but was pushed from the step by the conductor. He ran behind the street car directly in the path of one moving in the opposite direction. In vain he turned and tried to get out of the way. Scores of men stood in his way, and the on-coming car struck him, knocking him down and cutting his head. Before the mob could do him further injury policemen came to his rescue.

More negro strike breakers arrived from the South to-day, big fellows, all armed with black canes. The feeling against bringing these men here has grown so that the Employers' Association decided to-day to stop the practice and recruit its strike breakers at home.

Mayor Dunne's objection to calling out troops is based on the belief that the appearance of soldiers, either State or National, would be the signal for more serious outbreaks. It is believed that it would result in a strike on one or both of the street car systems, and a dozen other unions are only waiting for some such excuse to take up the cause of the teamsters.

Sheriff Barrett says he will take active control of the strike situation to-morrow morning. So much pressure has been brought to bear on him and on Mayor Dunne by business men that the Sheriff has sworn in a still larger force of deputies. Two hundred Deputy Sheriffs were sworn this afternoon at the office of Sheriff Barrett and it is expected that 2,000 more will have been enrolled by to-morrow evening.

The Chicago Clearing House Association this afternoon adopted sweeping resolutions declaring that the riots in the streets were constantly increasing in fury and had gone beyond the civil power of the city and the country to control. It was therefore the opinion of the members of the Clearing House that the State troops should be at once called out.

Mayor Dunne for three hours this afternoon rode through the downtown streets in a buggy, and on his return to the City Hall declared he believed the police to be fully able to cope with the trouble.

W. D. Mahon, President of the National organization of street car men, after looking into the situation, to-night ordered all members of the street car men's union to continue at work. They were under agreement, he declared, with the Union Traction Company, and this agreement would not be broken.

The number of injured in to-day's rioting was about the same as that of the last two days. About thirty or forty men have been cared for at various hospitals, and there are fully as many more who have received medical attendance and whose names are not known to the police.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 4.—At the close of a conference between Gov. Deneen and a committee of ten Chicago business men, the prospects of the militia being called into service at Chicago did not seem imminent. It was said in the Governor's office that Mayor Dunne had assured the Governor that the police had the situation well in hand, and that no troops were needed.

LINER A WEEK IN ICE PACK.

One Vessel Forced to Land Montreal Passengers at Halifax.

HALIFAX, N. S., May 4.—The Allan Line steamer Buenos Ayrean, from Glasgow for Montreal, arrived here to-day and landed 320 passengers, having been unable to reach her destination owing to ice. The steamer was held for a week in an icepack off Cape Ray.

A change of wind last Tuesday released the vessel, but the ice was coming out of the Gulf so fast that after steaming forty miles she was forced to head for Halifax.

While in the ice the Allan liner sighted in a similar predicament the steamer Kastalia of the Donaldson Line; the Montcalm, from Liverpool, and the Dominion, also from Liverpool.

WRECKED ON ICEPACK; WALK.

Castaways, Thirty-four Miles Out from Nome, Reported Safe.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—The War Department has received a report from Major Glassford at Seattle, in charge of the Alaskan telegraph service, announcing that four men who were blown to sea in a disabled launch off Nome on April 26 and jammed in an icepack have landed at Solomon Inland, about thirty-four miles from Nome, and are making their way ashore over the ice, all well.

The War Department had directed the commanding officer at Fort Davis, Nome, to make every possible effort to reach the men. A launch, fitted out by private parties, left on Tuesday night to search.

INDEX TO DEPARTMENTS.

NEW YELLOW FEVER CASES.

Delay on Canal Work Feared, Owing to Bad Conditions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—The dreaded appearance of yellow fever on the Isthmus of Panama is regarded in official quarters as likely to hinder progress during the Summer on canal work.

A telegram received at the War Department to-day from Gov. Davis, at Panama, stated that Robert R. West of this city, Deputy Auditor for the Canal Commission; N. M. Barrett, and Charles Leach of the Engineer Department, were down with the fever and in the hospital.

The inefficiency of the plans and work done by the former commission in pushing sanitation of the canal zone is becoming daily more apparent. Secretary Taft and the new commission are making every effort to provide against epidemic conditions and to secure protection for the thousands of men who soon will be employed.

The new patients are of a class of employes regarded as intelligent and competent to observe all rules of hygiene and to follow closely the well-established methods of protection against the fever.

Recent reports from the Isthmus show that conditions are abnormal, owing to almost a water famine and to bad weather. It is believed that the conditions will improve steadily, and that the American colony is going through its worst experience. Within a few weeks the new water supply system, bringing pure mountain water into Panama, will be in operation. When the city is paved with vitrified brick and sewered it will be the cleanest city in the tropics.

SHOWER OF ROCK IN BRONX.

Heavy Blast Shatters Windows and Scares Flat Dwellers.

A heavy blast in an excavation on the northwest corner of One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street and Brown Place, the Bronx, last night came nigh to demolishing a flat house across the street. The foreman, Tony Utano, has not been seen since the blast was set off.

The blast was followed by a shower of rocks and stones, which fell for several hundred feet about. One of these, weighing about seven pounds, went through the window of the first-floor apartment in the menaced house, occupied by Mrs. Henry Wilcke. She was sitting in the window with her two children when the stone flew over her head, carrying with it the sash and scattering broken glass all about.

At the same time a larger stone fell into the kitchen of Mrs. John Harvey, who occupies the second floor, striking her china closet and smashing all her dishes. Another fragment, which required several men to remove, sailed in through the window on the third floor and caused havoc with the furniture of Mrs. John Grabout, who occupies the apartment.

John Harkness of One Hundred and Sixty-second Street and St. Ann's Avenue, who was passing, was struck in the left leg by a piece of stone and had to have his injuries dressed at a neighboring drug store.

Every window in the neighborhood was smashed by the concussion.

AUNT HELD AS KIDNAPPER.

BUFFALO, May 4.—Mrs. Elizabeth Feinberg of Chicago was arrested here to-day on the charge of kidnapping her three-year-old nephew from the home of his mother, Mrs. Charles Kemeng, in New York. Mrs. Feinberg had been visiting Mrs. Kemeng and was on her way home. The child is with her.

Mrs. Kemeng of 8-10 New Bowery made the complaint on which Inspector O'Brien telegraphed Buffalo asking for the arrest. She said her sister took an immediate and intense liking to little Frederick. Yesterday morning Mrs. Feinberg took her little nephew out for a walk, and Mrs. Kemeng did not see them again. Mrs. Feinberg and the boy will be brought back here to-day.

CALLED TO NEW YORK CHURCH

Madison Avenue Baptist Congregation Invites the Rev. Dr. Tupper.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 4.—The Rev. Dr. Kerr Boyce Tupper, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Seventeenth and Sansom Streets, and one of the best known Baptist clergymen in this country, has been called to the pastorate of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church, New York, formerly held by the Rev. Dr. George C. Lorimer.

It is understood that the Rev. Dr. Tupper's call carries with it a guarantee of $10,000 a year, and the promise of large support in institutional work. He has not yet made up his mind whether or not he will accept the call. He declared to-day that he is perfectly satisfied with his position in this city, and in view of the harmony existing between him and his congregation it is not expected that he will make any change.

SALVATION ARMY GOT BOY.

Commander Booth Conducted Search for Young Fleischmann.

There was great rejoicing last night at Salvation Army Headquarters on Fourteenth Street over the news that Leo Fleischmann, the long-lost New York boy, had been found, and would soon be at home with his parents in this city. It was said that the credit for finding the boy had been very properly given to Miss Eva Booth, the Commander of the Salvation Army, who had been searching for the boy ever since she heard of his disappearance.

The story was told of how Miss Booth had been visiting Mrs. Samuel Untermyer at Greystone when Mrs. Untermyer said that the only son of her sister, Mrs. Fleischmann, had started out for a walk and had failed to return. She suggested that an advertisement be placed in the Army's official newspaper, The War Cry, giving a description of the missing boy.

This was done and thousands of copies circulated all over the country. One of the readers of The War Cry who happened to see the advertisement wrote to Mrs. Booth telling her that a boy answering the description was on board the

METROPOLITAN TO GET 34TH STREET SUBWAY

Change in Route Makes It Unavailable for Interborough.

MOVING PLATFORM LOSES

Transit Board Stirs Up Belmont Company About Joralemon Street Shaft and Broadway Trees.

All the cherished hopes of the moving-platform syndicate to get a franchise to build a crosstown subway through Thirty-fourth Street were killed at an executive session of the Rapid Transit Commission yesterday. It was decided instead to have a regular four-track subway in Thirty-fourth Street from Third to Eighth Avenue.

Such a plan will make the route unavailable for the Interborough, because it could not transfer with its Ninth Avenue line, the proposed route failing a crosstown block short of the connection. The action of the commission therefore places Thirty-fourth Street in the hands of the Metropolitan-Pennsylvania-New Haven interests, who want the route because it will give the best possible connection between the proposed north and south subways of the Metropolitan system and the Pennsylvania Railroad station. To make matters worse for the moving-platform syndicate, with which the Interborough Company has an arrangement for transfers from the subway and elevated lines, the Commissioners are determined not to give Fourteenth Street, Twenty-third Street, or Forty-second Street for moving platforms. Secretary Burrows was instructed to notify the moving-platform syndicate that if it wanted to put in a bid for some less important crosstown street the board would consider the application. It developed yesterday that only one member of the board had any desire to grant a franchise for a moving platform.

The board again acted contrary to the wishes of the Interborough when the old trouble of the open shaft in Joralemon Street, Brooklyn, came up. Acting Chief Engineer Rice was instructed to stop all warrants for further payments for work on the Brooklyn extensions until this shaft was closed and the street ready for traffic. For many months this spot has been a sore point with President Orr and Controller Grout. They said yesterday that the Interborough promised to have the shaft removed and the street restored within nine months of the time of its sinking, but that two years had elapsed and there was no sign of better conditions. President Orr said that property owners had been forced to abandon their property near the shaft and that values had suffered greatly, to say nothing of other conditions surrounding what he termed a "public nuisance."

Still another unfriendly step against the Interborough came when the subject of the trees on upper Broadway was up for discussion. Upward of 300 new trees were planted by the Interborough on Broadway after the subway work had been completed, in accordance with the contract to plant trees in place of those destroyed during the work. At the meeting yesterday it was declared that only six of the new trees are alive, and it was charged that dying trees were planted instead of trees up to contract specifications. This is in accord with a report made by Landscape Engineer Parsons of the Park Department. The company was notified to have all of the dead trees removed and others planted.

MRS. VALENTINA MUST DIE.

Court of Pardons Refuses to Commute Death Penalty.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., May 4.—The Court of Pardons created considerable surprise to-day when it refused the many petitions to change the death sentence of Mrs. Anna Valentina to life imprisonment. Her counsel, James Trimble of Newark, spoke for an hour before the court, arguing that the trial which resulted in the conviction of his client for the murder of Rosa Salsa in Hackensack was rather an inquisition than a trial. One of the petitions was signed by 95 per cent. of the State legislators.

Mrs. Valentina is under sentence to pay the death penalty on May 10 next. Her counsel, however, will make a last fight for her life by applying to a United States District Judge to-morrow morning for a writ of habeas corpus carrying the case to the Federal courts for review.

BROKER AND HIS BRIDE SUED.

Litigation Follows Wedding in Boston of Mr. Hale and Tessie Mooney.

BOSTON, May. 4.—J. Frank Hale, a broker, who married Tessie Andrea Mooney, an actress, yesterday was made defendant with his bride to-day in a suit growing out of the failure of Longley, Hale & Co. The plaintiff is John A. Fisher, assignee and trustee of the firm.

Fisher seeks to have Mrs. Hale enjoined from collecting the income of real estate which, it is said, Hale conveyed to her, April 18. The creditors of Hale contend that they will suffer by the transfer of the property to his wife. Longley, Hale & Co. were brokers and failed a year ago.

AGIUS TO LEAVE PHILIPPINES.

Apostolic Delegate Cannot Stand Climate—His Condition Grave.

ROME, May 4.—A cable dispatch received at the Vatican to-day states that the condition of Archbishop Agius, Apostolic Delegate to the Philippines, who has been suffering from native fever, is quite grave, and that it is believed he cannot remain in Manila.

He will be relieved of his duties when he is able to leave the Philippines.

MUST PAY EX-CONDUCTOR $2,000.

Railway Company Had Charged Him with "Knocking Down" 66 Cents.

PITTSBURG, May 4.—Damages of $2,000 were to-day awarded to William S. Bell,

THE NINE'S POLICE BILL DEAD.

Four-Year Term for Mayor Meets Same Fate in Senate.

ALBANY, May 4.—The Senate to-night killed the Committee of Nine bill to reorganize the New York police force, and the New York City Street Sprinkling bill, both introduced by Assemblyman Prentice. Motions to suspend the rules to permit their passage were voted down.

The bill extending the term of the Mayor and other elective officers of New York City from two to four years is probably dead, despite the fact that the Senate once passed it. When the bill went through early in the week it was held by a motion to reconsider. To-night a motion to take from the table the motion to reconsider was lost, and the bill still lies in the Senate.

MORTGAGE TAX PLAN PASSES.

Revised Measure Goes to Governor—Loan Society Exemption $3,000.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 4.—The revised Mortgage Tax bill passed the Assembly to-day under an emergency message by a vote of 86 to 60. It now goes to the Governor for signature.

The following Republicans voted against it: Wainwright, Rigby, Perry, Prentice, Pendry, Agnew, Bellhil, Cotton, Etsel, Foelker, Francisco, Murphy, Hartman, Miller, and Reeve.

The new bill exempts from taxation mortgages not exceeding $3,000 held by building and loan associations on residence property. Provision is made for review of the acts of local tax officers by the State Tax Commissioners before recourse to the courts.

NIXON HALTS NIAGARA BILL.

Assembly Rules Committee, 5 to 1, Holds Up Cassidy Plan.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 4.—The Cassidy-LeFevre-Middleton land condemnation and Niagara Power bill was defeated to-night in the Assembly Rules Committee by a vote of 5 to 1.

Speaker S. Fred Nixon of the Assembly was the one to bring about defeat. He took the stand two days ago that the Assembly could not afford to stand for a piece of legislation that had been so generally criticised.

This is the second bill in behalf of the Lockport company which the Assembly leaders have killed this session.

After winning in the Senate yesterday by the vote of Senator Dresser of Brooklyn, the Lockport agents were sanguine, but, according to to-night's action the bill cannot get out of committee. It is reported that forty Assemblymen signed a protest asking the committee not to report the measure.

DEMANDS BANK TAX REPEAL.

Governor Sends Emergency Message—Senate Action To-day.

ALBANY, May 4.—An emergency message from the Governor brought about an effort to-night for immediate passage of the Page bill to repeal the tax on the surplus of savings banks.

Minority Leader Grady declared that both parties were pledged to this, and called for suspension of the rules. The Republicans would not consent. Then expressed intention to-night is to propose the Page bill for passage to-morrow.

The Governor's message was read in the Assembly this afternoon. It says in part:

"Pledges to the people must faithfully be kept, and cannot safely be ignored on the specious plea of necessity. The Republican Party is committed to this repeal by the repeated public declarations of its candidates. It cannot afford to refuse to do its duty."

SHIFTS FRANCHISE POWER.

Assembly Overrides Mayor's Veto on Aldermanic Bill.

ALBANY, May 4.—The Assembly to-day passed over Mayor McClellan's veto the Elsberg bills transferring power over franchises from the New York Board of Aldermen to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

The vote was 94 to 61.

TO CLOSE RAINES HOTELS.

Emergency Message Puts Bill for Immediate Effect Through Senate.

ALBANY, May 4.—The bill introduced by Senator Ambler at the request of the New York Committee of Fourteen to put into effect at once the new Raines amendments against disreputable hotels passed the Senate to-night under an emergency message from the Governor.

It provides that the building authorities of a city shall inspect hotels on application of any taxpayer, to see whether or they comply with the building provisions of the liquor tax law as well as with local hotel building ordinances.

DEAD-LOCK OVER SENATOR.

Thirty Ballots Without Result in Connecticut Assembly.

HARTFORD, Conn., May 4.—A dead-lock developed to-night in the caucus of Republican members of the Connecticut General Assembly, called to nominate a successor to the late United States Senator Orville H. Platt. Up to midnight thirty ballots had been taken with only slight fluctuation in the figures of the leading candidates.

The supporters of ex-Gov. George H. McLean were offset in numbers by the friends of Congressman Frank D. Brandegee of New London, while in addition to these leading candidates State Senator Allan W. Paige of Bridgeport and Congressman E. J. Hill of Norwalk figured as interesting factors in the situation.

As the balloting progressed the rank and file of the caucus, tired and supperless, frequently interrupted the proceedings with songs and cheering.

McLean's count on the thirtieth ballot was 96. Brandegee had 96, and the members were moving about in a restless manner. Since the twenty-sixth ballot, when McLean had 85, he has gained a few votes a ballot, but so has Brandegee, Paige and Hill falling off slightly from 27 and 19 respectively.

FOUR FISHING BOATS MISSING.

CHEAP GAS IS KILLED; NO SPECIAL SESSION

McCarren's Whisper Gets Brown to Doom the 80-Cent Rate.

SIX STEVENS BILLS PASSED

Dramatic Scenes as Senate Acts—Mayor's Power Plan Goes to Governor.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 4.—Eighty-cent gas for the private consumers of New York City was killed this afternoon by the vote of Senator Walter L. Brown of Otsego, in one of the most dramatic moments ever spent in the Senate chamber here. The vote stood 25 to 23, there being 26 votes needed to pass the measure. The price had been amended from 75 to 80 cents according to caucus agreement.

The six other bills of the Stevens Investigating Committee's programme, including seventy-five-cent gas for the City of New York for public use, the Mayor's power-generating plan, and the bill for a State Utilities Commission, with power to regulate prices for gas and electric light, were passed and go to the Governor for signature.

There will be no extra session on the question of cheap gas, Gov. Higgins issued the following statement:

"Inasmuch as all the gas bills recommended by the committee of investigation have been passed, except the Rate bill for private consumers in New York City, and owing to the fact that the Commission bill gives power to regulate the price of gas to private consumers in the City of New York, I do not feel that the situation is such as to make it necessary to call the Legislature in extraordinary session for this purpose."

Senator Brown did not answer to his name on roll call when the Consumers' Gas bill came up, for the second time, this afternoon. His failure to respond was noticed by everybody, as his vote would have passed the bill.

While the Clerk was busy over the detailed statement of the vote, Senators McCarren and Gardner walked over to Senator Brown's desk and whispered to him. They were followed by County Chairman E. R. Ford of Oneonta, the Senator's home town. Then Senator Raines went to plead with him.

The Clerk announced that all had voted except Senator Brown. Lieut. Gov. Bruce thereupon asked how the Senator from the Thirty-third wished to be recorded.

In a similar trying moment yesterday on the Niagara Power bill Senator Dresher turned white. Senator Brown flushed until his face was a sunset red.

"I vote no," he said, in a low tone. That settled the fate of cheap gas.

The first vote taken in the morning had resulted in a tie—24 to 24. Senator Raines moved a ballot to reconsider, and the leadership over Senator Brackett, Senator Brown, it is alleged, had promised Senator Stevens to support the bill. McCarren's whispered argument, at the last moment, turned him.

The record of the Senate on the other gas bills follows:

To establish a State Commission of Gas and Electricity, 28 to 20.

To fix the price of illuminating gas to the City of New York, 26 to 22.

To fix the price of electric current to the City of New York at 10 cents, except in the County of Kings, where 12 cents may be charged, 35 to 13.

To fix the price of electric current in the City of New York for light, heat, power, or other purposes to consumers other than the city at 10 cents, except in the County of Kings, where 12 may be charged, 38 to 7.

To provide for utilization by the City of New York of its water supply for the purpose of generating electric current for use of the municipality, 37 to 8.

To amend the New York charter relative to inspection of illuminating gas and meters, 33 to 3.

After appealing throughout the session for relief from lighting monopoly, ten Tammany Senators joined thirteen bolting Republicans to kill the bill which would have afforded the relief. In the ten were Senator Fitzgerald, who introduced the seventy-cent gas bill which Charles F. Murphy, Tammany leader, in several interviews requested the Legislature to pass, and Senator Foley, who introduced Mayor McClellan's seventy-five cent gas bill. The line-up follows:

Yeas—Allds, Armstrong, Brackett, Burr, Carpenter, Cooper, Cork, Dowling, Drescher, Elsberg, Fischer, Fitzgerald, Ford, Gates, Goodsell, Grady, Lewis, Malby, Marks, Page, Raines, Saxe, Sears, Tully, Warnick, White—25.

Nays—Agnew, Connolly, Cornwall, Brown, Cox, Cullen, Davis, Fechter, Fitzgerald, Foley, Gardner, Hasbrouck, Hawkins, Hinman, Keeler, Knox, L'Hommedieu, Martin, McCarren, Newburger, Nicoll, Sheehan—23.

The four Republicans who voted against the eighty cent gas bill and in favor of the State Commission bill were Brown, Davis, Fechter, and Hinman. Brackett did not vote on the State Commission bill.

It developed that his opposition was due to apprehension that the commission would be used to build up Odell's power. It is understood that hope was given that Frederick W. Fisher, might go on the commission. Brackett said of himself:

"I suppose you'll have to write me down as a weather vane. I consulted friends who I believed to be the interests of the party at heart as much as I, and yielded to their judgment."

The action of the minority is regarded as a repudiation of the Mayor, and is believed to indicate that he and Murphy are hopelessly apart on the gas question.

Some of the Mayor's friends hinted to-night at the possibility of his declining a renomination because of Murphy's failure to back him up in respect to cheaper gas.

During the debate the Republican leaders made political capital out of the attitude of the minority. Senator Malby said: "If we investigate in accomplishing nothing else by this gas investigation, we have demonstrated that there was no sincerity of purpose in any of the gas bills in years gone by championed by a member of the minority or in those they offered at this session. I would like to inquire whether Mayor McClellan has 40 champions among the minority?"

Senator Malby paused. Senator Grady broke the silence.

"One," he said.

"Two," added Marks.

"Three," said Senator Cassidy, Republican, from Chautauqua County, who voted against all the bills. His facetiousness caused laughter on the Republican side, but the Democrat deserters kept solemn countenances.

Senator Raines scored the Republicans who bolted the Republican caucus. He said:

"The gas investigation was the result of Republican caucus. This report and these bills are the result of Republican caucus. The man who votes against them is a bolter."

Before the bill fixing the price of electricity to the city was passed Senator McCarren succeeded in having it amended so as to increase the price of arc lamps in Brooklyn from $72.50 to $90. Senator

BELMONT PARK OPEN, METROPOLITAN A TIE

40,000 See Sysonby and Race King Divide the Big Purse.

COURSE A MARVEL OF BIGNESS

Mr. Belmont Watches His Blandy Win the First Race—Fickle May Fooled the Multitude.

Forty thousand people journeyed to the plains of Hempstead yesterday to see for the first time the newest and the biggest thing in the world of racing—Belmont Park, the successor and heir of beautiful Morris Park, known and loved by every man and woman to whom sport is anything more than a name or a fast horse more than the beast that draws a Tenderloin hansom. All these thousands were attracted thither, not only by the wish to participate in this splendid making event, but also by the desire to see the fourteenth running of the Metropolitan Handicap, first of the really big races of the season.

Two sensations rewarded the thousands. First, they realised for the first time the immensity of the new racing plant. Second, they saw Sysonby, Junior R. Keene's three-year-old son of Melton, run a dead heat with O. L. Richardson's four-year-old Race King, son of Tenby, one of the gamest and best-beloved horses that ever wore racing plates. Whatever the complaints of the crowds, whatever they may have thought of the unaccustomed surroundings and the running of the races the "wrong way" of the track, whatever may have been the character of the language they used about the weather and the train service, there was but one verdict regarding the Metropolitan itself. It was a horse race from the rise of the barrier to heartbreaking finish.

Half a furlong from the wire no less than five of the thirteen contenders were practically abreast, and victory seemed possible for any one of them. The Sysonby, hard ridden by Willie Shaw, who had led almost from the start, dived desperately into the depths of reserve that all good horses have for such occasions, brought up a last ounce of courage and speed and forged to the front, but Whisper bobbed the nose of his heavily weighted Race King, pulled by Tod Sloan, and drawing ever closer as the wire approached. Ten jumps from the end the pair raced as one horse. In the last jump they nodded together and the judges could not separate them. The Metropolitan of 1905 was a dead heat.

THE WEATHER GODS FALSE.

It was not a particularly good-natured multitude that saw the Metropolitan. The reason? Why, to be sure, because it was the general impression that the weather gods had bunkoed them. At the hour when, from Manhattan, New Jersey, Westchester, Brooklyn, and Long Island, the myriads were starting for Belmont Park the conditions were those of a Summer day. With the speed of a fast, furious sprint the wind hauled to the eastward, the thermometer fell an incredible number of degrees. Lo! it was March again, and an early, lionlike March at that.

Belmont Park appeared yesterday to the somewhat prejudiced observers who journeyed thither to be about the broadest race track now in use, not excepting even swept-by-ocean-breezes Brighton. The vast and beautiful grand stand was a veritable cave of the winds, and had it been movable instead of stationary the many gangways, railings, and tiers of decks would have made excusable the illusion that it was really a transatlantic liner instead of the hugest grandstand in this hemisphere. Beautiful it was and packed it was, when the races were run, to the last individual one of its 12,000 seats, but breezy? Well, ask almost any man you meet to-day who has a coat.

The very absentminded man had his troubles at the track. He started for the paddock and found himself at the field stand. He looked for the head of the shute and he saw a row of railroad trains lined up outside the track. Fortunately the band played in tune.

When he finally got his notions rearranged to suit the new conditions, the absentminded man began to find fault. This was inevitable. Doubtless the projectors of the new track expected it until the novelty wore off. He complained because the races were run "the wrong way of the track." He declared that it was merely an English affectation that had been tried and found wanting at old Monmouth, and had no justification anyhow. Then he objected strenuously to that group of trees half way up the track that veiled a good portion of the chute from sight, and for a full furlong blotted out his view of the racers entirely. Then, too, he moaned, the horses always swung wide from the rail and finished so close in that he couldn't see them.

But the objector had to admit that the clubhouse was a great institution. Placed all but directly opposite the finish of all the races, the occupants could tell to a hand's breadth the relative positions of the horses as they flashed under the wire.

BIGGEST THING IN RACING.

Great is Belmont Park, doubtless the biggest thing of its kind, and to its ungrudging patronage the thought and money—probably not far from $2,000,000—that have been expended upon it during the last two years and a half. It covers a tract a little more than a mile square, has five distinct tracks totalling about three miles and a quarter, and track centre of the ring. Only those who have been stamped upon and squeezed and bumped and hurled about in the ring at Sheepshead Bay or Gravesend on one of the big racing days can appreciate what this really means.

A fat man who had a seat in the far corner of the grandstand encountered a friend in the middle of the wide lawn that leads down to the rail. "Come up and see us," said his friend. "My wife and I have seats up there in the corner next the clubhouse."

"Not me," retorted the fat man decisively. "I was up there to see Smith before the last race and I'm only half way back now. No more for me, till they allow automobiles in here. I'm going to ask the authorities for a franchise to run a trolley line up and down the lawn. I'm going to call it 'The Field Stand and Paddock Railway Company,' and I'll give free transfers to lines connecting with the betting ring and the lunchroom."

THE AUTOMOBILE SHOW.

Possibly one of the most impressively big things about the occasion was a sight that couldn't be seen at all except from the rear of the many-tiered green and straw-colored grand stand. This was the automobile show, whose equal has seldom or never been seen hereabout. There were at least five acres of automobiles lined up in this inclosure, and if there is any kind of machine not included in the collection, it must be obsolete or as yet uninvented.

Most of them brought dwellers on Long Island, members of the society colonies located within easy running distance of the great track, Hempstead, Garden City, and so on, and their occupants soon became aware of the fact that there are May days when automobile clothes are the most comfortable and appropriate things to wear when seeing the races. Coaches there were, too, nearly a score of them, and they gayly lined the rail just below the paddock line. Most of them came early, and their occupants formed jolly little lunching parties quite as we are led to suppose they do at the English race courses, and as they certainly do on the stage.

The paddock, too, is quite in keeping with the vastness of everything else. The shed is so big and has so much roof that it is quite dark in the centre of it, and most of the trainers take their charges outside among the trees, to preserve which great care has been taken. Here they saddle their favorites for the races and give the last words to the jockeys. Here, too, throngs came yesterday just before 4 o'clock to watch the final preparations for the Metropolitan.

It was the usual sort of crowd that one sees at an American track on a big day. It may have been disappointed with itself that it did not quite swamp Belmont Park, but Belmont Park was built for the future as well as for the present and will stand quite a bit of swamping. Those who took note of the 40,000 there yesterday and observed that there was room and to spare, that the magnificent lawns were not uncomfortably packed at any time, expressed the opinion that 80,000 persons would one day see the Metropolitan run at Belmont Park and not feel overcrowded.

Up in the field stand, too, they thought that Belmont Park was big—with adjectives. If you were there yesterday you noticed it. If not, you may be interested to know that Belmont Park has an intelligence department by which the news of the results of the races is handed on up the line from the clubhouse, where the contests end and are first announced, clear up to the field stand, which is a quarter of a mile or more away. This intelligence department consists of a number of boards, worked by electricity, which will announce the winning numbers when they are hoisted in front of the clubhouse. The field stand will be much pleased when the automatic announcers begin announcing. They were not working yesterday.

HORSES WERE LATE.

It may be true, as the sociologists tell us, that the trend of population at present is toward the cities, but yesterday, from 11 o'clock until 2:30, it was distinctly toward Hempstead. All the thousands, practically, were there by the latter hour, when the first race was scheduled to be run. Then an attendant shoved the hands of the announcing diel around to 2:45 and people began to wonder. Not long after that the first race was postponed fifteen minutes more the crowd began to think that if this went on they would have to come again for the Metropolitan. The delay was caused, it appears, by the lateness of a horse train from Sheepshead Bay that had aboard it some of the day's star performers, and without which the programme could not well go on.

It was a few minutes before 3 o'clock when Wilcox, the bugler, who in his time has called millions of dollars worth of horseflesh to the starter, ascended the steps of the judges' stand and blew the post call. A moment later 40,000 necks were craned toward the paddock lane to see seven thoroughbreds file through the gate on their way to the post for the Belmont Park Inaugural. They were not the cream of the eligible racers of the country, but it is doubtful if any equine procession in the land has ever been more closely scrutinized. For, after all, it was the Belmont Inaugural, for which the racing world had been waiting two years and a half.

Lady Amelia was an overwhelming favorite, but a few persons addicted to what is technically termed the "hunch" knew better.

"Let's see," said these superstitious ones. "This is the first race ever run at Belmont Park. August Belmont has a fair colt entered by the name of Blandy, by Hastings, beloved of the Belmonts. Yes, it's good enough for me." Then, a logical rush to the betting ring.

A short wait far up the chute, a cloud of dust shot suddenly skyward, the old familiar roar now shattering the air of Hempstead Plains for the first time—"They're off!" a group of shifting, wavering quadrupeds, a confused flashing of brilliant colors, then a torrent of cheers and shouts as Blandy, coming away at the end, shot easily to the front and romped home a clever winner. Belmont Park was opened with the scarlet and maroon a winner, borne by a son sent by Hastings, the well-beloved, from the blue grass of sunny Kentucky.

BELMONT SAW HIS TRIUMPH.

Mr. Belmont, with his son, witnessed the Metropolitan from the roof of the grandstand and from that lofty vantage point his fine mare Beldame flatter him for a goodly part of the journey, only to weaken under her heavy weight at the last weary furlong. It was not a fast Metropolitan, that mile in 1:41 3-5, and horsemen were generally agreed that fields containing more class have faced the starter for this classic, but it was, in the end, a real horse race, and the names of Sysonby and Race King will go down in turf history bracketed with those of such kings of the turf as Banastar, Voter, the prince of sprinters; Gunfire, splendid among mares; Ethelbert, Filigrane, and Irish Lad, the iron hearted. None of the great handicaps has even before resulted in a dead heat, and the occurrence in any of the classics of the turf is almost so rare as to be unprecedented.

After the Metropolitan, the deluge—of humanity. To get to the waiting trains a majority of the 40,000 had to pass through a funnel, the small end of which was a subway with several exit tracks, and the funnel became clogged with people. When the trains were full the throng had to stand wherever it was when the gates closed until fresh trains could be run in. It was like the City Hall station in the rush hours, with all the features of that unpleasantness a hundredfold exaggerated. One redeeming feature there was. There was no breeze in the subway.

"I came like water and like wind I go," wrote Omar of old.

In a cloud of wind-borne dust came the thousands to Belmont Park. In a pall of soft-coal smoke they went.

HOW THE RACE WAS RUN.

It Was a Two-Horse Contest Throughout, with Both Ridden Out.

The inaugural Metropolitan Handicap on the new Belmont course was unique in its result, producing the first dead heat ever run in one of the important Spring series of handicaps. With James R. Keene's three-year-old colt Sysonby and O. L. Richard's four-year-old colt so close together that each horse was proclaimed the winner by persons inside the judges' inclosure, while the judges themselves could not separate the pair, the first running of the big event resolved itself into a two-horse contest, all the others in the race being beaten far off. Five lengths behind the horses in the dead heat, the Western mare, Colonial Girl, finished third, about a similar distance before the fourth horse, Oxford, while the others in the field straggled home in a long procession.

The contest practically was between Sysonby and Race King, through all of the last half mile of the distance, and the only question in the result from the moment the horses came into the stretch was between the two. Through the full three furlongs of the straight run home both Sysonby, which led into the stretch, and Race King, his opponent, steadily bore out from the inner rail and crossing the track in a long angle both seeking the firm and hard footing on the extreme outside. They finished locked together in a desperate struggle against the outside fence, so close under the judges that none save they could determine which was first. To the majority, however, Sysonby, which Shaw rode out with his hands, seemed to have a slight shade the better of Race King, which was ridden out by

While doubt as to the action which would be taken on the dead heat still was consuming the betting men, and the racing officials were waiting for the owners to announce whether they would run off the race or divide the stakes on the dead heat, Owner Richards took the initiative and declared himself perfectly willing to abide by the first running and accept the half victory he had already won with Race King. This wish was speedily conveyed to Messrs. Keene and Rowe, and without a moment's hesitancy they agreed, and Belmont Park's first Metropolitan Handicap became a divided race. The value of the stakes, amounting to $12,330 gross and $11,330 to the first and second horses, made the net winnings of either horse $5,665, though both are penalized for future events as winners of the value of the first money, $9,330.

Of the twelve left in the contest, Sysonby, with 107 pounds, and ridden by Shaw, and Beldame, with 122 pounds, and ridden by O'Neil, opened equal favorites at three to one, with Wotan, 98, Dolly Spanker, 114, and C. E. Rowe's entry, Colonial Girl, 11 pounds, and First Mason, 117 pounds, about equally well backed as the next horses.

From the moment that the betting began, however, there was a rush to back Sysonby, which was the general favorite among the horsemen and professional plungers, with three to one against the Keene colt being rapidly cut, until at post time he was a warm first choice at 9 to 5, while Beldame went back in the betting to 4 to 1 and better. The post betting against the others was 10 to 1 against Wotan, 12 to 1 each against Jacquin and Dolly Spanker, 15 to 1 each against the Rowe entry, Oxford, and Santa Catalina, and from 20 to 1 up to 100 to 1 against the others. Of the two horses trained by James McLaughlin, Oxford and Race King, Oxford was the trainer's choice. There was a steady support for Race King, though, and from a top price of 20 to 1 he was backed down to 20 to 1 at the post.

The race was started at the mile pole in the back stretch, and almost directly opposite the grandstand. At the post the horses lined up with Santa Catalina on the rail, Ormonde's Right next to her, and Race King, Beldame, Oxford, Kehailan, First Mason, Wotan, Colonial Girl, Dolly Spanker, and Jacquin strung out in the order named to the favorite Sysonby on the extreme outside. There was a delay of ten minutes before Starter Cassidy could bring the field to the barrier in good order, Race King, Kehailan, Sysonby, and Oxford each in turn running under the barrier in the earlier efforts to send them away, while Beldame through a good part of the wait hung in the rear and refused to join her horses.

All were together when the barrier was sprung to a fair start, but the field began to string out immediately. Race King was the first to break and showed a half length in the lead when the timing flag dropped, with Sysonby second, First Mason third, Beldame fourth, and Wotan fifth, and Ormonde's Right, Santa Catalina, and Kehailan bringing up the rear.

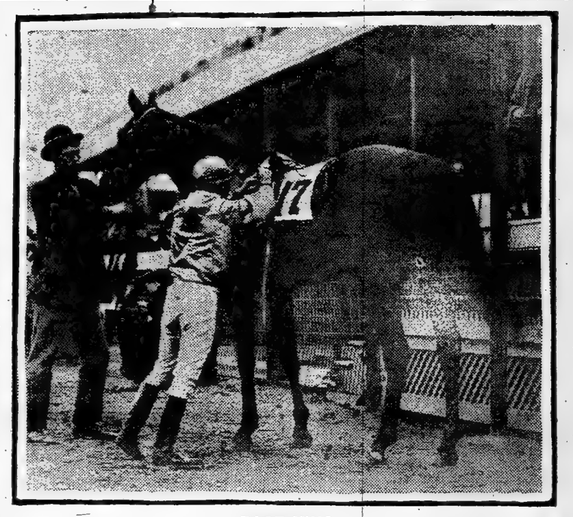
Well past the first furlong pole, Sysonby settled down to running and passed Race King, leading past the quarter by a half length. This advantage he increased to a length and a half as the field began to make the bend around the far turn, Race King still holding second place with Beldame, Oxford, Colonial Girl and Dolly Spanker following in the order named. All the others then trailed out behind and were practically out of the race.

On the turn Race King made a move after Sysonby and steadily closed the gap of a length and a half by which the three year old led at the half mile round and as steadily drew away from the second division in which Beldame already was being swallowed up. Colonial Girl, Oxford, Dolly Spanker and First Mason passed her in turn, though all these then were far behind the leader. Making the bend into the stretch for the run home Sysonby still led, but with Race King at his hips, the three year old going a bit wide as he swung into the stretch, while Race King made the most of this by making the turn close on the rail and then, as they headed for home, moving up alongside Sysonby, on which Shaw already was hard at work.

Through the entire run down the stretch Sysonby and Race King were locked, both bearing out and going diagonally from the inner rail to the outside fence. L. Smith, on Race King, began to use the whip a quarter of a mile from the winning post, while Shaw, on Sysonby, freely used his hands. Steadily Race King crept up, still bearing out and seeming to be leaning on Sysonby as they neared the finish, while Sysonby, straightened out to his last effort, then was running on the hard ground of the walking path with all the advantage of the going in his favor.

Into the last fifty yards Sysonby still had his head in front, but inch by inch Race King wore down the leader, and, getting up in the last stride, passed the winning post on even terms with him in a terrific finish, running straight and true under the whip, while Sysonby was doing his utmost under Shaw's hand riding. Five lengths away Colonial Girl was third, while four lengths further back Oxford led the remainder of the field.

The time of the race, 1:41 3-5, marked only a fair performance from a time standpoint, though horsemen considered the race a good one, as the track was soft and cuppy. The fractional time was 0:13, 0:34 3-5, 0:36 4-5, 0:49 3-5, 1:02 1-5, and 1:41 3-5. The fractions after the five-eighths were not taken, as the horses then were on the straight run home.



RACE KING.

BLANDY WINS FIRST RACE.

Juvenile Stakes Go to First Water in a Gallop.

From the opening event, in which August Belmont's three-year-old colt Blandy earned the distinction of winning the first race ever run on the new Belmont Park race course, and incidentally captured for Owner Belmont, Trainer A. J. Joyner, and Jockey W. Davis, the three silver trophies, added to the Belmont Park Inaugural, to the last event, which King Pepper won in a head finish, with Onato and Whorler, the racing was close and spirited, and the results fairly satisfactory to the betting crowd. Two post favorites were returned winners, while well-backed horses were first in most of the other races.

Second in importance to the race for the Metropolitan Handicap was the contest in the thirty-first running of the Juvenile Stakes. For this seven horses, including H. B. Duryea's McKittridge, half brother to McChesney, an added starter, ran with the unbeaten colt First Water, from Newton Bennington's stable, the favorite at odds on. The race, five furlongs down the straight course, was run with First Water in the first division from end to end, the big colt winning in a gallop, with Vendor second, and Comedienne third.

The third stake of the day was the New York Steeplechase over a two-mile course, in which nine horses ran with Thomas Hitchcock, Jr.'s, Champion jumper, Good and Plenty, favorite at a short price. Champs Elysees and Good and Plenty alternated in the lead for the first half mile. Good and Plenty then drew away up in front, and when, hustled out, from Flying Buttress, which challenged in the last half mile. After a little bumping with Good and Plenty as they turned on to the flat, he was knocked off his stride

IN THE BETTING RINGS.

More Bookmakers Than Ever Seen at an American Race Track.

More bookmakers than ever were occupied in their vocation on an American race track in the two betting rings of the Belmont Park race course yesterday, the least estimate of their number being 300. These included eighty members of the Metropolitan Turf Association, who formed in the first ring of the grand stand, while in the second line behind them were 100 non-members, or, as they are termed in ring parlance, "backliners," without counting a miscellaneous group of the lesser lights known collectively as "hurdlers." In the field stand more than a hundred other bookmakers handleed the bets of the holiday crowd which sought the cheaper inclosure.

From all accounts the betting was not excessively heavy, but a great volume of money passed through the rings, greatly to the profit of the layers, in spite of the terrific crush that is always in evidence in both inclosures. The arrangement of the betting shed in the grand stand was the nearest to perfection that has ever been devised on the metropolitan race track.

In the field stand no special provision had been made for bookmakers, and the layers accepted bets and transacted their business as best they could in a ring which they formed themselves on the lawn, or scattered about the wide stretch of ground in front of the stand.

The ruling of The Jockey Club against the operations of betting messengers or commissioners was enforced in both grand and field stands, so far as the solicitation of business by the messengers was concerned. A number of messengers found employment, however, by persons to whom they were known, their operations, however, being conducted quietly and without annoyance to the general public.

BRILLIANT THRONG TO SEE BELMONT OPENING

Society Turns Out En Masse in Gala Dress and Spirits.

WOMEN BRAVE SHARP WIND

Wraps Made Necessary by the Weather Mar the Display of Handsome Spring Toilets.

Society went en masse to Belmont Park yesterday. It crowded the commodious clubhouse and occupied a good portion of the grandstand in boxes belonging to the different members of the Turf Club. There never has been a more brilliant assemblage at any race meet. So many of the fashionables are now in the neighborhood that it seemed like a great home party.

The weather alone was a bit unkind, and was detrimental to the display of handsome gowns, which had been donned for the occasion. Owing to the sudden coming of a sharp and raw north wind wraps were everywhere in requisition, and even before the Metropolitan many women had left the boxes and verandas to take refuge in the rooms of the clubhouse. The majority of the wraps were of light material, but, notwithstanding, many of the braver remained in their places out of doors until the last race was run. Mrs. Clarence Mackay, knowing the fickleness of Long Island weather, had brought with her a large ermine cape, and she looked extremely comfortable while others were shivering.

The Aiken contingent, led by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., was in its element. Mrs. Hitchcock, as usual, was everywhere—in the clubhouse one moment, another on the grandstand, then again in the paddock, where, on account of the cold, few women ventured. However, with all the crowd, there was so much room to move around and so many places to visit that the day was passed as much in inspection as in enjoying the racing.

The betting, as far as the women were concerned, was light. There had been some enthusiasm about Tanya and Beldame, and when the first was withdrawn society bet rather heavily on the second. The victory of Blandy put everyone in a good humor and evoked the most enthusiasm.

There was no difficulty in getting money to the bookmakers, however, notwithstanding the warning about the employment of commissioners. The men willingly undertook the placing of bets, and the Hempstead Meadow set, headed by Mrs. Hitchcock and Mrs. Maxwell Stevens, went down by the paddock to reconnoitre.

From town nearly every one came in automobiles. There were comparatively few drags, and the majority of these arrived a little after 2 o'clock. The autos arrived in a continuous procession until the bugle sounded for the first race. The cars drove around by the grand stand entrance, and then into the semi-circle, depositing their passengers at the porte cochere entrance of the clubhouse and going out into a field beyond.

The drags had a long sweep of the park and passed by the club, stopping in the parking space to the left, a wide field adjacent to the track. Several of the coaching parties had arranged to have luncheon served on their coaches in the open, and the ladies in wraps and the men in overcoats partook of cold meats and drinks in the chilly atmosphere, trying to look as if they enjoyed it. One or two parties, including those on the coach of which Munson Morris was host, had luncheon served in the clubhouse, where over a hundred tables had been reserved. It had been intended to have luncheon out on the verandas on the third floor, but al fresco meals were not as comfortable as was anticipated.

Among the first arrivals were August Belmont and party and Harry Payne Whitney and party. With Mr. Belmont were Mr. and Mrs. Edmund L. Baylies and Mrs. John Mackay. In the box adjoining Mr. August Belmont were Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont and guests. These included the Earl and Countess of Suffolk, (Miss Daisy Leiter), Mrs. Charles Marshall, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Edey, Mrs. McCreery, Mr. and Mrs. Garrett Kip, P. A. B. Widener, and T. Roosevelt-Roosevelt. Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and Miss Vanderbilt were with Mr. Whitney.

In one box were Mr. and Mrs. Woodbury Kane. They were the centre of attraction, both beaming and receiving no end of congratulations on their recent wedding. Here were also Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Waterbury, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hastings, Mrs. William R. Travers, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., Mrs. Maxwell Stevenson, Miss Evelyn Parsons, Fred Beach, Mrs. Arthur Iselin, looking very pretty in her mourning; Mrs. Ernest Iselin, Mrs. Hadden, Mrs. James L. Kernochan, Mrs. Marie Eustis, Mrs. Havemeyer Tiffany, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Havemeyer, Mr. and Mrs. Van Rensselaer Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mackay, Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Peters, Miss Fellows, and Mrs. Marion Story.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mackay were in the same box, but they did not wait until the end of the meeting, leaving before the Metropolitan was run. James Henry Smith had a party in a box adjoining Mrs. Mackay. Among his guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. Rhinelander Stewart and Mrs. James A. Burden, Jr.

One of the brides of the near future, Miss Mabel Macafee, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Haggin. With their party was Lewis Butler Preston, who is to marry Miss Macafee on May 16. Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Lydig occupied one of the rear boxes in the same row with Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. R. Livingstone Beeckman, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Miller, and Mr. Bulkeley, the brother of Mrs. Prescott Lawrence.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. James W. Gerard and of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., who arrived quite early in a fast motor. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont were the guests of Col. and Mrs. William Jay. In the front row with Mr. and Mrs. Cowdin was Mme. Nordica in a wonderful creation of blue and white, which was hidden partially by a long automobile coat.

From Philadelphia came Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Widener, Mr. and Mrs. E. Moore Robinson, and Mr. and Mrs. Van Rensselaer. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet sat with the Wideners in their box, Mrs. Goelet being in black, with a great hat trimmed with ostrich plumes.

The Hon. Hugo Baring and Lady Baring were also among the guests in one of the boxes. Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Lorillard had a party from Tuxedo. Miss Kane, Miss Kent and Mr. and Mrs. James Brown Potter also represented Tuxedo. T. Suffern Tailer was with the Tuxedo colony. From Staten Island, were Mr. and Mrs. Alexandre.

No familiar faces seen at the different race meetings were missing in the throng. Oliver H. P. Belmont was arrayed in a hunting suit of grey checks, with top boots, a green Alpine hat and a bright green tie. Although recent mandate from England proclaims green to be the vogue in men's clothing this Summer, this was the only evidence of that shade on the grandstand. E. Berry Wall made his usual appearance in wonderful checks of black and grey, a vivid waistcoat, a derby hat of a peculiar shape and a bright white and blue Ascot, fastened with a tie pin composed of a large turquoise.

Richard Harding Davis represented literature in dark-blue serge and yellow gloves, with an opera glass in a case swung across his shoulders. P. F. Collier was early on hand, greeting everybody, and Bourke Cockran, in a grey and black check suit, was an imposing figure on the second veranda. In fact, during the first race, he got upon a table in order to see the track at a better advantage, and was the subject of many jests in consequence as to his theatric poses.

Abe Hummel was in the throng, as usual, and "Jack" Follansbee, Sidney Paget, Appleton Smith, Hamilton Cary, Robert Gerry, Leonard Jacob, Cornelius Vellowes, Frank Sturgis, Foxhall Keene, the Waterbury brothers, and James R. Keene.

The large lawn outside of the clubhouse was well filled with spectators, notwithstanding the weather. The tendency was to be moving around, and greeting friends recalled the Horse Show. There was general visiting from box to box. Congratulations were showered on August Belmont and Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont. They were the centre of a great crowd during the entire day.

The first coaching party to arrive was that of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. V. Hoffman. With them was Mrs. Barger-Wallach, in rose color and a great hat of the same shade; Miss Marion Stoddard in blue, Mrs. Linley Hoffman Chapin in gray, Frederick S. Young and Cecil Landale. In the party of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Gould were Gen. and Mrs. Henry L. Burnett. Ledyard Blair drove the Defiance from the Metropolitan Club. Among his guests were Mr. and Mrs. F. T. H. Talmage, Mr. and Mrs. Junius Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. McLane Van Ingen, Miss Knowlton, William Williams, and William Maurice.

Stuart Duncan drove from his residence. Among his guests were Mrs. Duncan, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Pope, Miss Louise Herrick, and Franklin J. Plummer. T. Towar Bates had the squadron coach, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Baudouine drove down a party of friends in their drag. The Venture was one of the last coaches to arrive. The whip was Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, while Munson Morris was his host. Among the guests were Mrs. Lanfear Norrie, Mrs. James P. Kernochan, Mrs. Prentice, Mrs. Thompson, Miss Ethel F. Cryder, Miss Natica Rives, and Messrs. Kernochan, Barclay, Gray, and Brown.

Among the automobile parties were Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Carmen, Commodore and Mrs. Bourne, Judge and Mrs. Truax, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mackay, Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. James Speyer, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Bradford, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Siegel, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Gerard, Mr. and Mrs. Fellowes, Mr. and Mrs. Rose, and Mr. and Mrs. Waterbury.

MACKAY DANCE FOR BELMONT.

Entertainments at Harbor Hill After the Races.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mackay gave a dance last night at Harbor Hill, preceded by a dinner, in honor of August Belmont, their guests including most of the Long Island colony near Harbor Hill and the guests of the latter over the opening day of Belmont Park.

Harbor Hill is so handsome in its everyday dress that comparatively little floral decoration was used. The dinner, in the large dining room, was one of thirty-two covers, after which the guests from other country houses came in for the dance, which took place in the immense entrance hall of the main floor. Sherry's band, stationed in the balcony overlooking this hall, furnished the music. There was a cotillion, led by Mrs. Mackay and August Belmont, the guest of honor, for which the favors were ribbon scarfs for the women and rosettes for the men in the racing colors of the guests. An elaborate supper was served.

The dinner guests were Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman, the Princess Stigliano Colonna, Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney, Mr. and Mrs. Livingston Beeckman, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Randolph, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. W. IN AND ABOUT THE PADDOCK.

Besides all the innovations with which Belmont Park starts its career a new one will probably be added as the result of the first race yesterday, the Inaugural. This race was run out of the seven furlong straightaway chute, heretofore known at all tracks by no more distinctive a name. In the paddock yesterday some one suggested that the chute be named after the owner of the Inaugural winner. As it happened, the winner was Blandy, and Blandy's owner is August Belmont.

Now Mr. Belmont already has the track named after him, and Blandy's victory, besides, brought him three silver cups. Obviously it would not do to call the chute the Belmont chute. When the matter was brought to Mr. Belmont's attention he said that he hadn't heard that the chute was to be named at all. "But," he added, "that's an excellent suggestion. Why not Blandy Chute? That would be fine, wouldn't it?"

Blandy Chute it probably will be, as the matter afterward was favorably discussed in the clubhouse.

When the train crowds first began to arrived, before 1 o'clock, and every train was crowded to the suffocation limit, it was the track and the new things about it that demanded all attention. Weights, ages, jockeys, and past performances were temporarily forgotten. Fine, great, grand, very superior, wonderful, magnificent, marvelous, were the adjectives that poured out, according to the racegoer's cast of mind as the vast track, with its six courses, great lawns and enormous stands overwhelmed his eye. Few sat down until they had made at least a partial exploration of their surroundings.

As soon, however, as the normal mind began to assert itself the critical found flaws in the arrangements. Getting into the grandstand inclosure, many naturally began to look for the paddock. Turning, also naturally, as in all the nearby tracks, to the right they walked, for the new park is one of magnificent distances, until they came not to the paddock but to the field, which in all other tracks is to the left. That made confusion, and the "pikers" were equally mixed up when they looked for the field. Everything was on the wrong side, and everybody was mixed up. When the first race was called and the horses started from the right and ran to the left the chronic racegoers threw up their hands in despair.

The management explains the reversal of the direction of the running by saying that the resulting courses fulfill racing requirements as to the direction of the sun's rays. Besides the English turn permits at Belmont Park more advantageous location of the buildings. There is no doubt that the arrangement affords the occupants of the clubhouse a splendid view of the finish. The field, moreover, took a decided dislike to a big tree at the rail, very picturesque as a truce, but effectually hiding about a furlong of the stretch.

Of course the high wind and the cool air tended to make all observers hypercritical. Even the sight of Capt. Woodbury Kane, who wore a nice new flat-brimmed straw hat, and who had his bride with him, caused only a temporary wave of good humor.

In a group on the clubhouse lawn were Commodore Frederick G. Bourne, Secretary George Cormack, and a number of members of the New York Yacht Club. When the Metropolitan was started the wind was at its highest and the horses had to run right into it going up the back stretch.

"That's pretty tough on some of them," said a yachtsman, "why don't they run 'em four furlongs to windward and return."

The "financial concourse" is what the publicity agents of the Belmont Park call the betting ring. It is a dignified rotunda, which for its appearance really deserves something better than "ring," but the financial operations conducted are strikingly similar to methods on other race tracks. The bookmakers were arranged in two semicircles, the members of the Metropolitan Turf Association having the superior location of the inside ring.

The bars were up officially on women bettors, who were obliged to confide their sure things and their money to husbands, brothers, and escorts. Nevertheless, many women journeyed to the track without such impediment and had no trouble in finding professional escorts who obligingly placed their money, for a commission.

It must have been an easy day at the District Attorney's office yesterday, for three of Mr. Jerome's staff, Assistant District Attorneys Lord, Kernochan, and Corrigan, watched the third race from the club lawn, all standing on one bench.

The Belmont gold plate, valued at $1,000, which with other rewards of speed and endurance will go to the winner of the thirty-ninth Belmont, to be run on May 24, was on exhibition during the early races on the lawn in front of the grandstand. The rich plate was in a silk-lined plush case and was guarded by a special policeman.

PAST METROPOLITANS.

Winners of the Oldest of the Great Spring Handicaps.

The Metropolitan Handicap, in name, and it may be said in fact, too, as the race has existed as a handicap since 1880, is the oldest of the great Spring handicaps for horses three years old and upward run in the East, the original of the race having been run first as the Great Metropolitan, four years before the Suburban Handicap was instituted. The fixture in the running this year has been continued through the existence of two great and famous race courses, and transferred for the year 1905 to the newest and greatest race course in the world, the history of the race going back to the best days of old Jerome Park, through the fifteen years that Morris Park was a race course, and finding a new home at Belmont Park—a more important and more popular turf fixture than it ever was before.

As a mile handicap the record of the race is as follows:

Year.	Winner.	Age.	We't.	Start-ers.	Time.	Value.
1897—	Voter	3	99	10	1:40	$4,280
1898—	Bowling Brook	3	102	8	1:44¾	4,280
1899—	Fillgrane	3	102	14	1:39¼	6,750

Steinway Tunnel Enabling Act.

ALBANY, May 4.—The Senate to-night passed a bill of Senator Raines's which Mr. Marks declared would permit the use of the Steinway tunnel route between New York and Brooklyn without getting a franchise. Senator Malby, however, halted the measure with a motion to reconsider the vote. Consequently the bill retards the time for the meeting [illegible] railroads.

PHILADELPHIA'S GAS FIGHT.

Opposition to Deal with the United Company Brings Results.

PHILADELPHIA, May 4.—The strong opposition to the leasing of the city gas plant to the United Gas Improvement Company has caused a halt in the proceedings for at least ten days.

Both chambers of City Councils to-day adopted a resolution directing the Committee on Finance of Councils to advertise in all the daily papers of Philadelphia that bids for leasing the gas works will be received until Monday, May 15, each bid to be accompanied by a certified check for $250,000.

Mayor Weaver to-day sent a special message to Councils on the subect of the gas lease. In it he says it would be most improvident to pass the proposed ordinance extending the lease seventy-five years for $25,000,000.

Thomas Dolan, President of the United Gas Improvement Company, to-day denied the allegation in the affidavit read by Robert Dornan in the Academy of Music yesterday that the Ridgway Syndicate was bribed to withdraw the offer it made to the city in 1897 when the lease to the United Gas Improvement Company was under consideration. William F. Harrity and other ex-members of the syndicate also denied Mr. Dornan's charge.

HERRICK ON BAD GOVERNMENT

Remedy with People, Who Should Hold Unfaithful Officers to Account.

The Brooklyn Democratic Club met last night in a commerative celebration of the life and public services of Horatio Seymour. D Cady Herrick was the principal speaker. After declaring that President Roosevelt, ex-President Cleveland, and William Jennings Bryan were the greatest figures in public life to-day, because of the insistence of their personality, Mr. Herrick said that the Democratic Party to succeed must have convictions and the courage of these convictions.

"There is no doubt," he said, "that those who own public corporations are by debauchery and the debasing of public officials doing more to create a sentiment in favor of public ownership than all the propaganda of newspapers, orators, and teachers. It is said that instead of the Government controlling great corporations and the users of the so-called public utilities, the latter control the Government. This is a grave charge against our form of government, and if it is true then the government of the country by the people is a failure. But I do not believe it is true.

"If the people cannot select agents who are above corruption, who are moved by patriotic motives and devoted to public duty, instead of being controlled by avarice and greed, why, then, government by the people is a failure. The remedy for inefficient Governmental control is in the hands of the people. They should hold public officers to strict accountability, and if they are unfaithful to the trust confided in them, see to it that they never again occupy a position of trust and confidence."

Mr. Herrick said that he himself had tried to have the Legislature adopt a law in this State that would do away with the corruption of candidates and voters and the menace to citizenship. The proposed law, he said, had been defeated by trickery.

Other speakers were Mayor Thomas M. Osborne of Albany and Edward M. Shepard. Daniel Moynahan was the toastmaster.

ALUMNI LOYAL TO TECH.

Strong Protest Against Institute Being Merged with Harvard.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 4.—Alumni of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology crowded Huntington Hall to-night to discuss the proposed merger of the institute with Harvard University, as to the wisdom of which the Faculty and Executive Committee of the institute are equally divided. The discussion developed an overwhelming sentiment against the merger, although no vote was taken.

The plan was advocated by President Pritchett, Eben S. Draper of Hopedale, and J. R. Freeman. The speakers in opposition were Thomas L. Livermore, Dean A. E. Burton, and J. S. Munroe.

Enjoins "The Prince Consort."

Judge Lacombe in the United States Circuit Court yesterday granted a temporary injunction restraining Theodore A. Liebler and others from presenting the play "The Prince Consort," in which Miss Ellis Jeffreys, the English actress, recently appeared in this city. The injunction was obtained by former Judge Dittenhoefer, representing George Edwardes, a London manager, and William Boosey, an English playwright. Breach of contract is alleged.

GRAPE-NUTS.

REASONED IT OUT

And Found a Change in Food Put Him Right.

A man does not count as wasted the time he spends in thinking over his business, but he seems loth to give the same sort of careful attention to himself and to his health.

And yet his business would be worth little without good health to care for it. A business man tells how he did himself good by carefully thinking over his physical condition, investigating to find out what was needed, and then changing to the right food.

"For some years I had been bothered a great deal after meals. My food seemed to lay like lead in my stomach, producing heaviness and dullness and sometimes positive pain. Of course, this rendered me more or less unfit for business, and I made up my mind that something would have to be done.

"Reflection led me to the conclusion that overeating, filling the stomach with indigestible food, was responsible for many of the ills that human flesh endures, and that I was punishing myself in that way—that was what was making me so dull, heavy, and uncomfortable, and unfit for business after meals. I concluded to try Grape-Nuts food to see what it could do for me.

"I have been using it for some months now, and am glad to say that it has given me entire relief. I do not suffer any longer after meals; my food seems to assimilate easily and perfectly, and to do the work for which it was intended. I have regained my normal weight, and find that business is a pleasure once more—can take more interest in it, and my mind is clearer and more alert".

COSSACK ATROCITIES IN POLAND UNCHECKED

Ten-Year-Old Boy Slashed from Shoulder to Waist.

SEVEN SLAIN OUTSIDE CHURCH

Day of Mourning in Warsaw for Monday's Victims—Crowds Dispersed by Troops with Whips.

WARSAW, May 4.—Great popular unrest continues, and it is being increased by the wanton cruelty of the soldiers.

For instance, this afternoon a ten-year-old boy jeered at a Cossack, who pursued him and cut him from the shoulder to the waist with one blow of his sabre.

The Social Democrats appear to be determined to enforce their manifesto proclaiming a general strike.

The observation of to-day, as a day of mourning for the victims of Monday, was general. No newspapers appeared this morning, and practically all business and street traffic ceased at noon.

The offices and stores were closed. Some of the houses were barricaded. A few merchants who tried to keep open were visited by pickets of workmen, who ordered them to shut their places of business immediately.

Nearly all the street cars stopped running, and the cab service was entirely suspended. Many cabs earlier in the day were stopped by parties of youths, who compelled their occupants to alight, in some instances forcibly throwing them out of the vehicles, and then ordered the drivers to go home.

With the exception of a few minor disturbances, however, the day passed quietly. Crowds which gathered here and there were quickly dispersed by troops armed with whips, and several persons were seriously injured with the whips.

Immense crowds to-day went to Brudno Cemetery, where Monday's victims are buried.

Crowds continue to gather around Jesus Hospital, in Jerusalem Street, where eleven persons have died as the result of injuries received in the May Day disturbances. The people wish to prevent secret burials by the police. A strong force of police maintains order.

LODZ, May 4.—A terrible riot occurred at the Church of the Holy Cross yesterday evening.

When a number of Roman Catholics around the edifice began singing revolutionary songs a Cossack patrol came up at a gallop and began firing into a crowd of people huddled on the church steps. Some of the bullets entered the sacred edifice, striking the altar. Seven persons were killed.

A panic inside the church followed, and many people were injured in the rush for the doors.

After the crowds had dispersed workmen fell upon a member of the Secret Police who was found alone in the streets and he was nearly beaten to death before he was rescued.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 4.—The papers this morning protest against the action of the censor in not permitting the publication of accounts of the rioting in Poland.

All the special dispatches on the subject were suppressed, and by order of the censor each paper printed, under a Warsaw date, a telegram saying that not the slightest disturbance occurred there on Easter Monday.

JEWISH SHOPS SACKED.

Anti-Semitic Excesses in Crimea—Number of Killed Unknown.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 4.—The anti-Semitic disorders in the Crimea were on a larger scale than the first reports indicated.

At Melitopol the people attacked the Jews and fought a regular battle with stones and revolvers. The few police and the thirty soldiers in the town were powerless.

When the Jews fled defeated the Christians, from noon until midnight, held a carnival of pillage and plunder. Every Jewish shop except two jewelry stores was sacked, the crowd only desisting when exhausted. The arrival of M. Trepoff, Governor General of Taurida Province, on the following day restored order.

The number of killed or wounded is not given either from Melitopol or Simpheropol. At the latter place rioting against the Jews began as the result of the circulation of a story that a Jewish huckster had insulted a sacred ikon.

SIMPHEROPOL, May 4.—There was a succession of riots and disorders this evening which were quelled by a squadron of cavalry, who made free use of the flats of their sabres and whips.

There were also spirited conflicts between Russians and Jews. The latter, who are in a defiant mood, several times attacked cavalry patrols, thrusting scantlings between the horses' legs and dismounting the riders.

PRIVATE MILITIA IN RUSSIA.

Sugar Refiner Gets Permission to Protect His Property.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 4.—The Government has granted permission to M. Tereschtenko, a rich sugar refiner of Kieff, whose property was greatly damaged by rioters in March, to organize a militia company of one hundred and fifty men to protect his factories and other property.

This is the first time that the organization of a private militia force has been authorized in Russia.

MAKE BOMBS LIKE ORANGES.

Terrorists' Ingenuity Leads to Russian Customs Order.

NOVOROSSIYSK, Caucasus, May 4.—The Chief of the Customs Department has issued strict orders that cases of fruit are not to enter Russia without rigid examination.

The orders are due to the knowledge that the revolutionists are importing hand bombs of the form and appearance of oranges.

RIDICULE LINEVITCH'S REPORT.

Japanese Say the Russians Quickly Retired from Tung-hu-Siang.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

TOKIO, May 4.—The Japanese ridicule Gen. Linevitch's report of the expulsion of the Japanese from five positions and the occupation of Tung-hu-Siang by the Russians on April 29.

The facts are that the Russians effected an entry into one quarter of the town, but quickly retired on the approach of the Japanese, who hold the place in considerable

ROJESTVENSKY'S SHIPS DAMAGED BY TYPHOON

Lighter Vessels Are Reported to Have Been Scattered.

NEBOGATOFF IN CHINA SEA

Passed Singapore This Morning—Two Transports Have Put Into Port with Their Bows Stove In.

AMOY, China, May 4.—A typhoon which swept over the coast of South China this week is said to have damaged the Russian Second Pacific Squadron considerably.

The lighter vessels are reported to have been scattered.

Shipping men expect further delay in the execution of Admiral Rojestvensky's plans as a result of the damage sustained by the squadron.

SINGAPORE, Friday, May 5.—Admiral Nebogatoff's squadron passed Singapore in semi-darkness and haze at 5:30 o'clock this morning. Six warships and four colliers were sighted.

The British steamer Selangor, which arrived here yesterday, reported that she passed Admiral Nebogatoff's squadron off Jugrah, midway between Penang and Singapore, at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. When seen by the Selangor the division consisted of four battleships, two cruisers, four colliers, and a hospital ship.

LONDON, Friday, May 5.—A dispatch received here yesterday said that two of Admiral Nebogatoff's transports had put into Sabong, on the north coast of Sumatra, with their bows stove in, evidently having been in collision. Their names were given as the Mariechen and the Hermine Hessenmuller.

The identification of the warships sighted in the Straits of Malacca yesterday as Admiral Nebogatoff's squadron is considered likely to develop an interesting situation.

Jugrah, off which town the division was first seen, is in the State of Selangor, which is a British protectorate, and is not far distant from the point where a Russian division was sighted as long ago as April 27.

A brief telegram from Singapore is taken to indicate that for a week the Russians have practically been enjoying the hospitality of the waters of Japan's ally in the same manner that Admiral Rojestvensky's ships have utilized the French waters of Cochin-China.

NUCLEUS FOR CZAR'S NEW NAVY.

Report That South American Warships Will Be Taken to Baltic.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 4.—The sensational report that Russia has acquired the navies of Chile and Argentina continues to meet with official denial, but from private sources I learn that several transports are leaving Sebastopol for the same destination as the mysterious vessels from Kronstadt.

There is an intimation from a diplomatic source that the warships will be brought to the Baltic to serve as the nucleus of a new navy in case Admiral Rojestvensky's fleet comes to grief.

It is more than doubtful if the Russian Government would venture such a flagrant violation of neutrality as the purchase of South American warships unless on the condition that delivery be delayed till the conclusion of peace. In that case the purchase may be regarded as merely a precautionary measure to prevent the vessels from falling into the hands of Japan.

Apart from a wild report that Rojestvensky has reached Vladivostok the telegrams from Manchuria contain nothing of importance.

ODESSA FEARS BREAD FAMINE.

Bakers on Strike—Pedestrian Carrying a Bomb Arrested.

ODESSA, May 4.—The bakers here are on strike. The city faces the possibility of a bread famine.

A man carrying a bomb was arrested on the streets here to-day. Experts later exploded the bomb in the centre of a large field in the presence of officials and many fashionable people.

A secret store of firearms has been found.

NEW FRANCO-JAPANESE CRISIS

Situation More Acute Than Before—Representations Made.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

TOKIO, May 4.—A strong recrudescence of excitement in Japan has been caused by Admiral Rojestvensky's apparently reckless abuse of French neutrality. The situation is now more acute, because France's declarations concerning Kamranh Bay render her present indifference doubly incomprehensible.

Leading journals regard Rojestvensky's expulsion from Kamranh Bay as a mere farce, in view of the facilities granted to him elsewhere. It is argued that if France pleads ignorance of the doings of the Russians she virtually admits her incompetence to discharge the functions of sovereignty, since Rojestvensky is using not one French port only but the whole coast of Indo-China as a naval base.

The time has come, it is urged, when the imperative duty of self-defense compels Japan to act resolutely. It is impossible to suppose that the Saigon authorities are ignorant of Rojestvensky's presence in Hongohe Bay, (north of Kamranh Bay,) whence his cruisers are issuing and interfering with neutral commerce.

By The Associated Press.

The Prettiest Taffeta Dresses Shown This Season

THE PICTURE does scant justice to these beautiful dresses. First, because the light and shadow of the accordion-plaiting is impossible of reproduction, but it serves to show the general outlines of the dress, which is made over a model of our own selection, of soft, lustrous chiffon taffeta silk, in a variety of colors.

The skirt is made with the shirred yoke effect, below which it is beautifully accordion-plaited, and finished with a single plaited flounce at the bottom. The dress has a full plaited blouse waist, with yoke of lace, effectively trimmed with short straps. The sleeves are short, finished with ruffles of silk and lace. The price is as remarkable as the dresses are beautiful—$23.50.

We are showing very handsome Long Coat Suits of light gray homespuns and blue serges, at $15. The coats are in the stylish length, 42 inches. The homespun suits are finished with collar and cuffs of linen, and the serge suits have collar and cuffs of pique. The coats are fly-front, loose or semi-fitting back, skeleton-lined; the seams are neatly piped; the skirts are in the very latest style, full plaited.

We still have quite an attractive collection of the Silk Shirt-Waist Suits which made such a stir yesterday. Our purchase included more than five hundred of these dresses, and that is why there is still good selection today. It is one of the most remarkable offerings we have ever made. Dresses made to sell for $20 to $35, now at $14.50 each. Of course, they are likely to be sold out early today.

There is also still good variety among the Covert Cloth Jackets at $8. And a very attractive collection of Women's Separate Skirts, of handsome mixtures, at $4 each.

Second floor, Broadway.

AGAINST ALEXANDER

Hyde and McIntyre Write, Refusing to Accept His Resignation.

EARLY HENDRICKS REPORT

He Tells Outside State Superintendents So When They Question Him About Equitable Matter.

The letter of President James W. Alexander of the Equitable Life resigning as a trustee of the stock belonging to the estate of Henry B. Hyde, which was given out for publication in yesterday morning's papers, brought from James H. Hyde and William H. McIntyre a reply containing the declaration that not only would they not accept the resignation of the Equitable's President as a co-trustee, but would proceed against him in the courts for breach of his trust.

At the Hoffman House yesterday the Executive Committee of the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners had a session with Superintendent Hendricks and officials of the New York State Department. The Superintendents told just what they expected from the investigation of the Equitable by the New York Department. The result was that Mr. Hendricks promised to report on the charges of mismanagement not later than June 15, although he said that his full report on the assets of the society would not be in readiness for five months.

LETTER TO ALEXANDER.

The letter of Mr. Hyde and Mr. McIntyre to President Alexander is as follows:

"Dear Sir: We received your letter of May 3, 1905, which had been given to the newspapers before being mailed to us and had already been published before its receipt by us, in which you tender your resignation as a trustee under the agreement with Henry B. Hyde, dated Sept. 15, 1895.

"As you already knew that suit was about to be brought against you to remove you as a trustee, on the charge that you betrayed your trust and conspired to destroy the estate intrusted to your care, your attempted resignation in the face of these charges is virtually a confession that you have been an unfaithful trustee.

"It is solely by virtue of the trust stock held under this agreement and its control in the election of Directors that you secured and have continued to hold your position as a Director and President of the society. Your present attitude in seeking to destroy the value of that stock and at the same time escape responsibility for doing so while continuing to enjoy the fruits of the trust is an anomalous position and one that cannot be permitted to continue.

"Now that you have caused yourself to be elected a Director and President of the society by the vote of the stock of which you are a trustee your voluntary resignation of the trust is especially inadmissible in view of your announced intention not to relinquish the offices which you owe to the trust stock.

"Your references to the provisions of the trust deed under which you are acting are disingenuously incomplete.

"Ever since Mr. James Hazen Hyde became twenty-five years of age the number of the trustees has by the terms of the deed been reduced to three, of whom you are one. The only provision we find in that deed for your resignation as a trustee is in Paragraph X., as follows:

> In case of the death or resignation of the above-named James W. Alexander, if his son, Henry Martyn Alexander, Jr., be living, the said Henry Martyn Alexander, Jr., shall immediately thereupon become a Trustee hereunder, with all the powers and duties in all respects as though he had been named herein as one of the parties hereto of the second part and had executed this indenture.

"There is, however, a controlling reason for refusing to accept your resignation at this time after you have inflicted upon the property of which you are trustee all the injury it is in your power to inflict.

"The right to resign the trust is not expressly reserved by the trust deed. If fairly to be implied, it is a right reserved to a loyal trustee who for legitimate reasons sufficient to himself desires to be relieved from his trust. It is not intended as a shield against the exposure and punishment of a recreant trustee.

INTEND TO SUE.

"It is, as you know and have known for some time past, our intention and that of the beneficiaries of the trust to proceed against you in the courts for your removal, on grounds with which you are now and have been for a long time quite familiar. In that proceeding we shall ask that you be required to account for the administration of your trust and that you be held responsible for the injury you have inflicted upon the trust estate.

"For these reasons we must refuse to accept your resignation. Yours truly,

"JAMES HAZEN HYDE,
"WILLIAM H. McINTYRE."

Almost everybody connected with the Equitable affair started talking as soon as President Alexander's letter of resignation became known. It was received by Mr. Hyde at his office at noon. Before its receipt, however, somebody called the attention of several reporters to this clause in the deed of trust:

> (10) In case of the death or resignation of the above-named James W. Alexander, if his son, Henry Martyn Alexander, Jr., be living, the said Henry Martyn Alexander, Jr., shall immediately become a Trustee hereunder, with all the powers and duties in all respects as though he had been named herein as one of the parties hereto of the second part and had executed the indenture.

H. M. ALEXANDER SPEAKS.

Emphasis was laid upon the fact that, under this clause, as soon as James W. Alexander resigned his son succeeded to his place. As soon as the afternoon papers appeared with the publication Henry M. Alexander gave out an interview with a copy of a letter which he had sent to Messrs. Hyde and McIntyre at the same time that his father's letter of resignation was mailed. Mr. Alexander said:

"I have seen the statement in an evening paper to the effect that I will succeed Mr. James W. Alexander as a trustee of the majority stock of the Equitable Life Assurance Society. This statement, manifestly inspired, looks to me very much like a conscious misrepresentation of the facts. As soon as I was informed yesterday by Mr. James W. Alexander of his intention to resign his position as a trustee of the majority stock I sent a letter to Mr. Hyde and Mr. McIntyre, who are the present trustees under the agreement, as follows:

"'Dear Sirs—I have been informed by Mr. James W. Alexander of his resignation under date of May 3, 1905, as one of the trustees under the agreement of Sept. 17, 1895, between the late Henry B. Hyde, party of the first part, and Messrs. Louis Fitzgerald and others (originally named as trustees therein and of whom I understand you are the present successors), parties of the second part.

"'Referring to paragraph tenth of said agreement I beg to say that it is not my intention to assume the relations of a trustee under said agreement, and therefore ask that you will consider this letter a formal declination and renunciation of my appointment as provided therein. Yours very truly,

"'HENRY M. ALEXANDER.

"'New York, May 3.'"

"This letter must have been received almost at the exact time the resignation of Mr. James W. Alexander was received, and I cannot understand the motives that could inspire anyone to circulate the impression that the facts are other than as here stated.

"The charge against Mr. James W. Alexander, that he had violated his duty as a trustee, was from its first conception a false and rickety thing and it is not surprising to see its final throes accompanied by one last desperate attempt to mislead."

The interview with Mr. Alexander brought the following reply from the Hyde side:

"The persistent practice of writing dummy letters is responsible for Mr. Henry M. Alexander's interview."

IS DR. OSLER'S ADVICE

Universities Should Give Them More Time to Think, He Says.

McGILL'S FAREWELL TO HIM

Can't Have Universities Without Leisure Class Within, He Declares—Tells Canadians to Stay at Home.

"Don't work your professors so hard, but give them a little more chance to think," was the advice of Dr. William Osler to American universities in his speech as guest of honor at the tenth annual dinner of the New York Graduates' Society of McGill University last evening at the Hotel Imperial.

Dr. Osler, who in a few days will leave this country to become Regius Professor of Medicine at Oxford University, is himself a Canadian by birth and a graduate from the Medical School of McGill University at Montreal. The most significant part of his response to the toast drunk in his honor grew out of the remark that although McGill has grown to a first-class college, it is not a university.

"The difference between a college and a university," he went on to say, "is that between a youth and a man. Much money is needed to establish a college on a university basis, I admit, but also some other things the need of which is not so generally recognized here. To produce a great university you must have a sort of leisure class within the institution. A man who works six or eight or ten hours a day teaching and lecturing can do no great amount of original thinking. Why, much of the best and most important and most helpful university work is done by those who are often called 'university loafers'; by men who but seldom meet the students, and who are little known by them. By men, in fact, who might often just as well not come in contact with the student body at all.

"Let me give you an instance. There is my dear colleague, Prof. Roland, at Johns Hopkins University. I think he would run away from an audience, if he were threatened with one. He cannot be dragged into a lecture room. But see him in his laboratory, at work among a class of higher students. Why, his very presence is an inspiration. And the result is not a mere repetition of already existing knowledge, but a striking out into new paths, an acquisition of new knowledge to be added to the old store. And what we want most of all in our universities is not men to teach, but men to think. You cannot think well and teach hard at the same time.

WORK PROFESSORS TOO HARD.

"It would be good, indeed, if our American universities followed the example set by such institutions in Germany and in England by not working their professors quite so hard, and instead giving them a little more time to think."

Speaking of the old Montreal General Hospital, which is the clinical institute attached to the McGill University and the place where Dr. Osler learned diagnosis, he said:

"Dirty and full of dust as the old place is, and as you all know it, it has done great things for many of us. I would not be what I am to-day but for that old building. For it is not brick and mortar that does it, no matter how beautiful they may be fitted together. But give a man an opportunity and a place where he can perform the work of his choice, and that is all he needs and cares for. Much of the world's best work has been done in surroundings not better than those we had up there."

Turning to his hearers as Canadians as well as McGill men, he asked what use there could be in talking about an American annexation of Canada, seeing how much of what is good here in America is being annexed by the Dominion.

"But there is one thing I must say to you in connection with this," he resumed. "I really think it a great shame that so many of you have crossed the border. Of the reasons for your coming here I don't care to speak in the presence of"—turning to the Right Rev. Frederick Courtney, former Bishop of Nova Scotia, and now rector of St. James's Church in this city—"this man of the Church. But I recall what one young Canadian told me in reply to my asking for the cause of his immigration to the United States: 'Cherches la femme,' he said. Seriously speaking, I do wish that a greater number of you would stay at home. And, in particular, I must urge you not to bring the Canadian girls here. Why, recently I was visited by a friend of mine from up there who looked in anything but good shape. Probing his troubles, I concluded that the best thing for him would be to marry and get a home of his own.

"'Why, man,' he cried, 'I want nothing better, but how can I do it. There is not a single marriageable girl in my township. They are all here! And that's why I have come here to look for them.'"

Dr. Osler was introduced by Dr. H. N. Vineberg, President of the society, who acted as toastmaster. His speech was followed by addresses by the Rev. Dr. Francis L. Patton, President of the Princeton Theological Seminary; the Right Rev. Frederick Courtney, and Dr. R. Tait McKenzie of the University of Pennsylvania. Among the guests present were the Rev. Arthur Judge, President of the British Schools and Universities Club; Wallace Downey, President of the Canadian Society of New York; Dr. Greenbaum, Prof. J. C. Braun of Vassar College, Dr. Rankin of the Queen's University (Kingston, Ontario) Graduate Society; Robert Henderson of the Toronto University Club, Dr. Wolfred Nelson, and John Brisben Walker.

VERSES TO THE GUEST.

A feature of the dinner which caused as much enthusiasm as the old college yell itself was the singing by a number of younger alumni of the following paraphrase of a familiar college glee, made in honor of the guest of the evening:

Oh, Willie, is it you, dear,
Safe, safe from home,
With friends of Alma Mater
Before you cross the foam?
We heard you Tuesday night, Will,
It made our heart rejoice,
We loved the welcome tones, boy,
Of your once familiar voice.
'Twas much in our ear
In the Waldorf's gilded room,
Oh, Willie, we have missed you,
Welcome, welcome home!

We've longed to see you nightly,
But this night of all
Our hopes were burning brightly
That you'd attend our call.
We'll not talk Dinosauri,
Therapeutics dry as bone,
And the festive Plesiosaurus
We'll severely leave alone,
Comparative anatomy nor
The deadly microbes' doom,
For—Willie, we have missed you,
Welcome, welcome home!

At Duty's call you leave us,
To be an Oxford don;
'Tis honor to us all, Will
To see our boy "get on."
No maiden is more modest,
And we love you for that, too,
Knowing all our great achievements
And your heart so stanch and true.
But we know you'll fight for right there,
So, when the time shall come,
Though, Willie, we shall miss you,
We'll welcome you home!

The McGill colors, scarlet, and white, predominated in the decorative arrangement of the banquet hall. On the wall back of the guest table were draped the Stars and Stripes, the union jack, and the Canadian ensign.

SPEAKERS PRAISE AUDUBON.

Ex-Judge Parker and Bishop Greer Honor Great Naturalist.

Ex-Judge Alton B. Parker was one of the speakers at the Audubon Commemoration at the Church of the Intercession, One Hundred and Fifty-eighth Street and Broadway, last night. He reviewed the life and achievements of John James Audubon, the one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of whose birth was being celebrated, and called attention to some of the characteristics of the great naturalist.

"No lesson that we learn from Audubon's life," said Mr. Parker, "is of more interest than that every child should have opportunity to develop that talent which God has given him. A father is tempted to plan what work his child shall carry out; and if the child happens to develop artistic talent the father tries to throttle it. Audubon's father hoped to make his son a follower of Napoleon, but the boy would have none of it. He came to America and hunted birds."

Mr. Parker paid tribute to the wife of the ornithologist, and said nobody knew how much Audubon's success was due to her. Bishop Greer spoke briefly.

CALLS FOR HOOKER CHARGES.

Assembly Takes Step Toward Formal Action Against Justice.

ALBANY, May 4.—The Assembly to-day adopted resolutions to carry out recommendations of the Judiciary Committee in the case of Supreme Court Justice Hooker, under Section 11 of Article 6 of the Constitution. The resolutions merely commit the Legislature to further proceedings.

The Judiciary Committee was instructed to report to-morrow a statement of the charges, which the Assembly will either adopt, amend, or reject.

"It seems to me that the Senate should join in formulating the charges," said Majority Leader Rogers.

"The Attorney General, Attorney Cowan, for the committee, and myself went over that matter." Chairman Fish responded, "and we always ran against some obstacle when it came to finding out how the Senate could join in the matter. It's a concurrent matter, not a joint matter. The Assembly will have to act first and then the Senate."

A. P. BOYD DIES IN HOSPITAL.

Brother of Columbia Professor Found Unconscious in Williamsburg.

A. P. Boyd died at the Eastern District Hospital, Williamsburg, early yesterday morning. He was found on Wednesday evening at Clay Street and Manhattan Avenue insensible, and all efforts to arouse him were in vain. He was taken to the hospital, where he died without regaining consciousness.

The man had in his possession a membership card of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks of Asheville, N. C. There were also business cards of W. N. Cooper, a lumber dealer of Asheville. It was thought at first that the man had poisoned himself; but an autopsy last evening showed that death was due to natural causes.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., May 4.—A. P. Boyd, who died in Williamsburg this evening, was formerly a lumber inspector in the employ of the W. N. Cooper Lumber Company of this city. Prof. Kenneth Boyd of Columbia University, New York, is a brother. He left here a year and a half ago to [illegible] lumber business in [illegible]

So It Seems Anyway, in Manhattan Bank Bond Case.

Samuel Winfield Miller of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, was brought to this city yesterday by a United States Marshal of Cedar Rapids, in connection with the recent endeavor made by one Samuel Warren Miller to negotiate one of the ten-thousand-dollar bonds stolen by the "Jimmy" Hope gang from the Manhattan Savings Bank in 1878. Samuel Winfield Miller is suspected by the Federal authorities of being identical with Samuel Warren Miller.

Samuel Winfield Miller, the Federal authorities say, is an uncle of Dr. Lewis O. Wilcoxon, who was arrested while trying to negotiate a loan on the bond which he said he had received from Samuel Warren Miller as security. Samuel Winfield Miller was taken by the Western Marshal before the United States District Attorney yesterday afternoon. The Marshal was advised to turn his prisoner over to United States Marshal Henkel.

"Not on your life!" said the Western Marshal. "Why, this man is one of the most highly respected citizens of Cedar Rapids. Not so long as I can prevent it is he going to the Tombs, or any other down-east graveyard."

Thereupon Samuel Winfield Miller of Cedar Rapids and the United States Marshal, also of Cedar Rapids, went arm in arm to a hotel.

Marx & Miller, the lawyers who obtained the release of Dr. Wilcoxon two weeks ago upon technicalities, said yesterday afternoon:

"The arrest of Samuel Winfield Miller is an outrage. He is a quiet farmer from Cedar Rapids. He has never been east of the Mississippi in his life."

McMAHON STEPS DOWN.

The Old Tammany Leader to Give Way to Best.

After eighteen years of active service as the Tammany leader of the Seventeenth Assembly District, ex-Judge Daniel F. McMahon, who also is the Chairman of the Tammany Executive Committee, has announced his intention of retiring from his leadership. According to the plans laid out, Bridge Commissioner George E. Best will be named in the place of Judge McMahon, and will defend the title at the Fall primaries against ex-Assemblyman John F. Curry.

At the regular meeting of the Narragansett Club on Wednesday night, McMahon tendered his resignation as the executive member for the district. The members of the club and of the General Committee urged him to reconsider his determination and he yielded so far as to allow the matter to hold over for two weeks.

According to those close to the old-time leader, however, McMahon will not change his mind, as he does not feel physically equal to another primary struggle like that through which he went last year when Curry led the big split in the district and came within thirty votes on the face of the count of defeating the McMahon forces.

Curry and his followers have been organizing for months, and say that they are stronger than they were last year. For some weeks McMahon has been looking over the field for a trustworthy man to carry on the fight against Curry. Best has been McMahon's right-hand man both in politics and business, and with Best running it is believed that Charles F. Murphy would use all the power of the central Tammany organization to uphold his leadership.

McMahon is one of the last of the old-time leaders of the Tammany organization, dating from the days of John Kelly. His title of "Judge" was acquired during the time he sat on the bench as a Police Justice. For many years he has been connected with the contracting firm of Naughton & Co., of which he now is the active head. McMahon is reputed to be worth considerably more than a million dollars.

BARGE SINKS; FIVE LOST.

Moonbeam Goes Down in Sound Gale with All on Board.

NEWPORT, May 4.—The New London tug Gertrude reported here to-day the loss of the barge Moonbeam off Point Judith last night, with all on board, including Capt. Charles Ackers, Nelson W. Bowen, the steward, Thomas Hughes, the engineer, and Capt. Ackers's two children.

The Moonbeam was being towed from Hoboken to Providence, with a cargo of coal. She went down in a gale which swept Long Island Sound during the night. The barge was owned by the Eastern Coal Company of Providence.

The Gertrude had in tow the barges Moonbeam, Ariadne, and Snipe. Yesterday afternoon a high southwesterly wind rapidly increased in force and by evening heavy seas began to wash over the tug and the deep laden barges.

The tow was off Point Judith when those on the Gertrude saw a torch flashed from the decks of the Moonbeam, immediately followed by a shrill blast from the barge's steam whistle. Capt. Halyburton of the tug put about and attempted to approach the Moonbeam. Suddenly the barge careened, gave a final plunge and nothing more of her could be seen save a few pieces of wreckage which had been swept from the decks.

FOUND NO MILLER MONEY.

Not Even Postage Stamp in Vault Where Much Was Expected.

John B. Lord, trustee in bankruptcy for William F. Miller of the Franklin Syndicate, recently came into possession of a key to certain safe deposit vaults in which were believed to be many hundred thousand dollars in cash and securities accumulating at the rate of 520 per cent.

Mr. Lord obtained the key through his attorney, T. Ellett Hodgskin, who got it from Mrs. Blake, mother of Edward Schlesinger, who was a partner of Miller and who disappeared shortly before the collapse of the syndicate. Mrs. Blake said that her son had given it to her before he went away.

"At last!" cried Mr. Lord.

Thereupon he started a quiet investigation of possible safe deposit vaults where vastly accumulated percentage might be bulging through the doors. At last he hit upon the Lincoln Safe Deposit vaults, at 32 East Forty-second Street.

Thither went Mr. Lord yesterday afternoon armed with the key, the moral support of his attorney, and an order permitting its examination by Judge Thomas of the United States Court.

The vault was opened in the presence of Mr. Lord, Mr. Hodgskin, the Secretary of the Lincoln Safe Deposit Vaults, also the Treasurer, and an attorney who had been hastily summoned.

The door swung open. Five bulging pairs of eyes peered into the steel compartment. Then five voices uttered five hoarse cries:

"Not even a two-cent stamp."

Killed by Trolley Car.

James Atkinson, a middle-aged manufacturer of brushes, living with his wife and three children at 1,458 Herkimer Street, Brooklyn, was run over and instantly killed by a Fulton Street trolley car near Hopkinson Street last evening. His body was dragged along several hundred feet before the car could be stopped and was then wedged so firmly under the front truck that it took a score of men to get it out.

HACKENSCHMIDT IS WRESTLING CHAMPION

Russian Defeats "Tom" Jenkins in Straight Falls

AT MADISON SQUARE GARDEN

Big Men Display All Tricks at the Catch-as-Catch-Can Game Before Good-Sized Crowd.

Georges Hackenschmidt, by his great strength defeated Tom Jenkins last night for the world's championship at catch-as-catch-can wrestling. At no period of the match, held in the Madison Square Garden, was the American anywhere near to securing a fall from the vaunted "Russian Lion." Both of the falls, which pinned Jenkins's shoulders to the mat, were secured by half Nelson holds used in combination. The respective time of each was 31:15 and 22:04. Tim Hurst acted as referee and Hugh Leonard and John J. O'Brien of the New York Athletic Club as judges.

As the two big men came together at the call of "time" an almost oppressive stillness succeeded the noise of a moment before. Jenkins played trickily to get "Hack" down to the mat.

He cleverly evaded several half Nelson holds, but finally "Hack" secured a full Nelson and turned Jenkins over for what appeared to be a fall. Tim Hurst hovered over the pair as they lay upon the mat like a hen over a brood of chicks. First on one side and then on the other, slipping his hand under the American's massive shoulders to ascertain whether or not he was pinned to the mat. Tom bridged perfectly, but that "Hack" shifted to a half Nelson hold, and then dropping his weight upon Jenkins he pressed the latter's shoulders down. The time was 31:15.

Hackenschmidt went to his opponent right at the start of the second bout. In his efforts to get Jenkins down on all fours he repeatedly sent the American whirling. Once he gave Tom a taste of his prodigious power by grappling him by the shoulders and whirling him clearly off his feet.

Finally the deadly half Nelson came Jenkins's way again, and although he used all his art to overcome it "Hack" got the hold and a further arm hold again pinned him to the mat in 22:04.

Women's Shirtwaist Suits At 3.95.

Besides the great assortments of Summer Shirtwaist Suits on sale to-day—two great groups that embrace Figured Lawns, Chambrays, Linens and many other kinds of desirable materials—we will enhance to-day's selling with 250 additional garments at the same popular price.

The new features comprise Suits in two styles of fine Chambray in the different colorings—one style prettily lace trimmed on waist and skirt, the other adorned with bands of Shepherd Plaid materials. A third is of Shepherd Check Gingham and made with full waist and plaited flounce skirt.

Ordinarily $6 would be asked for these garments, and even at that price values are exceptional. But at $3.95 every Suit becomes a bargain of the most astounding character. Styles are rich and natty, the finishing of a commendable quality and materials are unexpectedly choice.

Orth's Wild Pitching Gives Boston Six Runs in First Inning and Victory.

The Bostons left town yesterday with three victories over the Greater New Yorks to their credit, the last engagement being a rather one-sided affair. The decision was soon placed beyond doubt, for in the first inning eleven of the visitors appeared at the bat, and before the last man was retired six runs were scored. These were the result chiefly of Orth's wild pitching. He gave two men bases on called balls, had two wild pitches, and three safe hits were credited against him. Then Kleinow allowed a runner to score on a passed ball, and Conroy made two damaging errors, one a fumble of a hit, and the other a wild throw to first base.

Hogg succeded Orth in the second inning, and owing to the lameness of Elberfeld Yeager was placed at short stop. Hogg also was wild in his delivery, but he kept the champions well in check until the last inning, when a single by "Cy" Young, who supplanted Gibson in the fourth after two men were out, and a hit to the extreme right field by Burkett were responsible for two runs. The New Yorks scored two runs in the fourth inning on three one-base hits and two bases on called balls, made another in the sixth on Williams's single, Conroy's out, and Young's wild pitch, and in the eighth Keeler tallied on a two-base hit, Ferris's stupid play, and Conroy's long fly to left field.

Champions Hit Willis Freely and Defeat Boston by Score of 6 to 1.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., May 4.—Wiltse was in splendid pitching form to-day, and the best the local batsmen could do was to make two safe hits for one base each. He gave four men bases on called balls, but struck ten men out. On the other hand, the champions batted with telling effect, Donlin carrying off the honors with four hits out of five times at the bat. The fielding of both teams was good.

Jersey City Takes Lead Early and Wins from Newark by 8 to 5.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., May 4.—Jersey City won to-day's game from Newark by the score of 8 to 5. Clement's base on balls, Bean's sacrifice, and Halligan's single scored the first run in the first inning. In the second inning, with two out, Jersey City scored five runs on four bases on balls and three singles. Then Bonno was replaced by Pardee in the box. The latter's bad throw to first in the fifth allowed Woods to reach first base and he tallied on McCauley's three-bagger. In the eighth a base on balls and Halligan's double gave the visitors another run.

Newark scored its five runs in the seventh inning. A triple play by Vandegrift and Bean was the feature of the sixth inning. Score:

Ban Removed from Hoboken Club.

The National Baseball Commission, at its meeting at Cincinnati yesterday, decided to remove the ban against the Hoboken (N. J.) Club when that organization deposits with the Secretary of the National Commission the sum of $500 as a guarantee of good faith, the money to be returned at the end of the season if all other conditions have been met. The Hoboken Club can play any National Agreement club, and on next Sunday the Jerseyman will meet the New York champions of the National League.

Cutler Wins from Berkeley.

Cutler School won the dual meet with Berkeley School yesterday afternoon at William's Bridge by a score of 87 points to 46. The performances, considering the weather conditions, were very fair, and in some instances excellent. The work of G. H. Edgell of Cutler was particularly notable, four firsts and a second going to his credit. Purdy of Berkeley with three firsts and two thirds, and Cole of Cutler with three firsts and second pushed him hard for individual honors.

BOARD FINES E. E. SMATHERS.

Is Disciplined by Horsemen for Technical Violation of Rule.

E. E. Smathers of New York was fined $250 by the Board of Review of the National Trotting Association yesterday for technical violation of rule, but was exonerated of fraudulent or dishonest intent. The case was the outcome of the sale of the famous trotter, Doctor Strong, between heats of the Massachusetts Stake Race, involving a $15,000 purse, at Readville last year, the two judges failing to announce the purchase from the stand. Z. K. Travis, who sold the horse, was also fined $100.

Secretary Gocher of the board denied the report that the Butler case had been pigeonholed through influences brought to bear by the Board of Stewards of the Grand Circuit in behalf of the wealthy New Yorker. The cases against him and his employe, Monroe Salisbury, will be taken up again in December, when a decision will be handed down. Reason for the present postponement was not announced. Mr. Gocher denied that the Grand Circuit Stewards prepared a formal round robin, which was presented to the Board of Review by D. J. Campau of Detroit, H. K. Devereux of Cleveland, and Harry D. Shephard of Columbus, to the effect that the cases must be pigeonholed or the Grand Circuit would be an independent body in future.

It is a peculiar fact that Mr. Butler, who is a member of the Board of Stewards, is also a member of the Atlantic District Board of the National Association; that H. K. Devereux of Cleveland and C. K. G. Billings of Memphis, respectively, members of the Western and Central District Boards of the National Association, are Grand Circuit Stewards, and that F. E. Perkins of Providence and W. Perry Taylor of Buffalo, members of the Board of Review, are also Grand Circuit Stewards. This was probably the basis for the assertion that the Board of Review dared not carry to a finish the case against Mr. Butler and Salisbury without seriously offending the Grand Circuit, the most influential part of the National Association, which the Board of Review represents.

AUTO CLUB'S NEW HOME.

Plans Filed for Eight-Story Building, with Private Garage.

Plans have been filed with Building Superintendent Hopper for the new clubhouse to be erected at 247 and 249 West Fifty-fourth Street for the Automobile Club of America, the present quarters of which are at Fifth Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street. The new home is to be an eight-story fire-proof building, with a frontage of 131 feet and a depth of 87 feet, and having an extension 80 feet wide and 13 feet deep. The building is to be lighted by seven rows of ornamental windows extending from the second story to the roof.

The main story will contain the assembly hall, a grill room, and a library. The mezzanine floor above it will have a billiard and a card room. The club garage will be in the basement and ground floor, and the upper floors will also be devoted to the storage of automobiles. The building is to have a facade of brick and ornamental iron, with trimmings of marble and terra cotta. Its cost is estimated at $350,000. The architect is Ernest Flagg.

The club at present leases one floor of the Fifth Avenue building, and it hopes to get in its new home within a year. Dave Hennen Morris is President of the club, and there are over 700 members.

GLIDDEN AUTO CUP PLANS.

Many Entries Reported to A. A. A. Directors—Track Racing Sanctions.

President Elliot C. Lee of Boston presided at the meeting of the Board of Directors of the American Automobile Association yesterday in the rooms of the Automobile Club of America, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street. The subject of the Glidden touring trophy came up for discussion. Augustus Post, Chairman of the commission, stated that a dozen entries were already assured, half of which have been paid, and the route has practically been fixed through New England. The tour will start in July, and Mr. Glidden, who is now on his tour around the world, will be here to see the result of the contest. Among those who have paid their entry fees are James L. Breese, Harlan H. Whipple, W. C. Temple, R. P. Scott of Baltimore, J. M. Waters, and Augustus Post. About two weeks will be spent on the tour. A meeting of the commission to arrange a number of details will be held in this city within a few days.

The Racing Board met at the Waldorf-Astoria last night and passed upon a large number of applications for track meets in various parts of the country. All of the applications for dates as previously published from the Empire City track, the Brighton Beach track, and the Morris Park track, were sanctioned.

Will Stop Cycle Racing at Vailsburg.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, N. J., May 4.—Summoning Charles B. Bloemecke and Frederick W. Voigt, proprietor and manager, respectively, of the Vailsburg bicycle track to Police Headquarters this afternoon, Acting Chief of Police Adams informed them that if they attempted to hold bicycle races at that track next Sunday, in the face of the stand taken by the Police Commissioners, they and the riders would be locked up. The Chief said that perhaps Bloemecke and Voigt were simply figuring on being arrested themselves in order to bring the question of Sunday racing to a test, but declared that every rider who attempted to race would be arrested with them.

After the interview with the Chief, Mr. Bloemecke reiterated his assertion that the track would be opened for racing on Sunday.

SCHOONER IS CAPSIZED BY 70-MILE SQUALL

Brickladen Vessel Caught in Sudden Blow Off Inwood.

ALL ON BOARD ARE RESCUED

One of the Crew Hit by Flying Brick as the W. H. Barrum Turns Turtle.

When, with a rush of squalls, Summer weather in New York and vicinity was suddenly replaced by a temperature that made topcoats welcome, at midday yesterday one described as having a velocity of 70 miles an hour hit a schooner in the Hudson, capsized her, and threw her crew of five into the black, windlashed water. The men were saved by three others who had witnessed the accident from the shore.

The two-masted schooner William H. Barrum, loaded with brick, was on her way down the river from Haverstraw bound for Brooklyn, when a heavy squall caught her, and she turned turtle.

All sail was set, and the schooner was footing fairly fast when the blow struck her. She was then opposite Two Hundred and Sixth Street.

Capt. E. Farley was in charge of the Barrum. His crew consisted of William Hagen, John Glennon, Edward Cassidy, and James Morgan.

As the vessel capsized, the five men fell into the water, and Hagen was struck in the face by a flying brick. Glennon, Cassidy, and Morgan, seeing Hagen's helpless condition, srrounded him, and held him up.

On the Manhattan shore, directly opposite the scene of the accident, is the Inwood Bathing and Boating Company. In the boathouse at the time were Capt. F. A. Wall, ex-Alderman Kleet, and John C. Kruppman. They saw the accident, jumped into a forty-foot naphtha launch, and started out at full speed toward the men. The squall had passed over, and the launch was able to make quick time.

The rescuing party pulled Hagen into the boat. Then the others were picked up. Hagen was taken to the J. Hood Wright Hospital.

The schooner, with its load of brick, was lost.

SUDDEN BLAST CHILLS CITY.

First Case of Heat Prostration Is Also Reported.

Although no snow fell over New York yesterday there were many persons who declared that at one time yesterday they experienced January weather, while at another they felt so warm that they shed Winter wraps for thinner clothing. The man in charge of the Weather Bureau said this was all imagination, as the thermometer registered only 70 degrees at noon and it was no colder than 53 degrees at any time of the day.

Nevertheless the first case of heat prostration reported at Police Headquarters this year appeared upon the police slips yesterday. The case was that of Michael Early, forty-four years old, living on Washington Avenue, between Park and Myrtle Avenues, Brooklyn. Early was prostrated at 158 West Thirty-seventh Street, and was removed to New York Hospital.

The windstorm which passed over the city sent hats flying over roofs and blew down a number of trees in the suburbs. The gale lasted only fifteen minutes. It came along at 12:50 o'clock, and subsided soon after 1 o'clock. Its velocity was officially gauged at thirty-six miles an hour.

Anton Schutt, twenty-one years old, an amateur aeronaut residing at 351 West Thirty-eighth Street, and Leon Stevens, a professional air ship man, were on the roof of a building at 77 Chambers Street when the storm arrived. They had rigged up a big gas balloon for advertising purposes. The balloon collapsed, and Schutt was nearly suffocated. He was revived at Hudson Street Hospital.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Lithographic Prints on Gelatin Sheets Are Not Toys.

In a decision, written by General Appraiser Sharretts, the Board of United States Appraisers yesterday made a ruling affecting many advertising concerns in this country. It was held that thin sheets of gelatin cut in the form of women, men, fish, &c., and having printed thereon by lithographic process advertisements of business firms are dutiable at the specific rates provided in the Dingley tariff law for "lithographic prints." The particular goods passed upon by the customs court were imported by George W. Sheldon & Co., New York. Collector Stranahan took the view that the articles were "toys" within the meaning of the tariff law, and exacted duty at the rate of 35 per cent. ad valorem. General Appraiser Sharretts says in his opinion that the Collector erred in not returning the merchandise for duty at the specific rates provided for "lithographis prints." Mr. Stranahan is directed to make a liquidation in accordance with the finding of the board.

General Appraiser McClelland wrote a decision affecting the customs classification of so-called "dyers' sticks." The sticks are cut into lengths of about four feet each. Appraiser Whitehead reported to the Collector that the merchandise was dutiable under the tariff's provision for "unmanufactured wood," with duty at the rate of 30 per cent. ad valorem. L. Jaeck, the importer of the goods, set up the claim that the articles are properly free of duty under the provision in the tariff for "bamboo sticks." The General Appraiser says that the processes to which the sticks have been subjected have not destroyed their identity as bamboo, and that consequently the protest must be sustained.

Other importers' claims sustained yesterday were by: White, Son & Co., Boston; George W. Rueff, New Orleans; Model Brothers, Chicago; Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher, L. W. Levy & Co., G. A. & E. Meyer, Marcel Schmitt, Rudolph C. Hahn, New York.

Claims partially sustained were by Pitt & Scott, Ltd., F. Paturel & Co., Ungerer & Co., T. H. Grossmith, the Leon Rheims Company, New York.

The board overruled protests by the W. B. Loggie Company, Bangor, Me.; the Prince Manufacturing Company, Plattsburg, N. Y.; Hensel, Bruckmann & Lorbacher, Ungerer & Co., the Stoltzenberg Company, New York.

LEGISLATIVE APHASIA.

From THE TIMES's report of the proceedings of the State Senate on Wednesday we extract this curious and interesting passage:

Although the vote was announced by the clerk as 26 to 20, Senator DRESCHER'S response to his name was so low that most of the Senators thought he had not voted.

"I did not hear the Senator from the Fourth vote," said Senator WHITE. "I would like to know how he voted."

"How does the Senator from the Fourth wish to be recorded?" asked the chair, as all eyes were turned on DRESCHER.

"I voted in favor of the bill," he responded. He could not have been heard ten feet away had it not been for the stillness in the chamber.

Senator DRESCHER'S case is not to be considered as one of aphasia, properly so-called. The loss of speech in his case is to be attributed not to loss, but only to change, of mind. He had, the day before, voted against the bill for which he voted on Wednesday, thus bringing to its support the one vote necessary to its passage. And, moreover, when he temporarily regained the faculty of speech, it will be noted that he expressed himself articulately and intelligibly. His condition, then, was not that of the true aphasic, either of the amnesic or of the ataxic variety, in either of which, according to high scientific authority, the portion of the cerebrum which is necessarily diseased is the posterior third of the third or inferior left frontal convolution. "Non constat" that any portion of the brain of the Senator from Brooklyn is necessarily diseased.

Consider the necessary mental agitation of the Senator at the time, and it will be seen that there are no grounds for a grave prognosis. The bill under discussion was one to give full force and effect, by a delegation of the State's power of eminent domain to the holders of it, to a franchise of some years' standing to divert the waters of the Niagara River. This franchise is regarded by the people of the State of New York, without other exception than those of them who have a direct pecuniary interest in the operation of it, as a franchise to take public property for private use without compensation. To this great majority of the people of the State the vote of a legislator to continue, extend, or validate this franchise indicates that the legislator who casts the vote belongs to the excepted minority which has such a private interest opposed to the public interest. Now let us assume, as we are bound to assume, that Senator DRESCHER had been convinced, or had convinced himself, that the opinion of the majority of the people of the State and of the whole body of his own constituents on this point was all wrong; that the measure was really in the public interest, and that, in the language of another legislator, it was his duty not to please his constituents, but only to serve them. Assume that he had arrived at this conclusion after spending in anxious and solitary meditation as to his duty, taking no counsel of flesh and blood, the twenty-four hours that had elapsed since he voted against the bill, and that this meditation had led him to the conclusion that it was his duty to vote for it. The consciousness that his fellow-citizens and constituents were prepared to put the worst construction upon the best motives would necessarily oppress him when the time came for him to record his conviction. This consciousness would be aggravated by his perception that his changing a vote which he had cast only the day before, while really a testimony to his open-mindedness and candor, would concentrate upon him as an eleventh hour convert to a belief in the beneficence of what is commonly known as the Niagara grab, all the obloquy which would otherwise be diffused among the earlier supporters of the measure, and that he would enable them to escape their several shares of responsibility at his expense. Could there be a position more awkward, more cruel, for an honest man? Would not the consciousness of that position fully account for a temporary paralysis of the organs of speech?

For our own part, we are sincerely sorry for Senator DRESCHER, and we hope to be a good deal sorrier. But we have no doubt that, after the awkwardness of his dilemma on Wednesday has passed, he will be able, when he is asked a plain question, such as "Guilty or not guilty?" to return a reply which shall be not only intelligible but audible.

THE COTTON CROP.

The generally favorable weather conditions throughout the country promise that the optimistic estimates of the April-May crop report will be fully verified. This is especially true as to wheat and oats. The corn outlook is more uncertain. Planting has been delayed, but it is expected that the end of May will see everything started for a full crop. The cotton planting has been carried on under generally favorable weather conditions, but the efforts to discourage the planting of a full crop may have had more effect than is yet realized. The Atlanta Constitution says:

Cotton, we believe, is being cut at least 20 per cent. in Georgia, or will be. Taking the cotton belt as a whole, the same percentage of reduction will probably obtain. But the fact remains that fertilizer sales are a trifle heavier than last Spring, when the record crop in the South's cotton history was pitched—and this fact, taken in conjunction with the fact that spot cotton is active at around 7½ cents, is being used as an argument by the bears to mean that the bottom has fallen out of the great holding and short planting movement so promisingly inaugurated at New Orleans last January. But there is one sure way to check the bear movement. The Constitution reiterates its oft-iterated admontion to cut the cotton acreage this Spring, and cut it close. Never mind about the break in the holding movement; never mind the increased sale of fertilizer; cut the cotton acreage.

This seems to us about as bad advice as could be given with honest purpose. It is based upon Mr. DANIEL J. SULLY'S prediction of an oversupply; and when this is contrasted with his argument of a little more than a year ago to show that there were a great many more good reasons than any one else knew why the maximum cotton production of the South for many years to come must fall below the minimum requirement of consumption, the person who accepts Mr. SULLY as a capable and disinterested cotton statistician and prophet must be credulous indeed.

If a fraction of the energy which has been devoted to urging the planters to cut down the cotton acreage had been given to studying the ultimate effects of more economical methods of growing than those now employed, there would be nothing in the price to make the planter uneasy. It is not what he gets for his cotton per pound, but what relation exists between what it cost him and what he can sell it for, that interests the practical cotton planter.

PHILADELPHIA'S GAS PROBLEM.

The discussion of municipal gas lighting has suddenly developed in Philadelphia into a heated controversy, attended by a degree of popular excitement most unusual in that acquiescent community. The question of price is complicated in Philadelphia by special problems of municipal ownership and of the value of corporate franchises. The entire gas lighting plant belongs to the city, and was formerly operated by the city, with disastrous results. In 1897 it was leased to the United Gas Improvement Company for a term of thirty years, the lessees undertaking to put the system into complete working order upon a modern basis, and to make all repairs and extensions necessary to maintain a satisfactory service. They were to furnish all the gas required for municipal lighting free of charge, and to pay to the city, at quarterly periods, a stated proportion of all money received for the sale of gas to private consumers. The rate paid at the beginning of the lease was $1 per 1,000 cubic feet, but this rate could be reduced by the City Councils to 90 cents; after ten years the Councils might reduce the rate to 85 cents; after fifteen years to 80 cents, and after twenty years to 75 cents. All that the company should be authorized to collect above these rates was to be paid to the city, and at the expiration of the lease the entire property was to be handed over to the city in good condition and without incumbrance.

The city has not exercised its option to reduce the price of gas to consumers, but it has regularly received its share of 10 cents upon every thousand cubic feet of gas sold, the income from this source having risen from $340,193, in 1899, to $650,683, in 1904. The lease has thus proved profitable to the city, which also saves the entire cost of lighting the streets and public buildings. It has likewise proved highly profitable to the company operating under the lease, which paid dividends last year of more than 12 per cent. This company, however, buys the gas from a subsidiary company, of which it is the owner, at the rate of 34 cents per thousand. This represents the cost of manufacture only, not of distribution.

It is easily calculated that under the terms of the lease, which runs to 1927, the amount which the lessees would be called upon to pay to the city—or, at the option of the City Councils, to remit the consumers—would increase to over $1,000,000 annually after 1907, and subsequently to $1,400,000 and $1,750,000, without allowing for the probable increase of consumption. Recently the City Councils, having need of a large sum of money for improvements, and being unwilling to issue bonds, proposed to capitalize these future receipts in a cash payment of $25,000,000. To this the lessees acceded with the significant condition that the lease be extended to 1980, or fifty-three years beyond its present term, and that they be released from all obligation of further payments to the city, and from all authority of City Councils to reduce the price of gas below 90 cents, which they are now receiving.

This surprisingly impudent proposition, which would virtually give away an unrestricted franchise for a term which Controller GROUT, in a recent visit to Philadelphia, described as next door to perpetuity, aroused an outburst of popular protest which has compelled at least postponement if not the abandonment of the scheme. Incidentally it has brought to light many of the scandals which usually attend the granting of municipal franchises, though the prevailing opinion in Philadelphia appears to be that the existing lease is a fair business arrangement and advantageous both to the city and to the lessees, who have given a satisfactory service and could be compelled, if it remained in force, to bring the price of gas gradually down to a reasonable rate. By this arrangement municipal ownership is retained without the risks of municipal management, but with a certain measure of municipal control, and it appears incredible that any City Councils can be sufficiently stupid or corrupt to give away such advantages for a consideration so entirely inadequate. The proposition is rightly denounced in Philadelphia as barefaced public robbery.

THE PATTERSON CASE.

The disagreement of the jury in the trial of the Patterson woman for murder is equivalent to a criticism upon the District Attorney's office, and is a rebuke to Assistant District Attorney RAND. After the disagreement upon the second trial of this woman it was the general opinion in the community that the prosecution had wholly failed to make out a case, that it was not in the possession of evidence to convict, and that to insist upon a third trial would involve the county in unwarranted expenditure. The District Attorney paid no heed to public opinion, he took a good deal of time in the attempt to secure further evidence and spent a great deal of the public money, only to have his mistake of judgment demonstrated by the refusal of the jury to accept his worthless evidence.

Nobody, we imagine, is in any degree moved by sympathy in forming opinions about the Patterson case. The victim and the prisoner alike belonged to that worthless and ignoble class of human beings that so largely make up "sporting" society. It required not sympathy for the person under indictment, but only a cool exercise of ordinary reasoning powers to determine that the probability lay upon the side of the prisoner's innocence, not upon that of her guilt. That this weak, pleasure-loving, mindless woman, without character and without force, without power of initiative or of resolution, the mere victim of circumstance drifting here and there under the guidance of any will but her own upon the muddy waters of the lower life, had become aroused to a pitch of murderous passion and shot the man who had supported her, and there was good reason to suppose would support her again, was a theory that it seemed could be entertained only by one under the sway of that fury of prosecution which sometimes breaks out in the office of the District Attorney. As has been observed in private comment upon this case, for the Patterson woman to have shot YOUNG would have been not only bad form but bad finance. At least, the human probability of the case was so decidedly against the theory of murder that the District Attorney's office should have been on notice that an unusually firm structure of proof would be required to convince a jury of her guilt. It is evident that Mr. RAND had no faith in his proofs, otherwise he would never have descended to the unspeakable vulgarity of declaring to the jury that, believing she was about to lose YOUNG for good, the woman "saw red." If there has been any visual coloration in this case it was in the office of the public prosecutor.

Aside from the fundamental error of bringing the woman to bar for the third time at all, this trial was a perfect example of the way in which a murder trial ought not to be conducted.

In theory the trial of a prisoner upon the charge of murder should be a proceeding in which court, counsel, and jury, with a due sense of the solemnity of their work and in good faith, co-operate in the attempt to ascertain the truth. If there is any place in the wide world where claptrap, the arts of declamation, and the tricks of sophistry should be excluded it is a courtroom in which a trial for murder is being conducted. In theory, and in practice as well, a prosecuting officer should not cause the accused person to be brought to trial for murder unless convinced of his or her guilt. Even when that belief is sincerely and profoundly felt, the prosecuting officer transcends the line of his duty if he attempts to piece out insufficient and defective evidence by artful pleading, and attempts to mislead the jury by barefaced assertion of unproved facts. The prosecuting officer is the agent of the people, employed by them to marshal the evidence in the case for the information of the court and jury. It is no part of his duty to seek by buttressing up his proofs with assertions and by forging links altogether missing from his chain of evidence to secure the conviction of a prisoner not beyond reasonable doubt proved guilty by the testimony.

We do not charge all these offenses and improprieties against Mr. RAND. He is what people call a rea... [illegible] his management of the prosecution in this case and by what is called his "powerful" summing up. The improprieties we have noted are much too frequently observed in all recent murder trials, and some of them were committed by Mr. RAND in the trial of the Patterson woman. He did not prove her guilt—not even by circumstantial evidence. He did not, he could not, prove that she shot YOUNG. He did not prove the purchase of the revolver by any one who could have supplied it to the prisoner. He proved nothing at all about the purchase of the weapon save by inferences which it would have been dangerous to draw and improper for the jury to entertain. Yet he discoursed to the twelve men in the box as if he had proved the purchase of the pistol by SMITH, as if he had excluded all reasonable possibility that any other than the woman under indictment could have shot YOUNG, as if her case were altogether lost and the verdict of conviction certain. Commenting upon the refusal of the defense to put the prisoner on the stand, he declared that silence is confession. Silence is not confession, and his saying so was claptrap. Assistant District Attorneys in New York County ought to be above the use of claptrap in murder trials.

A sensible and intelligent jury is not fooled or influenced by these indecent practices. Indeed, Recorder GOFF in his charge expressly enjoined it upon the jury that personal opinions of counsel are valueless, that the arguments of counsel are not proof and are not permitted as proof, and that suggestions and intimations are to be rejected. What is the sense in resorting to tactics which, as counsel for prosecution and defense alike must well understand, can properly have no weight with the jury? Do reputable lawyers want to influence a murder trial jury improperly?

Chicago is now reaping the penalty of putting a Socialistic municipal ownership crank in the Mayor's chair. The city is without an effective Government, life and property are without protection, bands of strikers who are no longer workingmen but criminals possess the streets, and are indulging in riot, arson, and pretty much every form of outrage and violence. The police, it has been demonstrated, are incapable of keeping the peace. Yet Mayor DUNNE, being importuned to invoke the aid of the militia, refuses on the ground that the police have not exhausted their powers. The conditions that now prevail in Chicago do not call for police treatment, they do not call for militia treatment. The proper remedy is an application of United States troops in sufficient number at once to put a stop to violence and to give the strikers an exemplary lesson.

The proposition of Puck to "put a girdle 'round the earth in forty minutes" may long have seemed the ultimate of imaginable rapidity. But under existing conditions it would be "dead slow." Under the direction of the Bureau of Equipment of the Navy Department, a spark of electricity—or perhaps an impulse would be more accurate—was made to encircle the earth in just seven seconds. The earth's circumference is, roughly, about 25,000 miles. This would give the fugitive impulse a speed of something like 3,572 miles a second. Well, that is fast enough for all practical purposes, even in intercommunication; but if forty minutes were the limit, the newspapers would lose the early trains every morning.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Three Sons and a Father.

By the will of a New Yorker recently deceased it has been revealed that shortly before his death he came to the conclusion that his three sons were, as he expressed it, "not equal to keeping money." Therefore, instead of leaving $15,000 to each, as he had intended, he added a codicil to the will revoking these bequests and placing in the hands of trustees a fund from the income of which they are to pay to one of the sons $2,500 a year, and to the two others $3,500. Now it seems to us that this father showed not the wide knowledge of life and human nature that residence in New York ought to bestow upon any moderately intelligent man, but the laboriously preserved ignorance which enables or compels a man to do a thing almost as surely as it is obviously injudicious. Of course, to give $15,000 in a lump sum to a young man who has manifested a decided tendency toward extravagance and away from economy is to create dangers neither few nor small for the young man, and it is to put the $15,000 as an aggregated amount into peril nothing less than deadly. On the other hand, it is a matter of very small importance—especially to a dead man—whether any particular $15,000 is kept together or not, and the youth who had dissipated it would by no means necessarily receive so much injury in the process that he might not profit by the shock inflicted by the disappearance of the last dollar and set himself courageously and manfully at the task of supplying his own needs by his own efforts. But not one young man in a hundred can successfully withstand the hideously demoralising influence of beginning his adult life with an assured and doled-out income, not big enough to help him in any serious business or enterprise, and yet sufficient to deprive him of that most estimable of alternatives—the alternative of work or starvation. The chances are that this too-cautious father has avoided a rather remote possibility of ruining his sons only to fall into a close approximation of certainty of doing it. He has, in the first place, put upon them a public humiliation of the sort best calculated to rob them of their self-respect; in the second, he has condemned them to a long course of debasing tutelage; and, in the third, he has robbed them of the most efficacious incentive to the attainment of an honorable ambition. For the man who earns $3,500 a year in honest competition with his fellows is doing well enough to have the right to look everybody squarely in the face, and to feel that he is [illegible]

Smoke Nuisance in Park Avenue.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial of April 27 on "Smoke in New York" should commend itself to every thoughtful citizen. The memorial of Mr. Charles T. Barney, which you so emphatically indorse, presents the only rational solution of the "problem." The sanitary code, as quoted by you, appears to be mandatory and comprehensive, forbidding the discharge of objectionable smoke from any "building, place, or premises or from any engine or locomotive" in the city.

I should like to call attention to a flagrant instance of its transgression. It appears to be entirely disregarded by the railroad companies in control of the lines beneath Park Avenue. Volumes of offensive smoke are daily emitted from that subway, through its overhead apertures into the avenue above. This is greatly to the discomfort of residents, all along the avenue, who are interested to know why this breach of law is permitted. It is not only a gross injustice to those residents, but of detriment to property owners.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was very glad to see your article yesterday about the preservation of trees in this city. I was much struck when I came here, about a year ago, with the absence of trees as compared with London and Paris. Not only is the green a relief to the eye as well as a welcome shade in summer, but trees add greatly to the health and beauty of any city. I should like to see [illegible]

The Use of Capital Letters.

Beautifully illustrating the survival of a queer delusion was the letter from that correspondent who gently scolded us for printing with capitals the names of the seasons. As authority for his criticism—and authority which he evidently regarded as final—he quoted from some unnamed treatise on elementary rhetoric a rule to the effect that capitals should be used for the days and months, but not for the seasons, and he added: "If I am wrong in this, I shall be pleased to be corrected; if right, the suggestion will doubtless add to the correctness and value of one of the best daily editorial pages in the country." Our correspondent is probably right in his memory of his textbook, but he is grotesquely wrong in his assumption that obedience to his rule would add anything either to the value or to the correctness of any editorial page. To be sure, it wouldn't detract anything, either. With the practice in the matter unsettled, as it is, everybody is at perfect liberty to judge for himself whether the general tendency of good writers is to use big letters or little ones in beginning the names of the seasons—and then if he allows personal preference to decide against that decision, he is still within his rights. No doubt usage is inclining toward the elimination of capitals from written and printed English. The change has been marked in the last fifty years, and it is still progressing steadily, but its result has been nothing better than a closer approach to uniformity, and it is far from certain that uniformity is preferable to the diversity which used to make the appearance of one page express one man's ideas and that of another another's. The French have gone much further than we have in abandoning capitals, the Germans nowhere near so far, but French and German are not for those reasons either more or less valuable and correct than English. Elementary treatises on rhetoric—it was probably a grammar—express the opinions of their authors on dubious points of verbal fashion and propriety, but they are of no binding force, and anybody who is prepared to take the consequences is free to be as independent and original as he pleases. Would our correspondent think he had improved DICKENS, for instance, if he edited out of his works the capitals by which that romancer so frequently obtained some effects and increased others? And yet DICKENS'S use of capitals violated all the rules that were ever made.

Los Angeles Is Generous.

Anybody who cannot make easily a comfortable living in Los Angeles will fail for some other reason than the shrewdness of the city's people or their inclination to hang on to their good money until they can get something like value for it. This assertion is based on the news that Los Angeles has just paid $1,000 to a man because it has had in the past year an unusually abundant rainfall. To be sure, the payment is otherwise explained in Los Angeles, but the explanation is simply nonsense, since it naïvely assumes the existence of some sort of a relation between the man and the rainfall—an assumption based on nothing whatever except the wholly irrrelevant facts that a year ago the man gravely professed to be a "rainmaker," and since then has spent considerable time in evaporating mysterious fluids at the foot of a tall wooden tower. However, we are not denouncing Los Angeles for the use it has made of its own money, and we are still further from deriding it. Many and many a town has in the past year put much larger sums than $1,000 to much worse uses than rewarding a "rainmaker" for making a lucky guess. No doubt he has a sick child and three small wives, and needs the money more than Los Angeles does. It must be remembered, too, that the Weather Bureau is a bit weak out on the Pacific Coast, owing to the unavoidable scarcity of observing stations to the westward, and, therefore, it is not altogether remarkable that the people living in that part of the country have rather vague ideas as to the extent of the forces, the amount of energy, involved in the production even of a little Summer shower.

CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS.

Not the Place for Irony, Insinuation, or Inflammatory Talk.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A principle underlying criminal prosecutions is that the accused shall be accorded the benefit of a reasonable doubt; furthermore, it is fairly well conceived that justice shall, if at all, be tempered with naught but mercy.

The people do not demand that the pursuit of a prisoner at the bar shall be overeager or infused with a straining desire to procure a conviction. However keen the efforts of the prosecution to bring out the truth which points to guilt, those labors should be rigorously confined to the testimony of witnesses on the stand and to the molding of evidence unfavorable to the defense into a proposed conclusion.

The people and the accused stand on totally different ground. The former seeks truth and ensuing justice, with whomsoever it lies, but the prisoner seeks acquittal.

The opening and closing arguments for the prosecution are not the vehicle for irony that insinuates what the testimony has not developed, nor for eloquence that scourges because it is bitter and unusual. To inflame the imagination of the juryman with a masterly metaphor is a perversion of duty which should overshadow a personal triumph and which directs the sword of justice toward the accused instead of to the right.

Your editorial of April 27 on "Smoke in New York" should commend itself to every thoughtful citizen. The memorial of Mr. Charles T. Barney, which you so emphatically indorse, presents the only rational solution of the "problem." The sanitary code, as quoted by you, appears to be mandatory and comprehensive, forbidding the discharge of objectionable smoke from any "building, place, or premises or from any engine or locomotive" in the city.

I should like to call attention to a flagrant instance of its transgression. It appears to be entirely disregarded by the railroad companies in control of the lines beneath Park Avenue. Volumes of offensive smoke are daily emitted from that subway, through its overhead apertures into the avenue above. This is greatly to the discomfort of residents, all along the avenue, who are interested to know why this breach of law is permitted. It is not only a gross injustice to those residents, but of detriment to property owners.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was very glad to see your article yesterday about the preservation of trees in this city. I was much struck when I came here, about a year ago, with the absence of trees as compared with London and Paris. Not only is the green a relief to the eye as well as a welcome shade in summer, but trees add greatly to the health and beauty of any city. I should like to see [illegible]

CHINA TO SUE THIS COUNTRY.

Will Attack Exclusion Laws in Courts —Now Getting Evidence.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Sir Chentung Liang-Cheng, the Chinese Minister, has issued a confidential circular or proclamation to all Chinese in the United States, requesting reports of all cases of applicants to whom admission to this country has been denied and of all deportations on the ground of non-registration since the expiration of the Exclusion treaty of 1894. The circular asks for estimates of the amount of damage sustained by Chinese owing to such action on the part of the United States.

The circular was issued through the Chinese Consul General at San Francisco. Its object, it is understood, is to facilitate the collection of evidence on which to base a suit against the United States to test the validity of the existing Chinese exclusion laws.

In what way the attack upon the laws is to be made is not known to the Government officials. They hold that the right of Congress to enact laws to exclude from this country Chinese or anybody else cannot be assailed successfully.

It is held by some lawyers of repute, however, that there are phases of the Chinese exclusion laws which will not stand a test in the courts.

THE SACRED FLAME.

Lunette for the Statehouse at St. Paul, by H. O. Walker, N. A.

The new State House for Minnesota at St. Paul will soon become a place of pilgrimage for those who enjoy the art of the mural painter, so many are the pictures in place or going forward to enrich its walls or taking form under the painter's brush. The latest is Henry Oliver Walker's large lunette, which was shown yesterday in the Vanderbilt Gallery at the Fine Arts Building.

Mr. Walker calls his picture "The Sacred Flame." It has the great merit of simplicity in composition, consisting of three symbolical figures of Yesterday, To-day, and To-morrow in a simply managed setting of cloud, ocean, cliff, and rocky strand. The lunette is twenty-five feet above the floor of the gallery by which it is approached, so that the size of the figures and their distribution over centre and ends will add greatly to the impression they make from a distance. They explain themselves afar off as symbolical figures; the colors of their draperies—blue to the left, red in the centre, green to the right—are unrelieved by other colors, and tell as three distinct masses in the composition. Owing to an irresistible association of symbolical ladies of this kind with the classics, the painter has inscribed his figures with Latin names—Heri for yesterday, Hodie for to-day, and Cras for to-morrow; these words being, as it were, carved in the rocks near the several nymphs. As he is their maker, it is not for us to quarrel with their baptismal names, which will cause the Minnesota Assemblymen and Senators to brush up the remains of their school-day memories.

Heri is an aged lady, with a very lithe and effective form, as one discerns it through the somewhat solid green drapery. She bends in exact profile over a small fire of faggots, the smoke from which rises at first straight and then in a curl like a pale gray interrogation mark against the dark gray of the cliff. Heri is busy separating a burning brand from the fire in order to hand it to Hodie, a maiden fair with auburn hair, who sits facing the spectator in the centre of the lunette. Hodie extends her left hand to the fire ready to seize the brand as soon as it is plucked from the burning—a graceful gesture, by the way, on the part of a graceful To-day, while with her right arm at full length she presents a flaming torch to the third nymph, the buoyant Cras. Hodie's pretty head, bound in red gauze, is outlined against a solid mass of white cloud above the ocean. Her chiton, of an ivory white, is trussed up below her breast, and the red drapery that covers her from waist to feet sways up and forms a background for her torso and outstretched arms.

Cras is a tricksy nymph whose feet are not on solid ground—for who is sure of his or her to-morrow?—but float free of rocks and water as she swims with bending figure in the air, her torso and legs gleaming in graceful curves through the dull-blue transparent drapery. The round of the lunette causes her head to incline a bit inward. Her left hand holds a classic lamp, which she is lighting from the torch of Hodie. Thus the chain of "The Sacred Flame" is complete, from the fires of outworn Yesterday to the lamp of wraithlike and unborn To-morrow. The idea is a simple and large one, uncomplicated and direct, and the story is told with equal directness— a very rare thing, by the way, in the annals of mural work.

Taking the segment of a circle formed by the arch of the ceiling and the lintel of the passageway, the surface of the lunette is agreeably divided by the trio of figures in different poses—the floating To-morrow with head turned back, the full-front seated To-day with extended arms, and the profile Yesterday bending over her fire. The outline of the cliff to the right and the edges of the rocks to the left near the feet of To-morrow are calculated so as to harmonize with the smooth curves of the figures, not repeating them, but also not breaking with them. It is plain that Mr. Walker has conceived the surface of the lunette as the designer of a medal distributes masses and curves; and also that in enlarging his original sketch he has avoided the danger of losing his big main lines by afterthoughts in the way of accessories.

This work shows a very notable advance on such large compositions as the picture in the Appellate Court on Madison Square. It will rank high among the murals in Cass Gilbert's great building at St. Paul.

DECIDED TO DIE TOGETHER.

Englishman and His American Wife Could Not Agree.

BLACKPOOL, England, May 4.—An inquest was held here this evening into the death on Tuesday night of Robert Rushton Shaw and his wife, Elizabeth, and a verdict was returned that Shaw murdered his wife and committed suicide.

A letter found on the body of Shaw said that he and his wife had agreed to die together because the differences between them were irreconcilable.

PHILADELPHIA, May 4.—Mrs. Florence Ward of Port Kennedy, Penn., a sister of Mrs. Robert Rushton Shaw, said to-day her sister's maiden name was Elizabeth Walker, and she was married to Shaw in this city five years ago, she being then nineteen years old and Shaw only twenty. They were first cousins.

Mrs. Ward said the mother of Shaw, with whom the couple lived in Blackpool, was jealous of the love which the husband bestowed upon his young wife. This fact, she intimated, might have had something to do with the tragedy which ended their lives.

Trees Can Act as Elevators.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your note on "Can Trees Act as Elevators?" was edifying in the variety of contentions as to the possibility of a tree lifting attached objects in its growth. There is quite a distinction between the effect of growth upon the nail driven in the trunk and the stone lodged in its branches. I saw, a few months ago, in the navy yard at Havana a six-inch cannon, which is now inclosed by the two branches of a tree trunk, and which has been thus grasped and lifted clear from the ground a distance of 8 or 10 inches. There is no doubt of the operation of [illegible]

FAIRBANKS ADDRESSES THE RAILWAY CONGRESS

Vice President Says Railroads Are Public's Servants.

WARNS THEM TO BE JUST

Equality of Rates Is Essential—Stuyvesant Fish Speaks and Presides.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—The International Railway Congress was formally opened to-day by Vice President Fairbanks. Practically every railroad of importance in the world will be represented. At the opening 450 delegates had presented their credentials. Double this number is expected, 300 of whom are from foreign countries.

Vice President Fairbanks called the congress to order shortly after 11 o'clock, and after welcoming the delegates and touching on the importance and magnitude of railroad interests he had this to say about rate evils and discrimination:

"The railway is charged with great public duties. It is in the highest sense a public servant, and must discharge its functions with impartiality, giving to all whom it serves just treatment. Equality of service is the predicate of good relations between the railway and the public. It is of the utmost importance that unjust favoritism should not obtain, that rates should be open and enjoyed by all alike. Nothing so quickly and surely lays the foundation of distrust and discontent as secrecy where there should be publicity, as inequality where there should be equality. Transportation charges must be fixed with a just regard to the owners, the employes, and the public. The interests of none can be disregarded without ultimate injury to all."

Ernest Girard, President of the permanent commission of the congress, made an address in French. He said that the mileage of the steam lines system in Belgium, in comparison with the territory, is the greatest in the world, with a traffic unsurpassed. He paid a tribute to the railroad progress in this country, and emphasized the importance of this meeting.

President Stuyvesant Fish of the Illinois Central and the American Railway Association then formally took the chair. In his speech Mr. Fish went into the detailed history of railway evolution, and then compared the railroads of America and Great Britain in these remarks:

"We in these newer countries must now look more and more to the experience of Europe for light in dealing with the problems which are beginning to confront us on account of our increasing population and civilization. This will involve a vast expenditure of capital, and it may be that when we shall have met and overcome all these difficulties the capitalization of our railways, which in the United States is now $65,186 per mile, may approach that of the railways of Great Britain, which is $277,475 per mile.

"While I hardly think we shall go that far, I am certain there must be a very great increase above the figures now prevailing. This because we must now do what they did at the outset—provide second, third, and fourth tracks, and separate, at least in the densely populated towns and cities, the plane of railway traffic from the plane of street travel."

The business meetings of the congress will be held in secret session.

COMPLAIN OF CATTLE RATES.

Live Stock Men Protest to Commerce Inquiry Through ex-Senator Harris.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—Ex-Senator William H. Harris of Kansas, representing live stock interests in the Southwest, was before the Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce to-day. He urged legislation giving the Inter-State Commerce Commission power to fix rates. He spoke of the increasing cost of raising live stock and of the high price of meats to consumers. He declared that cattlemen had no desire for Government ownership, but wanted practical Governmental supervision.

He complained particularly of the rates from the West and Southwest on young cattle shipped north to the feeding grounds. He believed that impartial officials appointed by the Government could arrive at a fair rate, as well as interested parties. Cattle rates, he said, had been increased from 25 to 30 per cent.

Replying to Chairman Elkins Mr. Harris said the roads complained of were the Santa Fé, Rock Island, Burlington, and Union Pacific, which had advanced rates. The Inter-State Commerce Commission, he maintained, could fix rates, as well as so-called experts.

"There is a complaint of the advance of the price of meat now," remarked Chairman Elkins, "and it seems to me well founded."

Prof. H. R. Meyer, assistant professor of economics at the University of Chicago, also appeared before the committee. He dealt with the railroad conditions in Prussia and Germany, in which countries railways are owned by the Government. He said one of the leading objects of Prussian nationalization of railways was the desire to abolish or minimize railway discriminations. He declared that Prussia had succeeded completely in doing this.

KING EDWARD HOME AGAIN.

Crowds Cheer Him as He Leaves Paris —Balfour Meets Him at London.

PARIS, May 4.—King Edward left Paris for London at noon to-day. He was accompanied to the railway station by representatives of President Loubet and Foreign Minister Delcassé and many officials and friends.

His Majesty bestowed a number of decorations of the Order of Victoria. The crowds acclaimed the King as the royal train departed.

The newspapers comment favorably on the effect of King Edward's visit to Paris. They praise his democratic simplicity, the general view being that his visit, while mainly unofficial, has given an opportune expression of the political ties uniting France and Great Britain.

LONDON, May 4.—King Edward arrived in London this evening. Premier Balfour was among the many prominent persons at the railroad station.

Mr. Balfour's presence caused some comment, it having been reported that his Majesty had expressed a desire to see the Premier at the earliest possible moment. The King, however, only spoke a few words of greeting to Mr. Balfour, who immediately returned to Westminster.

His Majesty drove direct to Buckingham Palace.

THE TEST.

I look into my neighbor's eyes
And twist a smile that's strangely grim;
I'm thinking, Would he feel surprise
To know just what I think of him?

I gaze into my dear friend's face,
And with this thought my soul is stirred:
What revolution would take place
Were I to tell her what I've heard?

I stare into my mirror there
With eyes that hunger to be true,
And say aloud, Would it be fair
To question all I know of you?

FORM STATE BRANCH OF NATIONAL RED CROSS

Col. Sanger and Elihu Root Among Officers Elected.

Col. William Cary Sanger, ex-Assistant Secretary of War, was chosen President of the New York State branch; Elihu Root Vice President, Mrs. William K. Draper Secretary, Jacob H. Under the terms of the new charter the entire methods of the Red Cross have been changed. It will result, it is said by those interested, in a much larger measure of public confidence, and the society will be prepared to render more efficient aid than heretofore. Branches are to be organized as quickly as possible, and each of these will immediately enroll a corps of medical officials, nurses, and attaches who will be available in any emergency.

Yesterday's meeting was addressed by Surgeon General Van Reypen and Miss Boardman. A number of persons, who signified their willingness to act as organizers for their respective districts, were named. Besides those named, all representing New York except Mrs. Thacher and Mrs. Litchfield, there were also named for New York Stephen H. Olin, William B. Rowland, Robert C. Ogden, the Rev. William T. Richards, Mr. and Mrs. Percy R. Pyne, Mrs. Moses Taylor, Nicholas Murray Butler, Miss Ruth Morgan, Mrs. Twombley, Mrs. Winthrop Cowdin, Dr. George L. Brewer, John P. DELAY COST ROAD $3,000,000.

Price Now $300 a Car More Than It Was Last Fall.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, May 4.—The holding back of orders for steel cars after the Board of Directors had authorized the purchase has cost the Baltimore and Ohio Road almost $3,000,000 and the Wabash between $750,000 and $1,000,000.

The price at which the cars have been ordered is about $500 per car in excess of the price prevailing when the Baltimore and Ohio Directors, last November, authorized the purchase of 11,000 cars. Instead of placing orders for the entire amount, the order for only 1,000 steel cars was placed then. From that time the price of steel cars went up and refused to come down.

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

To-day will be quiet socially; there are no weddings, but several parties will go to Belmont Park for the races, and to-morrow will bring the annual parade of the Coaching Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mackay had a house party over the opening day of the races, their guests being the Princess Stigliano Colonna, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman, James Henry Smith, James Hazen Hyde, and Mrs. Mackay's father, William A. Duer. Mr. and Mrs. Mackay took their guests to Belmont Park on their coach, the party lunching at the clubhouse there.

The Norman de R. Whitehouses have purchased a plot of seventy-three acres on Long Island, near Roslyn, and will greatly alter and modernize the large house already on the property, and will make it their permanent home.

F. Cope Whitehouse has arrived in town and is at the Metropolitan Club.

The wedding of Mrs. Bernard Eekhou (Miss Faith McNamee) to John Anderson Morton will take place on July 1 at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Charles Dewar Simons, Jr., at Dongan Hills, S. I. Mrs. Eekhout, who is a cousin of George W. Vanderbilt, will spend a couple of weeks at Biltmore, in June. After the wedding and a brief bridal tour the young couple will make their home at Mrs. Eekhout's cottage on the grounds of the Dongan Hills Golf Club.

Booked on La Lorraine sailing yesterday were Mrs. Charles T. Barney and Miss Katharine Barney, and on the Teutonic, sailing Wednesday, were Mr. and Mrs. William James, who had been making a long visit to this country, and, also Mr. and Mrs. N. Thayer Robb. Arriving on the Oceanic were Mrs. Cass Canfield and her children.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Sands will tomorrow open their Newport cottage for the season.

Mrs. W. Storrs Wells, whose ill health is the cause of the postponement of Miss Wells's wedding to Harry Peters, is booked to sail for Europe, and her daughter, Miss Natalie Wells, will accompany her. Miss Wells has been in Washington visiting Miss Marion Fish, the Fishes having a house in Washington this season.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Iselin (Miss Marie de Neufville) have also been visiting in Washington, as have the George Goulds.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont are staying over Sunday at Mrs. James L. Kernochan's at Hempstead. They sail for Europe on May 16 to re-

MAY AIR THE NEW HAVEN.

Massachusetts Bill for Inquiry on Trolley Purchases.

BOSTON, May 4.—An order for an exhaustive examination of the affairs of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company was introduced to-day by Representative Luce of Somerville. Consideration was postponed until to-morrow.

The order directs the Railroad Commissioners to require from the company a detailed statement of stocks, bonds, and other evidences of indebtedness of any street railway corporation which it held, for which it had subscribed, or which it had guaranteed on May 1, 1905, and the dates on which they were acquired; also, a statement of increases of capital stock by the road since Jan. 1, 1900, and of the terms under which such increases were made, and the uses made of the proceeds, and whether they were used directly or indirectly to acquire the capital stock of any corporation chartered by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The board also is directed to require of the Worcester and Southbridge, the Springfield, and the Berkshire Street Railway Companies a list of names of the stockholders, the present owners of stock, and a statement showing the average amount of stock held by each.

Furthermore, the Commissioner of Corporations is directed to obtain from the Consolidated Street Railway Company of Connecticut a list of the names of the largest stockholders on May 1, 1905, with a statement of the amount held by each, and other outstanding evidences of indebtedness of any Massachusetts corporation or any voluntary association of which a majority of the members reside in Massachusetts.

If the Railroad Commissioners find any violation of the law by one of these corporations the Attorney General is directed to proceed in accordance to law against those amenable.

HARTFORD, Conn., May 4.—The Committee on Railroads to-day presented a favorable report on the bill by which it is proposed to repeal the general railroad law. This bill, if passed, will prevent any railroad corporation from building a line in this State parallel to existing steam roads without coming to the General Assembly for permission.

At the hearing before the committee counsel representing the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad appeared in favor of the measure as calculated to protect that system. The survey by the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad of a line across the State was mentioned.

CURTAIL MARKSMAN'S FEATS.

Police Forbid Bordeverry to Shoot Off Wife's Dress.

Col. Gaston Bordeverry did not shoot off his wife's dress last evening at the Hippodrome, as he had done at every performance since his first appearance. On Wednesday night a story was told that the marksman had scratched his wife with a bullet—the accident being due, it was said, to the changing by a disgruntled attendant of the sights on the rifle.

Last night when Bordeverry began his act he was informed by Roundsman Fogarty that he would have to omit the disrobing feature. Bordeverry was much incensed, and made an excited speech to the audience.

"There is no foundation for the story that I shot my wife," he said. "It is all false; I have never shot any one. My reputation as a marksman has been damaged by such a falsehood. You will have to bear with me to-night, as the best part of my act has been prohibited by the police."

WOMEN THROWN FROM CAB.

Big Brewery Automobile Truck Crashes Into It.

A cab and a brewery automobile truck tried to occupy the same space last night at Seventh Avenue and Twenty-seventh Street. As a result of the collision the cab was badly damaged, and two young women occupants were badly shaken up.

The cab was going north, when the driver swung out of the car track to pass a wagon ahead. The automobile struck the carriage, almost overturning it and crashing into the side. In it at the time were Miss Elizabeth Newell and Miss Carmann of 123 East Thirtieth Street, who were going to their home from the Pennsylvania Railroad ferry. They both fainted at the shock, and were carried to a drug store, where they were revived.

Abstainer Lived to be 114.

DETROIT, May 4.—Piotr Kasmieresak, who said that he was born in Poland 114 years ago, died at his home here today. He had been a life-long abstainer from tobacco and liquor, and had spent most of his life in the open air.

BOWERY STORE ROBBED 75 TIMES IN 25 YEARS

Going to Try Another Neighborhood, Cigar Man Says.

HAS NO FAITH IN THE POLICE

Told Him to Get Safe, Which Burglars Tapped for $400—Bank Money, They Say Now.

For the seventy-fifth time, according to Samuel Kaskel, his cigar store on the Bowery, at Stanton Street, has been visited by burglars. The latest robbery took place night before last, and when Kaskel went to his place of business yesterday morning his safe was open and the shop in great disorder.

"Away from the Bowery for mine," said the cigar dealer sorrowfully yesterday. "I've been on the Bowery for nearly twenty-five years now, and have seen lots of things happen. But the burglars won't let me alone. It's clear out for me, I'm afraid, but I hate to do it."

This robbery Wednesday night resulted in a profit of some $400 to the burglars. They got open the safe somehow without explosives, and extracted everything of value. The cash drawer was easy, and two big boxes of cigars gave them about all they could carry. Happily for Kaskel he is so used to this performance that he can take it philosophically.

"Well, I know I've done about as much to support the crook fraternity as anybody in New York," was the remark he made when a reporter called on him yesterday. "There are plenty of people richer than I am, but it looks as if I am the real juicy fruit. I guess they pick me out now because of the record I've got—seventy-five robberies and never a capture.

"And what d'ye think? The only time an arrest was ever made I was sued for $5,000 for false arrest and had to pay out a small fortune in lawyers' fees. That time was a year or two ago. A young fellow—he was a nice looking youth, too—came in and said he wanted a box of cigars. I went behind the counter to get them and he followed, pretending to look the goods over. But he got next to my vest, which was hanging on a nail, and took a hundred-dollar watch out of the pocket. When I missed it later in the day I went over to Police Headquarters. They showed me the Rogues' Gallery, and I spotted my man right away. A week or two after this they called me to look over a bunch of crooks.

"I went to Headquarters, and there he was, that nice-looking young fellow. I didn't take a half a second to point him out. I had him arrested. 'Why,' he said, 'I wasn't in your store that day. I wasn't even in town!' And, by gosh, he proved he was in Chicago the day I was robbed and sued me for false arrest. I don't know how he proved it, but he knew the trick, whatever it was. He didn't get his $5,000, though.

"I used to have some faith in the police, but it's all disappeared. When a man can enter a Bowery store through the front window with patrolmen twirling their sticks up and down the street, I don't think that there's but one conclusion to come to. The crooks must be in collusion with the police, like people say.

"One month ago a man climbed up, broke the transom over the front door, and jumped in. There's an arc light on the corner and people on the street all the time. He had to have another man with him to help him up. He took his time about rifling the shop, got a good overcoat of mine, took the money in the cash drawer, and quietly departed. Do you think things like that can happen without the police knowing it?

"Across the street there"—pointing to a line of clothing stores on the west side of the Bowery—"these robberies take place pretty frequently, but of course not as often as I am robbed. The trouble is over there the storekeepers won't bother the police about it because they're afraid the police 'll make 'em close their stores on Sunday. They keep open on Sunday and do a good business. But I'm allowed by law to keep open on Sunday, so I don't have to be scared of the police.

"I've reported every theft to them, but they don't do anything. The Captain comes over from Eldridge Street and says: 'Course you get robbed, look at that wooden door.' Then I put in a strong iron door, like a prison door. A jimmy fixes that up in a couple of minutes. Then the next officer that comes says: 'You ought to get a safe. 'Course the cash drawer gets burst open.' I get a big, stout safe. Now, they've got that open, heaven knows how. Now the officer tells me: 'Course your money gets stole; ought to put it in a bank.'"

Kaskel said he was going to Commissioner McAdoo with his story.

JAPAN AND AMERICA.

Baron Kaneko's Speech at Colonial Wars Banquet.

Baron Kaneko, special envoy from Japan, said in a speech last night that his country and his countrymen welcomed the advent of America in the Far East. In the event of Japan's success in her struggle with Russia he pledged co-operation with the Stars and Stripes, proposing an economic alliance which he said would place all Asia under the commercial domination of his country and the United States, and announcing that Japan would welcome the increase of the American Navy in Eastern waters.

The speech of Baron Kaneko was the feature of the banquet given at the Waldorf-Astoria by the Society of Colonial Wars in the State of New York in honor of the delegates of the General Society, which has just concluded its triennial assemblage. The envoy spoke on the subject "Japan and the United States of America." He said, in part:

"The detractors of Japan have said that we deplored the coming of America to the Philippines. This is untrue. We were glad to witness her entrance into the Orient. We never want to see America withdraw. On the authority of Japan and the people of Japan, I say to you that we love you and will never let you go out of the East, because we want you to help us civilize Asia and introduce American-Saxon ideas there.

"It has been said of us that we do not look with favor on the increase of your navy. I say to you that we ardently desire its upbuilding, because you are our good neighbor and best friend.

"After the war I believe that an economic alliance between America and Japan should and will be established. Japan, with the racial and linguistic similarities existing between her people and the people of China, can assist you in extending your trade. America, with her capital and her business experience, can be of vast aid to us. The establishment of reciprocal relations on the basis of economic lines will mean that the whole of Asia will be in our grasp. It will mean an open door in China and the blocking of the plan of dismemberment of the Celestial Empire."

Baron Kaneko was repeatedly cheered. When he concluded his address the banqueters rose, waved their napkins, and sang the "Star-Spangled Banner." The Japanese envoy was showered with congratulations.

Gen. Vannum told of the work which is being done by the society in preserving the traditions which constitute the foundations of American patriotism. Frederic J. de Peyster, Governor General of the General Society, spoke to the toast, "The General Society of Colonial Wars." John S. Wise, ex-Congressman from Virginia, responded to "Our Ancestors," Major Gen. Wade, United States Army, to "The Army," and Stephen H. Olin to "The Navy."

FOR JAPAN'S WAR VICTIMS.

Arrangements for Entertainment at Belasco Theatre About Complete.

A meeting was held yesterday at the residence of Robert Shaw Minturn, Gramercy Park, of the Committee of Arrangements which has in charge the entertainment for the benefit of the widows and orphans of Japanese soldiers and sailors at the Belasco Theatre next Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Hugh Frazer, wife of the late British Envoy to Japan, who has arranged a series of tableaux vivants, reported that they were ready for production. The Japanese ladies will use their own native costumes and have loaned for the occasion costumes to the Americans who will appear. The tableaux will illustrate a romantic legend of Japanese history and will be preceded by moving pictures illustrative of the battles of the Yalu and of Liao-Yang.

The committee at its meeting yesterday was addressed by Aisaku Heyeshi. Miss Doane, who has in charge the sale of the boxes and tickets, reported that the lower boxes, which were sold at $250 each, are all disposed of but one.

BURIAL OF GEN. LEE.

Two Thousand Troops Take Part in Procession at Richmond.

RICHMOND, Va., May 4.—Not in all its history has Richmond witnessed a more imposing demonstration than that which to-day marked the funeral of Gen. Fitzhugh Lee.

Troops were pouring into the city all night, and the military contingent taking part in the procession consisted of two regiments of infantry, the Seventieth and Seventy-first; the Richmond Light Infantry Blues, a battalion of artillery, and seven detached infantry companies, making in all about 2,000 men, in addition to the veteran organizations.

By noon the business section of the city was practically deserted. Around St. Paul's Church, in which the funeral service was held, there was a dense throng, and from there to Hollywood Cemetery the sidewalks along the line of march were lined with spectators.

The church was densely crowded. The service was conducted by Bishop Randolph of the Southern Virginia Diocese, assisted by other clergymen.

As the procession moved from the church howitzers fired minute guns and church and municipal bells were tolled.

FREE LECTURE CORPS HONORS DR. LEIPZIGER

Presentation to Chief at Fifteenth Annual Dinner.

GREAT GROWTH OF SYSTEM

Supervisor of Free School Lecture Course Takes Up Osler Discussion of Age and Mental Ability.

The fifteenth annual dinner of the New York Free Lecture Corps, marking the end of the fifteenth year of adult education through the medium of lectures in the public schools and halls, was the most largely attended meeting of its kind in the association's history. The banquet was served at the Hotel Astor. More than two hundred covers were laid, and the women lecturers as well as the men attended.

One of the features of the dinner was the presentation to Dr. Leipziger, supervisor of the lecture course, of a handsomely bound volume containing a set of resolutions signed by 385 persons who had during the year attended lectures at Public School No. 60, and in Columbus Hall, Brooklyn. Among those at the main table, with John Thomas Lloyd, who presided, were Dr. Leipziger and Mrs. Leipziger, President Henry N. Tifft of the Board of Education, William Lummis, Chairman of the Committee on Lectures; City Superintendent Maxwell, President Finley of the College of the City of New York, Dr. Thomas Darlington, Health Commissioner; Mrs. Ellen Staples, and George Vandenhoff, N. J. Barrett, H. S. Fuller, and Frank D. Wilsey, members of the Board of Education. Mr. Thomas made the introductory address, and introduced Dr. Leipziger as "our friend, director, counsel, and leader in the work."

Dr. Leipziger said that the fifteenth year of the public lecture course took place during the centenary of the establishment of free schools in New York. The experiment of giving free lectures, he said, was begun sixteen years ago in six school houses, when 186 lectures brought a total attendance of 20,000 people. During the season which ended last Saturday night, there were 4,645 lectures to an attendance of 1,155,000. Continuing, Dr. Leipziger said:

"The large attendance indicates that the system of adult instruction has been interesting, otherwise the volunteer students of mature years who have, at great sacrifice, at much self-denial and much avoidance of worthless pleasures attended, they would not have been attracted.

"Dr. Osler, deserving of so much honor, has certainly done a great public service in awakening discussion on the question of the period of man's mental decay. What is needed in America, it seems to me, is more, not less, reverence for age, more, not less, recognition of the fact that though there may be a climax to one's mental development in early manhood, his mental development should be continuous, and as President Eliot says 'his last years should be his best.' Scientists tell us that the brain of a man between 60 and 80 is at its best, and even at 60 the acquisition of knowledge may well be begun.

President Tifft of the Board of Education paid a tribute to the work of Dr. Leipziger and of his assistant lecturers, who, he said, had given what was best in them to the work, and who had spread the cause of education as few other methods had done. Addresses were made also by Superintendent Maxwell, Dr. Darlington, Mrs. Ellen Staples, President Finley, and Commissioner Lummis.

GOT BURGLAR IN 5 MINUTES.

Robbery Discovered at 10:45—Police Had the Man at 10:50.

At 10:15 o'clock Wednesday morning, Mrs. Margaret Crinnegan of 58 West Eighth Street finished packing her household effects preparatory to going to Sullivan County for the Summer.

At 10:30 o'clock Mrs. Crinnegan left the house to call on a friend, locking the doors when she went away.

At 10:45 o'clock Mrs. Crinnegan returned, and found the house wholly upset, trunks broken open and clothing, jewelry, and other things missing.

At 10:50 o'clock Detective Sergeants Boyle and Charlton, passing the corner of Bedford and Carmine Streets, saw Joseph Brown, who said he lived at Mills Hotel No. 1. Brown carried a bundle and acted suspiciously. The Central Office men knew Brown and arrested him.

At 11:00 o'clock Brown was photographed at Police Headquarters.

At 11:15 o'clock a pair of shoes which Brown had in the bundle were identified at a department store as having been sold by a saleswoman there for Mrs. Crinnegan's use.

"This is one of the best arrests I know of," said Magistrate Cornell in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday, when he held Brown in $1,500 bail for trial on a charge of burglary. "I see you have the jimmy with which the prisoner got into the house. This is a capital arrest."

Harper's Book News

The Marriage of William Ashe

It is a fine thing to be in at the creation of a great book—to be able to tell your children how Pickwick Papers first came out in green covers, and to recall all the talk when Robert Elsmere was born.

And now here is a new title on a book—a name which your children's sons and daughters will know as they know the every-day things of life. A year ago and it did not exist. Now it belongs—as one critic has put it—"to the books that do not die." Perhaps this is putting it with a little over-emphasis; but if the judgment of critics and reviewer, and the great ones means anything, it means that in "The Marriage of William Ashe" Mrs. Humphry Ward has written a story that will endure. There is a breadth of sympathy, a delicacy of touch in the great movements of abandonment, a realness which makes the book not so much a picture of life as Life itself.

The Dryad

Quite the most novel thing Justin Huntly McCarthy or any novelist of recent years has done. The New York Globe calls it "a fairy tale for grown-ups, a mid-summer's day dream delightfully told, for which readers will bless the author when the warm days come."

It is a charming romance—a tale of the middle ages into which the author has boldly woven a strand of Greek mythology.

(E) Trade Mark:

No. 31,380, registered March 8th, 1898. The trade-mark registered includes the letter A inclosed in a circle, as applied to cylindrical cotton bales.

(F) 1. All additional shares of the capital stock of the corporations named in subdivision (A) hereof, and all shares of other corporations organized after April 1, 1902, acquired by American Cotton Company subsequent to said last-mentioned date.

2. All additional letters patent, applications for letters patent, designs and trade-marks and all other property of every kind and description acquired by the American Cotton Company with the proceeds of the said debenture bonds.

3. All other chattels and personal property of said American Cotton Company appertaining to or forming a part of its business, excepting merchandise, accounts receivable and cash.

The said property will be sold as an entirety and in one lot or parcel, without covenant or warranty of any kind, nature, or description whatsoever.

All the right, title and interest of the Central Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, in and to the above-mentioned several Letters Patent of Mexico, Brazil, Egypt, India, Russia, and Turkey is to be sold upon conditions as follows:

First: The sale and conveyance thereof are to be subject to all Government taxes and annuities which are now payable and which shall hereafter become payable upon said several Letters Patent of Mexico, Brazil, Egypt, India, Russia, and Turkey, or upon any of them.

Second: All notarial fees, Government taxes, and annuities and other expenses required to be paid for assigning and transferring the right, title, and interest of the Central Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, in and to the above-mentioned Letters Patent of foreign countries to the purchaser or purchasers thereof shall be paid by the purchaser or purchasers thereof.

Third: If any of said several Letters Patent of Mexico, Brazil, Egypt, India, Russia, and Turkey shall have lapsed or become forfeited for non-payment of any taxes or annuity or by reason of failure to work the invention covered thereby, no deduction or abatement shall be allowed from the amount of the bid of the successful bidder for all the right, title, and interest of the Central Trust Company of New York, as Trustee, in and to all of said Letters Patent of foreign countries.

No bid will be received from any person who shall not first deposit with the undersigned or the aforesaid auctioneers as a pledge that he will make good his bid in case of its acceptance the sum of $10,000 in cash or by certified check on some incorporated bank or trust company of the City of New York, made or indorsed payable to the order of the Central Trust Company of New York. The deposit received from any unsuccessful bidder will be returned to him when the property is struck off. The deposit received from the successful bidder will be retained as part payment of the purchase price of the property so sold. On the acceptance of any bid the successful bidder shall forthwith enter into an agreement in writing in appropriate form, whereby he shall bind himself to the due balance of his bid at the office of the Central Trust Company of New York City, on or before the 29th day of May, 1905.

The successful bidder, upon payment in full of the purchase price bidden in the manner and within the period herein limited, shall be entitled to receive the certificates representing the shares of stock enumerated in subdivision (A) hereof, together with transfers thereof executed by the persons in whose names said certificates stand, and an instrument or instruments in writing executed by the Central Trust Company of New York, as Trustee aforesaid, transferring or purporting to transfer such right, title, and interest as it may have as such trustee of, in, and to all the property herein described or intended so to be (other than that set forth in subdivision (A) hereof,) together with such documents as may be in the possession of the Trustee (other than the original deed of trust securing said debentures) evidencing its right, title, and interest to such property or to any part or portion thereof.

Intending bidders during the business hours of any day (Sundays and legal holidays excepted) prior to the sale of said property pursuant to this notice, at the office of the Central Trust Company of New York, 54 Wall Street, New York City, may examine any and all documents in the possession of said Trust Company evidencing its right, title, and interest to the property to be sold or to any part or portion thereof.

In case any bidder shall fail to make good his bid upon its acceptance by the said auctioneers, or shall fail after such acceptance to comply with the terms thereof, or shall fail to pay the balance of the purchase price, then the sum deposited by such bidder, whether paid in cash or represented by check, shall be forfeited as a penalty for such failure, and such bidder shall be held responsible for any payment of the expenses of the sale or of a resale, and for any deficiency or loss in case the property shall be sold at a less price at such re-sale.

So much of the purchase price as shall not be required by the undersigned as Trustee to be paid in cash can either be paid in cash or the purchaser may satisfy and make good such residue of his bid in whole or in part by turning in to be canceled or credited the six per cent. gold debenture bonds and the coupons thereto appertaining of the American Cotton Company outstanding under said deed of trust dated April 1, 1902, and the purchaser will be credited on account of such bonds and coupons with such sums as would be payable in cash on account thereof at the rate of 70 per cent. at sale if the whole amount of the purchase price were paid in cash.

The right is reserved to re-sell the property upon such notice as the Central Trust Company of New York may determine as sufficient, or without notice in the event that the purchaser shall fail or omit to make any payment on account of the unpaid balance of the purchase price on or before the 29th day of May, 1905.

The Central Trust Company of New York reserves the right to adjourn said sale from time to time, and to sell upon such adjourned day without further notice or upon such notice as it may in its discretion deem sufficient.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, Trustee.

Chicago, May 2, 1905.

To the Stockholders of the CHICAGO AND NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors held on the second day of May, 1905, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, The Stockholders of this Company at a Special Meeting called for that purpose and held on the tenth day of February, 1903, adopted resolutions increasing the Capital Stock of this Company by an amount of common stock sufficient to make the aggregate Capital Stock $100,000,000, and authorizing the Board of Directors to issue such common stock from time to time and in such amounts, within the total authorized Capital Stock, as such Board of Directors might determine, and for any purpose allowed by law.

Resolved, That to obtain funds to improve and extend the Company's property and to provide additional equipment, as well as for other proper corporate purposes, there be issued an additional amount of common stock equal to fifteen per cent. of the total preferred and common shares now outstanding;

Resolved, That all stockholders of the Company shall be entitled to subscribe to such additional stock at the rate of $100 per share, to the extent of 15% of their respective holdings, as shown upon the stock books at the close of business on Thursday, the first day of June, 1905, and that the right to such subscription shall terminate with Saturday, the first day of July, 1905.

Payments for all amounts subscribed shall be made on or before Saturday, the fifteenth day of July, 1905, and certificates of stock for the amounts so paid shall then be issued for all full shares, which stock shall be entitled to all dividends thereafter declared; and that scrip certificates which will pass by delivery, but which will not be entitled to participate in dividends, shall be issued for fractions of shares. Such certificates shall be exchangeable for stock certificates in amounts aggregating a full share or multiple thereof, providing such exchange be made on or before November 1, 1905. After that date no exchange shall be made, but fractions shall be redeemable at their proportionate value at the rate of $100 per share. The Board of Directors shall have power to sell or dispose of such stock as may not be subscribed for by stockholders, or, if subscribed for by them, shall not be paid for, in such manner and at such price, but not less than $100 per share, as may in their judgment be deemed best.

To carry the foregoing resolutions into effect and to pay the dividends upon July 1st, 1905, the transfer books of the stock of the Company will be closed upon Thursday, June 1st, 1905, and will reopen on Saturday, the first day of July, 1905.

Warrants representing the subscription rights in the additional stock authorized by such resolutions, accompanied by a circular containing full explanations, will be mailed by the Treasurer to Stockholders as soon as possible after the closing of the transfer books upon June 1st, 1905.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Depressed; Call Money Easy, 2½@3 Per Cent.

The Market Falls to a Lower Average Level Upon Unexplained Selling Pressure.

There were several vivacious incidents in yesterday's business upon the Stock Exchange, but they were not characteristic of the generally dolorous trading. To those not entangled nothing could well be more diverting than the flurry in Consolidated Gas. Those who were too well informed regarding the legislative outlook, and sold the stock in anticipation of the harm to be done the company by regulation of its rates by law, saw the price rise by points per minute enough to make ordinary margins a thing of the past. There are still several stages in the parliamentary procedure, and the market can be put up and down again more than once. In the upshot the stock was almost alone in advancing upon the day's business. Northwest also reflected in a lively manner the questionable advantage of "rights" in a market like the present. The rights are bid for upon the curb, but on the Exchange they are already almost marked off the price of the stock.

The day's general movement was less interesting, being marked by an almost constant pressure to sell stocks and a corresponding yielding of the quotations. There was no exception upon account of class or quality. Union Pacific was as weak as any, but made a better recovery, selling up from the low better than most. Reading reversed this, being stronger in the early business, and rallying less well, as the announcement of sale by Baltimore and Ohio and Lake Shore of what they held more than was necessary to assure their control was not liked. From the standpoint of the sellers they undoubtedly were judicious, showing profitable liquidation of property not needed in their business. But since the common was chosen for sale, it did not look as though the well-informed sellers shared the hopes of a larger dividend, while many found their views of the outlook modified by liquidation of this quality, however well explained. The industrials acted no better than the railways, there being distinct pressure against the pooled stocks, Smelters, Locomotive, the Southern Iron stocks, and others.

There was no convincing explanation of the selling which carried prices below Saturday's and Monday's in many cases and upon the average. There was gossip about liquidation of a large account, and there was a suggestion of "banging" by the bears to induce more liquidation. Also there were reports of a coming war of rates in the Northwest, but this seemed merely a reflection of Mr. Hill's plain talk at Washington, converting statements of opinion into statements of fact unwarrantedly. The crop reports were good enough to soften prices upon the Produce Exchange, and the anniversary of the Haymarket disorders at Chicago developed nothing worse than on several preceding days. The Bank of England reported a seasonable deterioration in its condition, and London discounts were firmer, but our money market rules lower in tone if not in figures, although sterling is advancing upon Japanese buying. Altogether the day's depression was possibly due rather to nervousness regarding future events than to uneasiness over the day's developments. The Union Pacific meeting to-day and the coming announcement regarding the none too successful offering of bonds to Pennsylvania's stockholders are likely to influence sentiment soon.

INCREASED GRAIN EXPORTS.

March Showed a Gain of Nearly Seven Million Bushels This Year.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 4.—According to reports received by the Bureau of Statistics, movement of grain at Atlantic ports during the first three months of the year showed a gain over the same period in 1904. At New York the total grain receipts during March was 7,286,481 bushels, as compared with 5,699,204 bushels received during a similar month in 1904. The grand total receipts of grain, flour, and cornmeal at that port were 10,186,142 bushels in March, 1905, in contrast with 9,331,969 bushels for a like month in 1904.

Export withdrawals of grain during the month of March totaled 16,725,104 bushels, an amount approximately 7,000,000 bushels larger than that for a corresponding month in 1904.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Signs of Renewed Liquidation Accompany Activity in Market.

There was increased activity in the stock market yesterday, the total sales exceeding those of Wednesday by about 400,000 shares, but the increase in activity was not combined with a rise in prices. On the contrary, there were signs of renewed liquidation. During the day there was a rumor on the floor of the Stock Exchange that the speculative account of a large operator was being closed out, and that this liquidation was forced. One commission house sent out the statement that this man, whose name was not given, had sold at least 100,000 shares during the day. The story could not be confirmed, and there was considerable doubt about it, for the reason that the low prices of Saturday and Monday were below the opening prices of yesterday, and if the liquidation had been forced it would probably have been forced before this. It was thought more likely that this liquidation represented selling by some large operator, who did not like the looks of the market and preferred to get out.

Considered Selling Bad.

According to the reports sent out by some of the brokers on the floor, the selling was what they considered bad. By this they meant that the selling orders were not derived from important sources, but rather represented short sales by room traders and "pikers" generally. A broker who read a message to this effect from the floor remarked that if the selling was bad the buying appeared to be worse. He pointed out that there seemed to be no support worth the name, and that buying orders were very much on a scale-down. Specialists in some stocks have no orders except for a few hundred shares at present prices, and the next orders are way below these figures.

Theories Go to Smash.

The gentlemen with the charts are somewhat disturbed because one of their pet theories has gone to smash. The chart experts had maintained that a well-regulated market when it declined a given number of points was bound to rally at least half the loss if it was to be considered as a good market. In the present instance prices have broken twenty points and the rally has not amounted to one-third of the break. The market, they say, has displayed a pronounced downward tendency, and the rallies have been getting feebler and feebler. A few weeks ago when the market was going up every one desired a reaction, and there was none. To-day when the market appears to be going down every one is talking about a rally, and there appears to be none deserving the title.

New York Central Fluctuation.

At one time yesterday New York Central sold at the same price as Pennsylvania Railroad—138½. A few weeks ago at the top of the bull market New York Central was quoted twenty points above Pennsylvania. New York Central was boomed on the theory that it would become part of a transcontinental system, and when it became apparent that this scheme was doomed to failure the stock began to sag back to a more normal position. Paying 1 per cent. less than Pennsylvania, the argument now is that it should sell as far below this stock as it previously sold above it. This in spite of the announcement that the Rockefeller interests have been admitted to the Boards of Directors of the railroads controlled by the New York Central, such as the Nickel Plate, a move which is supposed to mean that these interests are still more closely identified with the railroad than they were heretofore.

Rally in Consolidated Gas Fades.

Late in the afternoon there was a sharp rally in Consolidated Gas. This stock, which had declined to 187¾, came back to 199, but then sold off again. While the rally in Big Gas was on there was a sympathetic movement in the rest of the list, but it was short lived, and even while traders were wondering how far the rally would go it faded away. As soon as the short interest saw that it was all over it made another drive at the market, and succeeded in reaching the lowest prices for the day. The bulls tried to find a little comfort in the thought that on the last drive but little stock came out, but it was poor comfort. The stock that came out on the previous rally was still less.

Plight of Market Advisers.

Some persons are always against the market, whether it is going up or down. The cause is probably that they are naturally of a disposition of opposition. When the market was going up there were a lot of market advisers talking caution, on the ground that prices were too high. Now that the market has slumped off 20 points, these same men are saying that it is too low and that they expect prices to go up way beyond the figures which were reached in April. If the market was too high two weeks ago, it seems hard to explain why the prices of that time should be exceeded in the near future. If the market should recover its loss it would demonstrate that prices were really not too high.

Spencer Trask Distribution.

Spencer Trask & Co. have just made the annual distribution to members of the firm's staff under its profit-sharing plan. It is understood that the dividend constituted a very large percentage of the salaries of employes, all of whom are beneficiaries. The plan has been in operation for twenty-five years.

Speculative Element Timid.

The continued decline, with evidence of renewed liquidation every other day, almost, has so unnerved the speculative public that it hardly dares make a move on either side. Sentiment has been sadly unstrung, and this has a good deal to do with the continued lack of buying power which the market exhibits from day to day. It would take more than good support to restore confidence in the market at this time. Traders are afraid and hesitate while the bulk of the business is supplied by the room speculators and those large interests which are always in the market looking after the interests of their special properties.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, May 4.—Money was in strong demand in the market to-day for heavy repayments to the Bank of England and the requirements of the Consols settlement, besides the payment of about $5,000,000 in calls on recent new issues. Discounts were firmer owing to the uncertainty as to whether the market will be able to liquidate its indebtedness to the Bank of England, amounting to over $20,000,000, during the week.

Business on the Stock Exchange was quiet and the tone was undecided. There were few features. Consols were easier on the monetary situation.

Americans opened dull, causing general depression, owing to the uncertainty regarding the outlook in Wall Street. They moved to a shade above parity, drooped, and closed weak.

War stocks were firmer. Imperial Japanese Government 6s of 1904 were quoted at 101½.

In the market to-day trading in copper was inactive. The metal closed at 65s.

Bar silver dull at 28⅝d per ounce.

Rate of discount unchanged at 2½ per cent.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE HIGHER.

Foreign exchange rates rose sharply yesterday on purchases made, it was believed, for Japanese account, and against the sales of stocks in this market for European account. The price of demand sterling rose to 4.8670, and closed at about 4.8660. An additional cause for the increasing firmness of exchange is the continued ease in money which after the sharp advance in call rates two weeks ago has been in plentiful supply at and even under 3 per cent. for call loans. There was transferred yesterday through the Sub-Treasury to San Francisco $1,000,000.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, May 4.—Prices displayed a good tendency on the Bourse to-day, and at the close were firm. Russian Imperial 4s were quoted at 88.30, and Russian bonds of 1904 at 510.00.

AUSTIN, Texas, May 4.—Gov. Lanham to-day vetoed on constitutional grounds the bill recently passed by the Legislature providing for the creation of State banks. The veto went to the Legislature in special session, and an effort will be made to pass a new bill with the objectionable features contained in the vetoed bill eliminated.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 4.—The local money market to-day was very easy. The regular table of rates, &c., follows:

Call loans, 3@3½ per cent.; time loans on collateral, 3½@4½ per cent.; time loans on mercantile paper, 3¾@4 per cent.; Clearing House loans, 2½ per cent.; New York funds at par; clearings, $20,832,897; balances, $2,476,605; Sub-Treasury debit, $8,500.

The weakness in the New York market was reflected in local securities by declining prices. There was a scattered amount of liquidation to be seen in various stocks, but there was no general pressure to sell. Stocks were well taken on the decline, and traders look for a rally as soon as the pressure is removed. The tone is exceptionally good in the copper shares, considering the weakness of Amalgamated. The closing prices were on a rally from the low quotations of the day. The complete list of transactions follows:

THE OUTSIDE SECURITIES

Majority of Issues Close Near Lowest of the Day.

Contracts in Great Northern and Northern Pacific "When Released" Practically All Settled—Decline in Northwest Rights.

The downward tendency of prices in the outside market was more pronounced yesterday than on Wednesday, and there was very little recovery from the lowest prices of the session. In some instances prices yielded on the sale of only a few hundred shares, and even in the active issues the amount of stock that changed hands on the decline was not large. There was little variety to the market, for the reason that the general selling influenced practically every stock on the list, and the special influences in the day's movements of prices, if any such existed, were obscured by the general selling movement.

NORTHERN SECURITIES opened at the highest of the day, 160, and ended within half a point of the lowest, 156¼. About 9,000 shares were traded in. The settlement of the contracts in the Northern Securities underlying stocks "when released" has progressed so smoothly that there are now said to be outstanding only a very few such contracts. One of the houses that had been most active in the market for Great Northern and Northern Pacific "when released" said yesterday that they had contracts in only one hundred or two hundred shares that had not yet been delivered to them.

CHICAGO AND NORTHWESTERN rights sold down 2 points yesterday, which convinced some traders that these rights were to be no exception to the general rule that the normal course for them is downward. After selling at 14, however, the price rallied fractionally.

HAMILTON BANK stock.—A bid of 200 for any part of 100 shares of Hamilton Bank stock was made on the curb yesterday by J. L. McCormack. This is an advance of a number of points over the bid previously reported for this stock.

The principal transactions in 100-share lots reported in the outside market yesterday, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

SALE OF READING COMMON.

Represented Surplus Stock Held by Lake Shore and B. & O.

Wall Street was much interested yesterday by the announcement that the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern had sold nearly 80,000 shares of Reading common stock and that the proceeds had been turned into the treasury. The announcement was made at the annual meeting in Cleveland, and it was followed by the statement by interests representing the Baltimore and Ohio that the latter had sold a similar amount of its holdings.

The Street took this as a bear argument, as it showed that the Directors of the New York Central thought the price of Reading high enough. The Street also argued that it meant a rupture between the Vanderbilt and the Pennsylvania interests. This, it was pointed out, is not correct. The stock sold represented purchases made when Reading was very low and was in excess of the amount needed to retain control of the Reading jointly with the Baltimore and Ohio. The Lake Shore still holds the first and second preferred stocks and the 200,000 shares of common stock originally acquired to preserve peace in the trunk line territory by giving joint control of the Reading to the Pennsylvania and New York Central lines. It is understood that the sales of the surplus stock on which the two controlling roads had a large profit was made by mutual agreement some months ago.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 4.—General weakness developed in this market today, and most stocks closed with losses. United Gas was an exception. It opened ⅝ lower at 111½, and subsequently sold down to 111, but under excellent buying it recovered in the final hour to 112⅝, at which last sales were made. The feeling in the financial district is one of indifference whether the gas lease extension goes through or fails; it appears that no other company can get the lease if the United Gas Improvement does not. Reading and United States Steel common were heavily dealt in, but followed New York prices closely. Lehigh Valley was weak in sympathy, declining 1½ points. Allegheny Valley preferred receded 1. Electric Storage Battery 2. Philadelphia Company ⅝, the preferred ⅛. Philadelphia Rapid Transit (under New York selling) 1⅝, and Westmoreland Coal Warrants ½. The total sales were 73,177 shares; $65,500 bonds. The list follows:

RE-TRIAL NOT PROBABLE IN PATTERSON CASE

Expectation Is That Defendant Will Be Admitted to Bail.

IS STILL IN SEMI-STUPOR

Powerful Sedatives Administered to Enable Her to Face Jury Retain Their Effect.

Although no official statement was forthcoming from the District Attorney's office yesterday regarding the future disposition of the Nan Patterson case, there is little likelihood that the former chorus girl will be called upon to undergo a fourth trial on the charge of having murdered "Caesar" Young, the bookmaker, who was killed in a cab on June 4 last.

In the absence of District Attorney Jerome, who was in Albany, and Assistant District Attorney Rand, who prosecuted the case, and who had gone out of town for a rest, no action was taken which could give an inkling of what the future course of the District Attorney's office will be. An attaché of the District Attorney's office said, however, that unless Mr. Jerome should learn that the majority of the jury had stood for conviction and that this majority had been as large as 11 to 1 or 10 to 2, Nan Patterson would be admitted to bail and not tried again.

At the trial which ended yesterday the jury was deadlocked. Following reports that the jury was 8 to 4 for a verdict of guilty of manslaughter, it was reported yesterday that the jury had stood 8 to 4 for acquittal, and that of the minority none had been in favor of finding a verdict of murder in the first degree, the charge on which the defendant was indicted, but had argued for a compromise verdict of manslaughter.

Nan Patterson remained in her cell nearly all day yesterday in the condition of semi-stupor in which she was carried from the courtroom after the jury had announced its disagreement in the early morning hours. The prisoner seemed unable to realize that her ordeal probably is over. Her sister, Julia Smith, remained at her bedside all day with Mrs. O'Brien, the prison matron, while Dr. F. A. McGuire, the Tombs physician, made frequent visits. Nan Patterson's father saw her.

It was learned that the prisoner was under the influence of strong sedatives when she was taken into court to face the jury. The effect of these was still present yesterday. She declared she had little recollection of what had happened.

Abraham Levy, who defended her, said last night that he would make no motion to have his client admitted to bail until he had talked with District Attorney Jerome.

"It would be neither proper nor courteous for me to precipitate action," said he, "until the District Attorney has had an opportunity to take the initiative, as I surely feel he will. Should he determine otherwise, then it will be time enough for us to act. I will say, also, that bail in any amount can be obtained for the prisoner. A man who is very wealthy and very generous, and who is a friend of mine, has offered to go on her bond. He is not acquainted with my client, and as far as I know, has never seen her."

A rumor gained credence about the Criminal Courts Building yesterday that Mr. and Mrs. J. Morgan Smith, "Nan" Patterson's sister and brother-in-law, at present under indictment for conspiracy, would be reindicted if the present indictment against them is dismissed, as it probably will be. Herbert R. Limberger, their counsel, said that if this course was followed and they were placed on trial it would be for no other purpose than to extract further testimony to be used against "Nan" Patterson.

FINAL SCENE A DRAMATIC ONE.

Intense Expectancy in Court While Awaiting Jury's Announcement.

The history of criminal trials in New York records no more dramatic scene than that which brought the third Patterson trial to a close early yesterday morning.

From early in the afternoon—1:02 o'clock—the jury had been out. At midnight the long delay had begun to tell. The accused, it was understood, was in her cell tossing restlessly on her cot as she awaited the summons which was to decide her fate.

It was known in some mysterious way throughout the Criminal Courts Building that the jury had not agreed, and that there was little chance of an agreement. Soon after midnight Recorder Goff, who had been out to a late dinner, returned to his chambers.

At 12:30 A. M. the atmosphere underwent a sudden change. A rumor quickly spread that a development of moment was at hand. There was a move toward the courtroom so general that it might have been made by signal. Once inside the air was full of intense expectancy. For twenty minutes the wait continued.

At 12:50 o'clock a court officer stuck his head through the door opening from the Recorder's chambers and shouted "Hats off!" Ten more minutes dragged by.

At 1 o'clock Assistant District Attorney Rand, square-jawed and broad-shouldered, entered by a side door and took a seat within the rail. The tension was becoming unendurable.

At 1:30 A. M. the jury, headed by Foreman Aldrich, filed into the box. Some one dropped a cane, which hit the floor with a whack. In an instant every man in the room was on his feet, fancying that Recorder Goff's coming was presaged by the sudden sound.

When the Recorder entered he looked about him for the defendant. It was said that she was ill. She was sent for nevertheless, as the law requires.

At last the door in the rear of the courtroom swung open and the prisoner, half swooning, was borne to her chair. The jurors answered to their names with set faces. Clerk Brophy solemnly warned the spectators that any demonstration following the rendition of the jury's finding would be severely dealt with. Every one wondered what was to come.

With the statement of the Foreman, read by the Recorder, that a point had been reached where an agreement could not be hoped for, a sigh of relief went up. The jury was instructed to retire and try again.

Nan Patterson, an officer holding either arm, was lifted to the pen to await the result of the jurors' conference.

Fifteen minutes elapsed. The jurymen returned to their places. The accused woman, her features a ghastly, chalky white, was brought back to her chair. It was plain that she was near total collapse.

Again came the declaration that agreement was out of the question. Assistant District Attorney Rand, asked if he had any suggestions to make, answered that the discharge of the jury seemed the only course open.

The jury was polled and discharged. As the members filed from the courtroom a human flood overwhelmed them, eagerly demanding how each had voted. The jurors held their tongues and strove to make their way to the street.

The order discharging the jury had hardly been issued when Nan Patterson fainted. Unconscious, she was lifted into a chair and taken back to the cell from which she had come. Her third ordeal—ending as had its predecessors in a mistrial—was over.

As she was carried out a little old man, her father, shuffled toward the door. He had been hardly noticed until the drama was ended.

TO OBSERVE FOUNDERS' DAY.

College of City of New York Has Varied Programme.

President John Huston Finley of the College of the City of New York has announced that the usual college sessions will be omitted to-day, in order to provide for the celebration of Founders' Day, which is to commemorate the founding of the "Free Academy" on May 5, 1849, now known as the College of the City of New York. The celebration will be the first of its kind, and on this account President Finley desires to make the day as noteworthy as possible.

The exercises will take place in the chapel of the old college building, at Twenty-third Street and Lexington Avenue.

The Schiller anniversary will be observed on the same morning. Prof. Emile Schoen will lead a band composed of students and instructors, and an act of "William Tell" will be presented in German. Addresses will be made by eminent alumni.

After the celebration the entire assemblage will proceed to the new college buildings, situated on St. Nicholas Terrace and One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Street, where further ceremonies will take place under the auspices of the Board of Trustees. There will then be a baseball game between the students and the Faculty.

In the evening will take place the sixty-ninth semi-annual debate between the two sister rival debating societies, Phrenocosmia and Cliosia, which were founded in 1851 and 1852, respectively.

The debate will take place at the hall of the Board of Education, Fifty-ninth Street and Park Avenue, at 8 P. M.

TAUNTED, TRIED TO DIE.

Capmaker Who Went Back to Work Called Traitor by Union.

Harassed almost to insanity, his wife and mother-in-law say, by members of his union of capmakers, who called him a traitor, Simon Fessler, thirty years old, tried to kill himself yesterday by throwing himself from the window of his flat on the third floor of 325 East Tenth Street to the stone-paved areaway.

He broke his left leg, suffered general confusions and possibly internal injuries, and was taken to Bellevue Hospital in a critical condition. He was the sole support of his wife, mother-in-law, and three small children.

Fessler went on strike sixteen weeks ago, with the rest of fifty capmakers in the shop where he worked. When the strike had lasted fourteen weeks, and Fessler's savings were exhausted, he went back to work. Since then he has been continually taunted by the strikers, and one day his wife said, he came home with cuts on his head.

OGDEN PARTY BACK.

Bring Little Baggage, Having Lost Most of It in Wreck.

Robert C. Ogden and the guests who accompanied him to the Conference for Education in the South, at Columbia, S. C., arrived home yesterday morning, glad to get home after the trying experiences of the railroad wreck in which many of them were injured and four of the crew killed.

There was a goodly lot of handbags saved from the flames, but few trunks arrived to be checked to the homes of the returned tourists, many of the guests having been left with only the clothes they were wearing at the time of the accident. Many friends were at Jersey City to welcome the party.

CROWDED TRAINS CRASH, BUT DAMAGE IS SLIGHT

Express Dashes Into Local at Bedford Park Switch.

NO ONE SERIOUSLY HURT

Not Pane of Glass Broken by North Adams Express, Although Woodwork of Cars Is Splintered.

There was a narrow escape from a railroad disaster yesterday when the North Adams Express of the New York Central, running at thirty-five miles an hour, crashed into a southbound New Haven Road local just above the Bedford Park Station. All the cars of the local were more or less damaged, while one baggage car was derailed and upset. The express escaped with trifling dents in the engine.

Although both trains were full of passengers only three persons were injured, and those but slightly. Peter O'Donnell, the engineer of the express, probably would have been killed had he not jumped to the ground after shutting off steam and applying the brakes. Not one pane of glass in either train was broken, although the woodwork and the platforms rails of every car of the local were scored, shattered, or twisted. Even in the overturned baggage car the electric lamps were all whole when the wreckers cleared away the débris. Railway men day that the absence of fatality in the collision was extraordinary.

The New Haven Road local travels toward Bedford Park Station on Track 1 because it has to call at Woodlawn. About two hundred yards north of Bedford Park it switches to Track 2, over which it continues to the Grand Central Station.

Usually when the two trains are on time the express and the local arrive at this switch at about 11:15, when one or the other of the trains gets the block signal. The engineer of the express, O'Donnell, declares that he got the "all clear" signal, while James Minty, who was at the throttle of the local, disputes this.

The local was moving south when the express thundered up. They met as on a "V" inverted. The wreck of the cars showed that the express first grazed the rear passenger car, scored deeper into the woodwork of the second, ground huge splinters out of the third, tore away the platform railings of the fourth, then, caught the rear of the baggage car, threw it over into the ditch and carried the local's locomotive with the balance of its steam force a hundred yards down the track.

Minty, the engineer of the local, did not see what was going on until the express engine was directly behind him. O'Donnell, of the express, however, had had time to jump.

When the police reserves and six ambulances arrived, passengers on both trains were still scrambling out of the cars. After a minute's investigation it was seen that through extraordinary good fortune nobody was dangerously injured. Charles Ewing, a newsboy, who lives at 606 East Eighty-eighth Street, who was in the baggage car when the crash came, escaped with a few cuts on the head. The baggage-master of the express, William Everett, was also cut on the head. Engineer O'Donnell, who had been stunned, was taken to Fordham Hospital, but latter left for his home, 642 East One Hundred and Fifty-seventh Street.

The signalman was being sought last night by the police, who wish to obtain his report of the accident.

Traffic was delayed for some time after the collision. Once the wrecking cars arrived, however, the block was soon cleared.

LET BABY FALL AT THE ASTOR

Woman Carrying Child Arrested In Front of Hotel.

A woman who gave her name as Helen Zimmerman attracted considerable attention in front of the Astor Hotel last night. She was walking back and forth carrying a baby in her arms, and, it is said, she let the child fall from her arms several times.

Benjamin C. Risley, who was coming out of the hotel, saw the woman, and took the baby from her. He then called Policeman Finnan and the woman was locked up on a charge of disorderly conduct. The child, which was about two and a half years old, was [illegible]

TOBACCO TRUST SECRETS UNDER SECRET INQUIRY

Refusal of Witness to Answer Reveals Fact of Investigation.

FEDERAL GRAND JURY AT WORK

Contempt Proceedings May Be Brought as Test of Power to Compel Giving of Testimony.

For more than three months the United States Government, through special representatives, has been conducting a searching investigation into the affairs of the American Tobacco Company to ascertain whether or not its operations were in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust law.

The inquiry has not only included the business of the company in the United States, but its operations abroad. The investigation is being conducted by Henry W. Taft, brother of the Secretary of War; E. N. Hill of Boston, and Felix H. Levy of this city. The three have been appointed for the purpose of the investigation, special Assistant United States Attorneys General.

That the Federal authorities were examining into the affairs of the Tobacco Trust was kept secret. It was not until yesterday that the fact that an inquiry was in progress was revealed by the recalcitrancy of a witness, who had refused to answer questions asked him by the Federal Grand Jury.

The Grand Jury, for several days past, has been questioning Edwin F. Hale, Secretary of the McAndrews & Forbes Company, one of the trust's subsidiary concerns. Mr. Hale refused to answer certain questions put to him on the ground that they would tend to incriminate him. Other questions were evaded on the plea that the answers required were too voluminous to be produced without proper notice.

In consequence of Mr. Hale's attitude a presentment covering more than six typewritten pages was handed in to Judge Lacombe of the United States Circuit Court, late yesterday afternoon, and, after argument, Hale was directed to answer the questions. He had not done so when court adjourned, and it is understood he will persist in his refusal.

MAY DECIDE INQUIRY'S SCOPE.

If he does persist, Mr. Taft will ask Judge Lacombe on Monday that he be required to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court. On the outcome of this application will hang, in a large measure, the scope of the entire investigation, inasmuch as Judge Lacombe's ruling will determine whether or not the American Tobacco Company and its subsidiary companies can be compelled to produce books and records before the Grand Jury.

The Grand Jury entered the Circuit Court room at the conclusion of the motion calendar. With them came Mr. Taft, Mr. Levy, John D. Lindsay, De Lancey Nicoll, and Mr. Parker of the firm of Nicoll, Anable & Lindsay. A moment later Mr. Hale was brought into court by United States Marshal Henkel. Mr. Hale was not, however, under arrest.

Foreman Thomas M. Folsom handed to Judge Lacombe a list of questions which Mr. Taft informed the court Mr. Hale had refused to answer after appearing in obedience to a subpoena duces tecum.

The court directed that the questions be answered, and the Grand Jury, with the witness and counsel, retired.

HALE THE FIRST WITNESS.

Mr. Hale was the first witness called. Until he was taken before the jury the inquiry had been conducted along lines which counsel in the case declined last night to indicate.

J. B. Duke, President of the Tobacco Company, is in Europe. Other officials of the company said they had been instructed by counsel to maintain silence.

The American Tobacco Company, as it now exists, was formed last October by a merger of the Consolidated Tobacco, the American Tobacco, the Continental Tobacco, and several minor companies. It is incorporated under the laws of New Jersey and owns and operates, among others, the plants of Allen & Ginter, Richmond, Va.; W. Duke & Sons, New York, and Durham, N. C.; Kinney Tobacco Company, New York and Virginia; W. S. Kimball & Co., Rochester, N. Y., and Oxford, N. C.; Goodwin & Co., New York; Brown Tobacco Company, St. Louis; Gail & Ax Company and Warburg Brothers, Baltimore; Consolidated Cigarette Company, Union Tobacco Company, American Snuff Company, American Cigar Company, H. W. Meyer Tobacco Company, New York; Thomas H. Hall & Co., New York; McAndrews & Ford—Company, H. Ellis & Co., Baltimore, and J. G. Butler Tobacco Company, Baltimore.

The general balance sheet of the company on Dec. 31, 1904, showed:

ASSETS.

Real estate, machinery, good will, trade mark, fixtures, patents, &c.	$139,604,487
Leaf tobacco, manufactured stock, operating supplies, &c.	$4,405,452

The company's activities are by no means confined to the United States. After it secured control of the tobacco business of this country it invaded Europe, where it has many connections.

Colored Woman Sailed for Norfolk—Child Was Poisoned.

Just before the Old Dominion liner Jefferson swung into the North River from her pier at the foot of Beach Street yesterday afternoon on her way to Norfolk a colored woman hurried into the baggage room on the pier and left a ten-year-old colored girl with the baggage-master, with the request that the child might remain in the baggage room for a few minutes. The woman explained that the child's mother had just gone up the street, and would return shortly. The child had a heavy satchel, which she placed on a bench in the baggage room. Half an hour later, after the steamer had sailed, the child was found unconscious. She died after being removed to the Hudson Street Hospital.

It was about 2 o'clock in the afternoon when the negro woman and the child were first noticed on the pier. The woman was dragging the child by the hand. Going into the baggage room, the woman approached Baggage Master William McFarland and checked her trunk to Norfolk, at the same time exhibiting a ticket for Norfolk. The ticket had been issued in the name of Susie Edwards. The woman said that was her name. After checking her baggage she got permission from the baggage master for the child to remain in the baggage room for a while.

Then the woman went aboard the steamship. The boat sailed at 3 o'clock. At half past three Baggage Master McFarland, who had paid little attention to the incident, noticed the child lying on a bench in a corner of the room. Believing the girl was sleeping, McFarland tried to arouse her.

He picked her up in his arms and shook her. Her body hung limp and he summoned Policeman Dennin, who called an ambulance. The surgeon who came from the Hudson Street Hospital expressed the opinion that the child had been drugged. Then the police at Headquarters were notified.

At the hospital the doctors worked for six hours in a vain effort to bring the girl back to consciousness. They refused to say to reporters just what they believed had killed the child, but the police heard that their verdict was poison.

The girl died at 9 P. M.

The detectives learned that the woman had been boarding for two days at the home of Samuel Harris, a negro, who has an employment bureau at 132 West Twenty-sixth Street. He said he first became acquainted with her about two years ago, when she came to New York from her home in Henderson, N. C. He said he had secured a place for her and had brought her here to take it.

Harris told the police that the Edwards woman was twenty-three years old and unmarried. He hasarded a guess that as she was easy to influence she might have been induced to take the child to the steamship pier. He had no idea, he said, whose the child had been.

When the police opened the travelling bag which had been left with the child they found in it three dresses, such as might have been worn by the little girl, some picture books, and toys. There was nothing else to show who the child might be, or where she had come from.

HARRIMAN'S GRIP ON U. P.

Programme for $100,000,000 More Preferred Stock Adopted.

SALT LAKE CITY, May 5.—At a special meeting of stockholders of the Union Pacific Railroad Company to-day the proposal to issue $100,000,000 of preferred stock was approved by the unanimous vote of the holders of 657,761 shares of preferred stock, and 1,118,077 shares of commorf stock.

Judge W. D. Cornish of New York, Vice President of the Harriman system, held proxies for all of the stock represented at the meeting to-day with the exception of 841 shares. Joseph F. Smith, head of the Mormon Church and a Director of the Union Pacific, voted one share. The remaining 840 shares were voted by two Salt Lake City newspaper men, who held proxies for two stockholders.

No protest against the issue of new preferred stock was heard at the meeting, nor was any explanation offered of the purpose of the proposed issue. One of the representatives of the local stock asked how the proceeds of the new issue were to be expended. His query was entered on the minutes, but no reply was given. With this one exception there was no reference to the purpose of the management in providing for this fund of $100,000,000.

In fact typewritten minutes of the meeting had been prepared in advance and were read at the close of the meeting. The entire programme of the Harriman interests was carried out without the slightest hitch or protest.

After the meeting Judge Cornish said no statement would be given out at the present time regarding the purchase of the issue and added: "I do not think anything will be given out until after the Board of Directors has met and acted in accordance with the resolution adopted by the stockholders."

Besides Judge Cornish, W. R. Kelley of Omaha, General Solicitor of the Union Pacific, was the only Eastern representative of the company.

All the others present were local representatives of the Union Pacific.

SOUND LINER IN TROUBLE.

Broken Rudder Chain Holds the City of Lowell Two Hours.

The Sound steamboat City of Lowell of the Norwich Line, which is owned by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company, left her pier, at the foot of Clarkson Street, in the North River, yesterday afternoon shortly after 5 o'clock for New London, Conn. The trip around the Battery was made without any incident, but when she was about opposite Sixty-fourth Street in the East River her rudder chain broke. The accident to the vessel was seen by several other boats which were near by. The tide, which was running strong, carried the vessel, which was loaded with passengers, directly around, and her nose was pointed down stream.

It was found that the steamboat could not be steered, and while passengers were wondering what the cause of the trouble was, the Captain and mates hurriedly ordered the deckhands to throw out the anchors. The boat was thus stopped. Investigation showed that the rudder chain had been broken, but that the accident was not serious. Several tugs steamed up to the Lowell and offered assistance, but this was declined. In the meantime the passengers, who crowded the decks, were told that the boat would be started in a few minutes.

The chain was repaired in about two hours. Then an effort was made by the Captain to turn the steamer around at this point in the river, but it was found that the river was too narrow. The Lowell was then taken down the river to about opposite Thirty-third Street, where the river is broad and the boat was turned around. She then started again for New London.

PITTMAN WANTS A STATUE

Press Agent Gets Miss Ricard's Benefit for Frohman Fund Mixed Up with Lawyer's Project.

The memorial to the late Mrs. Gilbert, the actress, of which much has been heard lately, has resolved itself into what looks like a hopeless tangle. So far it involves Daniel Frohman, Thomas W. Pittman, a lawyer; Miss Amy Ricard of the "College Widow" company, Walter N. Lawrence, manager of the Madison Square Theatre; a press agent who hasn't yet solved the problem of whom he is working for, the Professional Woman's League, a bronze statue, and a stained glass window.

How the tangle will be unraveled none of those interested knew last night, but every one, except Mr. Pittman, said that if Mr. Frohman had put his hand to the erection of a memorial, it would be completed along the lines that he has laid out. Every one deprecates the fact that a misunderstanding should have arisen in any matter with which Mrs. Gilbert's name is connected.

So far as could be learned, Mr. Frohman and Mr. Pittman entered the field for the erection of a Gilbert memorial at about the same time, but with widely different views. Mr. Frohman consulted with the Rev. Dr. Stimson of the Bloomingdale Reformed Church, at Sixty-eighth Street and Broadway, and they came to the conclusion that a window in the church where Mrs. Gilbert worshipped for so many years would be a fitting memorial to her. Mr. Frohman interested some prominent men in the plan and received promises of support. As a result the Gilbert Memorial Committee was formed.

Mr. Pittman formed what was called the Mrs. Gilbert Memorial Association, and he says he has a great many prominent men interested. His scheme was to have a bronze statue of the actress made from a model by Mrs. E. St. John Mathews, the sculptor. This model, he said in a letter which he wrote several days ago, was made by Mrs. Mathews several weeks before Mrs. Gilbert's death, and showed her in the character of "Granny," the play in which she was starring when she died suddenly in Chicago. He says that the model was originally intended as a present to the Professional Woman's League by a friend of Mrs. Gilbert. Mrs. Gilbert's death changed this plan, and Mr. Pittman says that thereafter a number of the league women urged that a large statue be made and erected in one of the public parks.

This brought out a storm of opposition. It was said by Mrs. Gilbert's friends that she would never have consented to anything of the kind, and Mr. Frohman and others pointed out that it would be out of all reason to erect in a city where there was no statue to Booth or to Jefferson, such a memorial to a woman in a character so ephemeral, no matter how loved and revered the original of the statue might have been.

While matters were in this state and Mr. Pittman, who is a lawyer at 28 Park Row, without any theatrical affiliations so far as known, and Mr. Frohman were writing to each other on the subject, Miss Ricard came into the matter. Several weeks ago she went to Mr. Frohman and told him that she and a number of other stage women wanted to help the memorial project along by giving a performance at one of the theatres.

She asked if Mr. Frohman would indorse it and accept the proceeds for his committee. Mr. Frohman consented, and Mr. Lawrence told Miss Ricard that she could have the Madison Square Theatre free for the afternoon of May 4 for a performance of Ibsen's "The Master Builder." On account of the many benefit performances this week the date was changed to May 11.

Meanwhile S. Goodfriend volunteered his services as press agent for the Ricard performance and set to work to stir up public interest in the scheme, but Mr. Goodfriend seemed to have an erroneous impression as to what he was working for. He got out a lot of matter saying that the performance was to be in aid of the monument fund, and this put matters in a worse tangle than ever.

Yesterday Mr. Frohman, having seen the published matter, and recalling that he had indorsed Miss Ricard's benefit plan, sent a letter to Mr. Lawrence in which he said:

"Please note that the performance at your theatre on Friday next is for the Gilbert Memorial Window fund, and not for the monument fund, which is entirely a different affair. I call your attention to this on account of the advance matter appearing in the press recently."

This set Mr. Goodfriend out scurrying for Daniel Frohman. He told Mr. Lawrence he would try to straighten matters out. He failed to connect with Mr. Frohman, and Mr. Lawrence has not seen him since.

"The matter is simply this," said Mr. Frohman yesterday. "Miss Ricard got my sanction to a performance for my fund, and there is no doubt that she is going to give the proceeds to this project. I think the plan for a memorial window the only rational one, and I believe there are other reasons for wanting to buy and erect the statue aside for the desire to honor Mrs. Gilbert."

TWO DROWNED OFF THE HOOK.

Sloop Sinks and Others May Have Been Lost.

At least two of the mackerel fishermen, whose fleet is off Stapleton, S. I., were drowned at sea Thursday night, while fishing off Sandy Hook. It is possible that others also lost their lives. The two men lost were Portuguese from the schooner Vestry of Provincetown, Mass. The sloop Eva R. of New York, Capt. Anderson, is lost, but her crew is saved.

The mackerel fleet of about forty vessels left Stapleton anchorage Thursday afternoon to run outside the Hook and haul the nets after sundown. A gale was blowing. The Eva R. was making her first trip of the season. A blast threw her on her beam ends and she quickly sank. Capt. Anderson and his two men jumped.

The nearest vessel to the Eva R. was the Vestry, Capt. Roberts. Capt. Roberts sent two men in a dory to the rescue. He had all he could do to handle his own boat, which was making leeway fast, and the dory was soon out of sight. Yesterday morning it was picked up capsized.

Capt. Anderson and his two men were rescued by the steam dredge Atlantic.

Some of the fleet did not come up last night. The skippers of the vessels that did believe that more than the Eva R. were lost in the night.

VANDERBILT'S AUTO WRECKED

Paul Sartori Has Miraculous Escape in Accident at Brighton Beach.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt's ninety-horse power Italian racing automobile was wrecked last night at the Brighton Beach track while Paul Sartori was running the car around the track preparing for the race meet there to-day. Sartori was pinned beneath the ponderous machine, and when his would-be rescuers reached the spot they were amazed to see the chauffeur crawl out from under the car on the opposite side and stand up apparently uninjured. The car itself is a wreck, and it did not look last night as though it could be repaired to be available for racing purposes again.

Sartori, who has driven the car for Vanderbilt in all of its big races, including the W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Cup event last season, arrived at the track late in the afternoon. Charles Wridgway was on the track all day in his 1,000-mile nonstop run, and a large number of racing automobilists were on hand to watch the results. Sartori, who had been around the track several times during the afternoon, came out in the evening for a little more practice, as the track has been especially lighted for Wridgway's efforts to make a new record.

Sartori, in the big Italian car, made several circuits of the track directly behind Wridgway, when, in turning one of the curves at a high rate of speed, one of the rear wheel tries slipped, and in a twinkling the big machine rolled over, turning two or three somersaults before it landed, clear off the track, with the wheels up in the air.

The horrified spectators rushed to the spot, expecting to see Vanderbilt's chauffeur badly hurt. His escape was little short of miraculous, for the running gear of the racer was totally smashed. Two wheels were ripped off and the machine looked as though it were eligible for the scrap-iron heap. Sartori will not race to-day.

RESCUER REFUSED NAME.

"Nobody's Business," He Said, After Saving Woman from Park Reservoir.

Mary Johnson, twenty-five years old, who said she was a waitress, living at Cairo, N. Y., was removed in an ambulance to the Presbyterian Hospital, a prisoner, last night. She was rescued from the reservoir in Central Park by a young man who jumped in after her and then disappeared in his drenched clothing, refusing to reveal his name on the plea that it was "nobody's business but his own."

Shortly before 11 o'clock the young man, who was with a friend, saw a young woman climb the iron fence, which surrounds the reservoir, and throw herself into the water on the east side of the lake near Eighty-sixth Street.

He ran to the place, and, not waiting even to throw off his coat, leaped the fence, and swam to the spot where the woman had disappeared. In the meantime his friend ran to the gatehouse, about 500 feet away, and aroused Terence Donohue, the gatehouse keeper. The two manned the rowboat, which is kept in case of emergency, and rowed out. They found the young man supporting the woman, who was unconscious. He was weak from his exertions, and was fast losing his hold upon the woman when the boat appeared. The young woman was revived only after Dr. Mason had worked over her for some time.

On the way to the hospital the woman said that, while she was a waitress at Cairo last Summer she met a young man who seemed to have plenty of money and who paid attention to her. She came to New York, but being unable to find him, determined to kill herself.

NEW YORK BANKER'S ROMANCE

Special to The New York Times.

PEORIA, Ill., May 5.—A Peoria girl's engagement was announced to-day to a banker of New York City. Next month he will take her and her parents to Europe, and the wedding will take place in Paris.

Two years ago Miss Iola Powell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Powell, went to New York to study music. She was employed as a soloist in a church when Robert H. Mainzer became interested in the singer, and their engagement followed.

The bridegroom is junior member of the firm of Heligarten & Co., bankers, of 7 Nassau Street, and, it is said, inherited a fortune at the death of his father.

BANKER PERRY ACQUITTED.

Accused of Setting Fire to a Locomotive Plant at Hegewisch, Ill.

CHICAGO, May 5.—Isaac N. Perry, ex-President of the National Bank of North America, was acquitted to-day of the charge of setting fire to the Chicago Car and Locomotive Company's plant at Hegewisch, Ill., to secure the insurance money. The jury was out only ten minutes.

The locomotive works were burned several months ago, while idle. The National Bank of North America had lent the car company several hundred thousand dollars, and Mr. Perry was charged with having set fire to the plant to recover the insurance to meet the claim of his bank. During the trial nothing but circumstantial evidence was offered by the prosecution.

PLYMOUTH TRUSTEE ILL.

Mr. Boyle Stricken While the Rev. Dr. Hillis Is Speaking.

The Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, was addressing the regular Friday evening prayer meeting last night when John Boyle, a trustee of the church, who lives at 71 Lefferts Place, gave a cry and fell heavily to the floor. The incident interrupted Dr. Hillis's address and caused a sensation among the worshippers. The Rev. William T. Harmon, assistant pastor of the church, was the first to reach Mr. Boyle, who lay unconscious.

With the assistance of another member of the church, he was carried into a parlor at the rear of the lecture room. He was then taken home, Robert Ayers and ex-Commissioner of Elections Benjamin F. Blair going with him.

Two physicians were called. They said that Mr. Boyle had a stroke of apoplexy. He was still unconscious late last night.

Mr. Boyle is seventy-one years old. He is the head of the firm of John Boyle & Co., dealers in cotton duck, whose place of business is at 119 Duane Street.

Dr. Hillis closed the meeting because of the incident.

BLOCK STREETS IN HUNT FOR $8,850 WOMAN LOST

Returning Home in Williamsburg When She Dropped Bills.

SHOCK MAY RESULT FATALLY

Withdrew Money from Banks and Put It in Shirtwaist Bosom—Crowd Searches in Vain.

Traffic was blocked for over an hour yesterday in the neighborhood of Broadway and Wythe Avenue, Williamsburg, by an excited crowd, which scanned every inch of the sidewalks and streets in a vain search for $8,850 in new bills. The money was dropped by Mrs. Marie Slavin of 57 South Sixth Street, who had just drawn it from two Williamsburg banks, with the intention of depositing it elsewhere. She carried the bills in the bosom of her shirtwaist.

Mrs. Slavin was taken to her home in a hysterical condition after hours of vain searching, and she was reported last night to be in a very precarious condition, suffering from shock and heart failure. Mrs. Slavin is about thirty-five years old, and lives with her husband and children at the South Sixth Street address. A few years ago some property in South Fourth Street was left to her by a relative. About a week ago Mrs. Slavin sold the property for $8,750 and deposited the money with the Nassau Trust Company, at Broadway and Bedford Avenue. She had previously deposited $100 in the Dime Savings Bank, at Broadway and Wythe Avenue.

Yesterday Mrs. Slavin decided to withdraw her money from both banks and deposit it elsewhere. Shortly after 1 o'clock she went to the Nassau Trust Company and received her money in eight one-thousand-dollar bills, one five-hundred-dollar bill, two one-hundred-dollar bills, and one fifty-dollar bill.

Mrs. Slavin says she carefully placed the bills in the bosom of her shirtwaist, then walked two blocks along Broadway to the Dime Savings Bank, where she received another one-hundred-dollar bill. She says that she took out the whole amount there and folded it together, but is certain that she replaced it in the shirtwaist. She then crossed Broadway, in Wythe Avenue, close to which, on South Sixth Street, is her home. When she reached her apartments she found that the $8,850 was gone.

She rushed to the corner of Broadway and Wythe Avenue screaming at the top of her voice. A crowd gathered and Policeman Farrington of the Clymer Street Station, hearing what had happened, began a search for the money. He was assisted by hundreds of citizens. A number of newsboys were the most ardent fortune hunters. The crowd was every minute swelled by persons coming off the Broadway ferry, who stopped to learn what had happened and immediately joined in the hunt. It finally became necessary for the police to drive away the mob.

The teller at the Nassau Trust Company convinced the police that the woman's story was true, verifying the denominations of the bills as she had described them. At the Dime Savings Bank, it was said by the teller that he saw the woman take a roll of bills from her shirtwaist, carefully fold in the $100 bill which she drew there, and replace the whole in the bosom of the waist. This brought the search down to very narrow limits, as the woman lives but two blocks from the savings bank.

Women friends of Mrs. Slavin had an idea that the money might have become lost in the folds of her apparel, but a search of her clothing failed to reveal it.

At a late hour last night the police were still searching for the money. Mrs. Slavin is not a strong woman, having suffered from heart failure for some time. It is feared that the loss of the $8,850, which was all she had, may result fatally.

MRS. LESLIE CARTER HURT.

Falls in Alighting from Carriage—Belasco Theatre Dark for Week.

The Belasco Theatre was dark last night and it was announced that, owing to an accident to Mrs. Carter, there would be no further performances of "Adrea" this week. David Belasco, Mrs. Carter's manager, said:

"While stepping out of her carriage last evening in front of the theatre, Mrs. Carter caught her heel on the step and was thrown to the pavement, turning her ankle. Suffering great pain, she was carried into the theatre, and with great difficulty went through her part. Dr. J. P. McGowan of 20 East Twenty-ninth Street was called in, and on examination found that three tendons in the foot had been sprained. She has been in agony all day, and I am almost sure that she will not be able to appear again this season."

Later in the evening Mrs. Carter was seen in her apartment at the Hotel Wellington. She was in bed, with her foot bandaged.

"You see that I am really quite seriously injured," she said. "There is my crutch over in the corner, while my present condition speaks for itself."

TOOK HOTEL'S PET CLOCK.

Fifth Avenue's Ancient Timepiece Found in Rogers's Possession.

While the house detective of the Fifth Avenue Hotel was walking about the corridors last evening at 9 o'clock, and while the doorman at the ladies' entrance on the Broadway side was absent for a moment from his post a man stepped quickly in from Broadway and took a large brass clock which for thirty years has stood on a mantel near the door. Five minutes later the loss was discovered.

At Seventh Avenue and Twenty-fifth Street Policeman O'Connell of the West Twentieth Street Station saw a man who was carrying something under his coat. The policeman opened the coat and found a clock. The man was taken to the police station, where he said he was George Rogers, but refused to give his address.

House Detective Mulholland identified the clock as the property of the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

Two Senators Ready for Gas Trade—Higgins Refused It.

ALBANY, May 5.—Gov. Higgins said to-night, in answer to inquiry:

Messrs. Addicks and Mathewson, representing the Consolidated Gas Company, called on Gov. Higgins this afternoon concerning some provisions of the gas bills. The Governor did not specify the provisions called to his attention.

LAMP OF KNOWLEDGE BARRED

Too Suggestive of Standard Oil on Chicago University Seal.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 5.—The official seal of the University of Chicago, soon to be selected, will not be adorned with the conventional lamp of knowledge. The reason, as given out by Dr. T. W. Goodspeed, the university registrar, to-day, to a designer was not that the university wishes to be unique, but that the lamp is too suggestive of Standard Oil.

"That would never do," said the professor. "As sure as there is a lamp of knowledge on the dic selected there will be a howl of 'Standard Oil!'"

During the thirteen years of its existence the university founded by John D. Rockefeller has got along without a seal. President Harper recently called on students to submit designs.

GIRL DYING OF HYDROPHOBIA.

Drastic Measures Taken in Nyack Against Unmuzzled Dogs.

Special to The New York Times.

NYACK, N. Y., May 5.—Frances, the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Stewart of Upper Nyack, is dying to-day of hydrophobia.

The child was bitten on the face by a strange yellow dog on the afternoon of April 12. The wound apparently healed, but yesterday morning marked symptoms of hydrophobia developed. Doctors were summoned, and the child was taken immediately to the Pasteur Institute, New York City, where the specialists pronounced the case a hopeless one. The little sufferer was brought back to her home in the afternoon.

The Nyack Village Board has called a special meeting to appoint dog catchers, offering $2 apiece for every dog caught unmuzzled on the streets. The Board of Health this afternoon also directed that every dog found on the streets without a muzzle be seized and killed.

APPLICANTS BESIEGE VASSAR.

Between four and five hundred applications for entrance to next year's freshman class are on file and requests are being rejected. Applications are being received five and six years in advance of the time the student will be ready to enter.

President Taylor declared that the college is urgently in need of another residence hall or dormitory on the quadrangle, and until that is supplied the students will be limited to the present number—1,000.

BRITONS HONOR CHOATE AT LORD MAYOR'S FEAST

All Classes of the Kingdom's Notables Represented.

BALFOUR PAYS HIGH TRIBUTE

Says America and Great Britain Now Are United by a Feeling of Common Brotherhood.

LONDON, May 6.—One of the most remarkable gatherings of notables that ever took place at the Mansion House attended last night a farewell dinner given by the Lord Mayor to Joseph H. Choate, the retiring American Ambassador. In the words of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, "it would be impossible to collect a more representative gathering."

Mr. Choate sat at the right hand of the Lord Mayor; next to him was Arthur J. Balfour, the Premier, and then Lord Lansdowne. At the left of the Lord Mayor were the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Duke of Wellington. There were present, among others:

Earls Minto, Dartmouth, Aberdeen, Denbigh, Kintore, Jersey, Onslow, and Crewe; Lords Strathcona, Hereford, Mount Stephen, Lawrence, Hugh Cecil, Balfour of Burleigh, MacNaughton, Alverstone, and Rothschild; Viscounts Goschen and Churchill; Sirs Frederick, Treves, Eric Barrington, Conan Doyle, Thomas Lipton, Alma Tadema, and Purden Clarke; the Hons. John Morley, James Bryce, Austin Chamberlain, and Percy Wyndham.

The Lord Mayors of Liverpool, Manchester, Birmingham, and other large towns came to London for the occasion, and there were present Moberly Bell, manager of The Times, and the editors of other London dailies, Rudyard Kipling, Alfred Austin, Anthony Hope, and other authors, members of the House of Commons of all political parties, and many other notables, the aggregate numbering 300.

Among the Americans were the entire staff of the embassy, Consul General Wynne, Vice Consul Carnegie, and Senator Spooner of Washington.

The wife of the Lord Mayor entertained a dozen ladies, who sat high above the assemblage in the circular music gallery.

A GALA SCENE.

The banquet was spread in the Egyptian hall, which was draped with the banners of past Lord Mayors and the flags of colonies. Arranged behind the Lord Mayor and Mr. Choate were the Corporation plate centrepieces crossed by a huge sword and mace, while the smaller pieces of this wonderful silver service, including the enormous loving cup, were used on the tables. The rich, scarlet uniforms of army officers, together with those of members of the Municipal Government, and a vast staff of red-coated, powdered household attendants, made a gala scene.

The Archbishop of Canterbury pronounced grace and the benediction. The Lord Mayor, a white-bearded, picturesque figure in his rich costume, rose and toasted the King and Queen. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman proposed "The President," eulogizing him as "a genuine, typical character, characteristic of America, a friend of peace, though not perhaps of a quiescent disposition." Premier Balfour, in toasting Mr. Choate, said that no greater honor could have fallen to his lot than that of proposing the toast. Mr. Choate, he said, had been with Britons in days of mourning and of rejoicing, of disaster and of victory, not only as the representative of a great State, but ever ready to take his part in any phase of British public life not connected with politics, and had ever played his part with distinction.

Mr. Balfour dilated on the close relations between the two countries and the common sentiment of amity which survived always despite the mistakes of official leaders. He said that with the lapse of decades the old bitterness had been lost in the historic past; that all causes of enmity had vanished and that there had emerged slowly but surely a feeling of common brotherhood, the surest prospect, he ventured to think, of international peace and progress.

MR. CHOATE'S HOMESICKNESS.

On rising Mr. Choate was greeted with rounds of applause. He said he was homesick and was glad to be returning to his native land, where old friends were diminishing as fast as new ones were being made here, but if he remained much longer he would have a worse disease than homesickness, namely, Anglomania.

An American President had once wisely said that he would not trust an Ambassador in England more than four years because the English would spoil him. They would not spoil him as the children of Israel spoiled the Midians, but contrarywise, by heaping compliments and benefits upon him. He said he did not dare trust himself to speak of the honor he felt in being the guest of such an assembly gathered to say farewell.

"Altogether too much credit has been attributed to me," Mr. Choate said, "for the happy and delightful relations now existing between the two countries. If I have contributed to maintain what I found on taking up my post the last six years will be the proudest of my life. The real reason for the happy state of affairs between the countries, however, does not belong to an Ambassador; the two men responsible for their relations are Lord Lansdowne and Mr. Hay. I have never been called into the presence of the King or his illustrious consort without finding them also full of friendship for the country I represent. The King's instincts for peace are unerring and his genius for conciliation perfect, as he has shown the world in recent weeks."

Before concluding Mr. Choate paid a tribute to Whitelaw Reid, his successor as Ambassador at the Court of St. James's. He said the British people would find that he had been a lifelong advocate of friendly relations between Great Britain and the United States.

Ambassador Choate occupied the leading place in this morning's newspapers. All dwell on the American Ambassador's valedictory in terms of eulogy, and express the greatest pleasure with the tone of the speeches of Premier Balfour and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman and Foreign Secretary Lansdowne, all of whom were anxious to testify to British friendliness for America.

The Morning Post concludes its article as follows: "Thus the Lord Mayor's banquet may be a great international act and a better product of diplomacy than a cheat of treaties."

Mr. Choate will be formally called to the bench of the Middle Temple on Tuesday, when it is expected King Edward, who is also a Bencher, will be present. This is purely a private function.

Consul General Robert J. Wynne will sail for the United States to-day to attend the Beavers trial at Washington. William Phillips, ex-private secretary to Ambassador [illegible]

JAPAN ASKS FRANCE FOR AN EXPLANATION

Angry at Violation of Neutrality by Russia's Fleet.

BRITISH ADMIRALTY'S ACTION

Postponement of Naval Manoeuvres Attributed to Possibility of Complications in the Far East.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cables. Copyright, 1905.

PARIS, May 5.—The Japanese Minister called at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs yesterday and asked for an explanation of certain news received by his Government concerning the violation of neutrality by the Baltic fleet in the waters of Indo-China.

It is only fair to recall that two days before the Minister's visit Admiral de Jonquières left Saigon to carry out distinct instructions to prevent by every means in his power any further violation of neutrality. The Baltic fleet probably left French territorial waters on Wednesday, and possibly information to that effect will be received within the next few hours.

It seems not unlikely that the French colonial officials, believing Rojestvensky really intended to continue his journey, somewhat relaxed their vigilance.

LONDON, May 5.—The Admiralty announces the postponement of the grand naval manoeuvres which had been arranged for next month. In explanation it says that the manoeuvres, if carried out as planned, might cause inconvenience, and if not carried out as planned would fail to give the lessons it is desired to inculcate.

VIEWS OF WAR EXPERTS.

Some of the war experts profess to think the real cause of the postponement is that the Admiralty contemplates as a possibility that the British China fleet may have something to do before long in connection with the Russo-Japanese war. For example, they say Great Britain may be compelled to take a stand in support of Japan with reference to the abuse of neutrality by the Baltic fleet.

It is suggested that if Rojestvensky should persist n making use of French ports the Japanese might attack him in French waters. In such a case, it is argued, France, of her own volition or in response to demands of Russia, might be disposed to pick a quarrel with Japan. Thereupon, the war experts say, Great Britain would be likely to call the attention of France to the presence in Far Eastern waters of a large fleet of British war vessels and intimate that they would be used in Japan's behalf in case of interference with that country by France.

Whether there is anything in this view of the postponement of the naval manoeuvres it is impossible to determine; but it is held by a number of persons to whose opinions considerable weight usually attaches.

ANGER IN JAPAN INCREASES.

TOKIO, May 5.—The Baltic fleet's continued open use of Indo-Chinese ports is producing a profound impression in Japan. The wholesale license enjoyed by the Russian ships is considered by the newspapers as directly flouting Japan and indirectly insulting England by implied disregard for the efficacy of the Anglo-Japanese alliance.

Since France is now equivocally assisting Russia's warlike operations, the press urges immediate action, inasmuch as events have clearly proved the futility of protests.

The views of many Japanese jurisconsults published in the newspapers tend to accentuate the situation. One writer affirms that the only effective course for Japan is to lay an embargo on French merchantment in Far astern waters pending satisfactory action by France.

GAVE JAPANESE THE SLIP.

Nebogatoff's Squadron Found Sunda Straits Too Well Guarded.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 5.—Admiral Rojestvensky, according to a high naval authority, has sailed south to meet the division of the Russian Second Pacific Squadron commanded by Admiral Nebogatoff.

The Admiralty has information that a Japanese division of fast cruisers and torpedo-boat destroyers was sent south for the purpose, if possible, of crippling or destroying Nebogatoff's ships before they could effect a junction with those of Rojestvensky, and there is reason to believe that the Japanese took up a position in the Straits of Sunda through which Nebogatoff originally intended to make the passage into the North Sea.

There is also reason to believe that Nebogatoff first approached the Straits of Sunda, but finding them too well guarded put about and headed north for the Straits of Malacca, his division lacking the protection of fast cruisers and being at a great disadvantage in meeting torpedo boat attacks.

The Admiralty expresses much gratification at the fact that Admiral Nebogatoff has successfully reached the China Sea, but appreciates that the composition of his division renders it particularly vulnerable to a swift adversary, especially as the crews of his ships have not had the training in manoeuvring or the target practice which Admiral Rojestvensky's crews had while off the Island of Madagascar, and the anxiety here will only be completely relieved when it is known that a junction has been effected.

TOKIO, May 5.—Four Russian torpedo-boat destroyers were sighted yesterday west of Hokkadi, (Hokkaido, the northernmost of the Japanese Islands?)

STIGON, Cochin-China, May 5.—The Russian Division, near Hon-Kohe Bay, a short distance north of Kamranh Bay, was May 2 preparing to leave its moorings the following day. Admiral Rojestvensky had previously informed the French authorities of its proposed departure.

PARIS, May 5.—A dispatch to the Havas Agency from St. Petersburg says Admiral Rojestvensky has informed the [illegible] Admiralty of the presence of Japanese warships in the territorial waters of the Dutch portion of the Island of Borneo. If the report is verified, it is added, Russia will protest to the Netherlands Government.

MIKADO'S GIFT TO Y. M. C. A.

Will Donate $5,000 to Japanese Army Branch.

TOKIO, May 5.—The Emperor has notified Mr. Griscom, the American Minister to Japan, of his intention to give 10,000 yen (about $5,000) to the Japanese Army branch of the Young Men's Christian Association.

At the outbreak of the war the association opened branches at the principal bases of operations in Manchuria, following the armies afield, and established recreation and reading tents for the benefit and comfort of the soldiers. Three American Secretaries assisting in the field work made the movement so successful as to win the commendation of the army commanders and gained the recognition and assistance of the Emperor.

TAFT ON PHILIPPINES.

Explains the Government's Aim in the Islands.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—William H. Taft, Secretary of War, talked informally before the National Geographical Society to-night about conditions in the Philippines. The talk was largely a reply to criticisms by Englishmen of the administration of and conditions existing in the islands.

The criticisms were that the American Government spent too much money in education, that there were too many public officers there, that there was a lack of good roads, that the Government was too expensive. The question of Chinese immigration also was the subject of criticism.

Generally the Secretary replied with vigor, declaring that, in view of the peculiar conditions existing, the criticisms were not well founded. He insisted that large expenditures for education were essential to the proper development of the islands.

The Insular Government hoped to build up a body of ten or fifteen thousand Filipino teachers to educate the people in a new common language, a language of free institutions, to teach the people to dignify labor, and instruct every man to uses his mind and hands to a purpose.

Regarding the criticism that there were too many officers in our form of government in the Philippines, Secretary Taft said the government would be much more efficient if an American were in charge in every province, and great improvements would result. But, he added, the effort to teach the people by object lessons what it is to be a free people would not be accomplished. Our system was to give the people as much self rule as possible, the primary rule in dealing with them being honesty and straightforwardness.

Secretary Taft touched on the road improvements being made in the islands and spoke particularly of the opening of the electric line in Manila. The improvements to be made in the harbor of Manila would make it the finest in the Orient.

The Secretary said he knew that the cost of Government was expensive, but he pointed out the many reasons which, he argued, necessarily made this so. He agreed with the charge that there were too many Americans in the Government, but said this number would be gradually reduced as time went on. He agreed, too, with criticisms regarding the tariff, and expressed a hope that it would be reduced.

Mr. Taft argued against the contention that it was necessary to admit Chinese to the Philippines in order to build up the islands. There was a deep feeling against Chinamen, of whom there were now 50,000 in the archipelago. While the islands might develop more slowly with Filipino labor, that development, he said, would be much more advantageous to them.

PREMATURE BLASTS HURT SIX

In Argument and Forgot Fuses Were Lit, Bronx Workmen Say.

The premature explosion of several blasts prepared by the workmen of De Bello & Sibrell, who are clearing ground at 760 to 768 Wendover Avenue for the erection of a number of flathouses, stirred up things in that neighborhood about 6 o'clock last night.

The Bronx felt convinced for a while that the borough had had its first real earthquake. About thirty window panes were broken and six persons received cuts from flying stones and pieces of broken glass. None of them was hurt seriously enough to go to a hospital.

The injured are Mrs. H. Webster and her ten-year-old daughter, Lydia, of 3,827 Third Avenue; Mrs. Selma Huff of 3,823 Third Avenue, and her three small girls, Virginia, Geneva, and Phyllis. The Huffs were eating supper in their kitchen overlooking the lot where the blasting was going on.

A deluge of sand and small rocks poured in through the windows, breaking every pane of glass and ruining almost everything that was in the kitchen. The children were scared almost out of their wits, and the physician, who was called in after a while, had three bad cases of hysteria on his hands.

A single rock crashed into a room occupied by the Websters, mother and daughter, and knocked down a heavy wooden partition, which struck Mrs. Webster. The girl was badly cut by glass.

The cause of the explosion is not known. The police were looking for the foreman in charge of the work and the contractors last night to get an explanation.

Some of the workmen said that a dispute about the proper covering of the blasts under preparation so preoccupied the men in charge that they did not notice that some of the fuses had been lit. Most of the harm was said to have been done by a box of dynamite left open on the ground, which was exploded by the blasts.

FOR FEDERAL SUPERVISION.

Yale Lecturer Says States Tax Insurance Companies Too Heavily.

NEW HAVEN, May 5.—"The Federal Supervision of Insurance," was the subject of a lecture delivered at Yale University this afternoon by Ralph W. Breckenridge of the Omaha bar. Mr. Breckenridge declared that if Congress shall see fit to supplement its direction to the Bureau of Corporations by providing for complete supervision of insurance it will perform a great and needed public service.

"Such supervision," he said, "will assure the maximum of corporate publicity which is demanded not only for the policy holders, but to preserve the corporations themselves against unjustifiable and malicious attacks, for the interests of the policy holders and the insurance companies are identical.

"Inter-State insurance is 'commerce among States' and the general good requires its regulation as such. The duty of Congress is plain, and no phantom of State rights should intervene between that duty and its performance.

"The original purpose of State supervision was to expose the weakness and fraud of irresponsible companies, but latterly the great accumulation by the companies of money in sight has proved too strong a temptation for the States to resist. Accordingly whenever the need for funds has presented itself, as it almost constantly has, an onslaught has been made by the State Legislatures upon the money held in trust for the people by the insurance companies, until now the States receive from the companies doing business in the United States under varying forms of exactions a sum that has never been definitely calculated, but which is estimated at from $20,000,000 to $25,000,000 a year.

"But this is not all. It is within the experience of nearly all companies, fire and life, that they have served as bankers for dishonest petty officials connected with many State insurance departments, who have boldly levied blackmail. This is a scandal that no self-respecting people can allow to continue."

Bills Signed by Governor.

ALBANY, May 5.—Gov. Higgins to-day signed bills, including the following:

Mr. Rogers's, providing that banks designated for deposit of State moneys may in lieu of surety bond deposit with the State Controller outstanding unmatured bonds of the State.

Mr. La Fetra's, providing that the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of New York City may before May 15 amend the tax budget for the current year by eliminating the appropriation under the title, "Fund for Street and Park Opening."

POPULAR ASSEMBLY OUTLINED BY ZEMSTVOS

Second Great Congress Assembles in Moscow.

PLAN MEETS WITH FAVOR

Executive Power Not Mentioned in Programme for Giving Russia Representative Government.

MOSCOW, May 5.—The most ambitious project of the new governmental organism contemplated by the rescript of March 3, namely, a popular assembly, is being discussed by the second great Zemstvo Congress, which opened here to-day.

The December congress at St. Petersburg attracted perhaps greater attention owing to the drawing up of a bill of rights startling in Russia's bureaucracy-ridden State and blazing an adventurous way which has been followed by many bodies since; but the present congress is ambitious to play the part of a constitutional convention and to formulate the long-desired Constitution of the empire.

It is composed of 182 delegates from all the Zemstvos throughout Russia, and is meeting privately, no permission having been given, and representatives of the press generally are excluded, but The Associated Press is able to give the following complete outline of the project under discussion.

The proposal contemplates a bicameral body consisting, first, of a house of popular representatives elected directly on the basis of universal manhood suffrage, and second, "a house of semstvos," or Senate elected by indirect choice, the members being chosen by organs of the local self-government—that is, provincial zemstvos and municipal assemblies, the two houses to be co-ordinate.

The franchise for the Representatives appertains to all males twenty-one years old except soldiers, police, and criminals, on the basis of either residence or taxpaying in the district. Candidates are to be chosen on the system of double elections; if there is no majority at the first election the candidate obtaining a plurality the second time is elected. There is to be a triennial term for members of the popular house, and Senators are to be chosen for the same term as the bodies electing them. Vacancies in both houses will be filled by new elections. Members are not bound to follow the instructions of constituents.

Under the plan for the election of members of the popular house the empire will be divided into districts of a population of 150,000 to 200,000, one member for each district. In the election of the Senators the plan gives a decided preference to urban dwellers, as a proportionately larger representation is allowed to the cities.

The project further contemplates the extension of organizations of local self-government in all parts of the empire, and reorganization on the principle of popular representation, excluding grouping into nobility, peasantry, &c.

The project was exceedingly well received, and probably will be adopted in its main lines by the congress. It is noticeable that the programme confines itself entirely to the proposed representative assembly, not mentioning the Executive, the intention being to avoid any attempt at definition of limitation of the powers of the Emperor.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 5.—Emperor Nicholas has dissolved the Ministerial Committee on Schools, over which M. Witte presided.

Wagner Causes Arrest of Three Men on Charge of Conspiracy.

Detectives from the Central Office in Brooklyn last night arrested three men charged with "conspiracy to commit a crime of a felonious nature." The men described themselves as James Wood of 212 South Fourth Street, John McCormack of 352 Herkimer Street, and Edward Walsh of 204 South Fifth Street. They were locked up in the Adams Street Station.

The complainant against them is A. Wagner, a mechanical engineer, who has an office on Centre Street, Manhattan, and who lives at 417 Third Street, Brooklyn. Wagner answered an advertisement recently, which said that a partner was wanted for a business of splendid promise. One of the men arrested last night visited him and told him that they had a scheme by which they could get advance information from the race tracks.

Wagner went with them to a hotel on Broadway, Manhattan, where he bet $20 on a tip which the man gave him. He was successful. The next day he bet $1,500 and lost. The trio explained that there had been a hitch in the arrangements and Wagner bet $500 more. Again he lost. Then he told Capt. Harkins of the Central Office in Brooklyn of his experiences.

At the suggestion of Capt. Harkins Wagner explained to the trio that he had no more money, but that he had a Jersey friend who might invest.

The trio called at the home of Mr. Wagner to meet the friend last night, but met three detectives as well.

In the negotiation which Wagner had with the trio, they showed him an elaborately equipped office with several telephones and telegraph instruments in it in Williamsburg, which the police of the Lee Avenue Station tore out last night. The wires from the instruments led nowhere.

SIX RACE HORSES BURNED.

Two Fires at St. Louis Fair Track Cause $10,000 Loss.

ST. LOUIS, May 5.—Six race horses were burned and twelve stables destroyed at the St. Louis Fair Association's race track to-day. It is believed that the fire was of incendiary origin. The loss amounts to $10,000.

One fire started soon after midnight and three horses belonging to Frank Gering were burned to death. Two hours later another fire started and three more horses were lost. They were Sam Houston, $2,000; Hadrian, $2,000, and Lovable, $1,000. The two former were owned by Harry Mack of St. Louis and Lovable was the property of Kavanaugh & Breed. Breed.

The doors of all the stables were thrown open when the second fire started and 215 racers stampeded, but all were caught during the forenoon.

TOO GENEROUS TO BOERS.

Chamberlain Intimates That Great Britain is Storing Up Trouble.

LONDON, May 5.—In a speech before the committee of the Unionist Association of Birmingham to-night Joseph Chamberlain declared that they must prepare for another fight on Irish home rule.

With reference to granting a Constitution to the Transvaal he said he sometimes feared that by unexampled generosities feared that by unexampled generosity to the Boers Great Britain had done too much and given them a chance to regain by political agitation what they had lost in the war.

KILLED BY 11,000 VOLTS.

Employe's Death in Interborough Power House Shut off Current.

Passengers and emloyes on all the lines fed from the Interborough Rapid Transit Company's power house at Fifty-ninth Street and Tenth Avenue noticed at 2 o'clock this morning that all the lights went out for a few seconds and the power was shut off. Almost instantly it was restored.

In the big power house the foreman ran along the series of switchboards. Lying dead at No. 3 he found Charles Meehan of 880 Tenth Avenue.

Dr. Vanderveer of Roosevelt Hospital said a few minutes later that the man's death had been mercifully quick. The foreman said Meehan had been cleaning switches and had probably touched some of the non-insulated parts and had received 11,000 volts. Meehan was married.

BRITT DEFEATS WHITE.

Gets Decision Over Englishman After Police Stop the Fight.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., May 5.—James Britt of this city and Jabez White, the Champion of England, fought twenty rounds at Woodward's Pavilion to-night, and the referee, Ed Smith of this city, rendered his decision in favor of Britt, after the local lad had knocked the Englishman down and the police had entered the ring and ended the encounter. White was in great distress, and would undoubtedly have been knocked out had the fight continued.

There was little excitement at Corbett's place this afternoon when the fighters stripped for weighing in. The articles of agreement called for 133 pounds at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of the contest. Both men easily came within the specified notch, and their appearance showed that each had trained to the minute. Speculation on the result was light, Britt opened a strong favorite at 4 to 10 during the day, and these figures continued until the men entered the ring.

Britt seconds were "Spider" Kelly, Frank Rafael, "Tiv" Kreling, and "Curt" Richardson. Charles Mitchell, ex-heavyweight champion of England and White's manager, was the chief adviser in the Englishman's corner. He was assisted by "Jimmy" Lawler, "Smiling" Metzger, and "Young" Mitchell.

Before the fighters toed the scratch Battling Nelson appeared in the ring and announced that he would fight the winner, with a side bet to be made of $10,000. Britt and White both expressed their willingness to accept the offer.

SIGNS OF CHILD'S MURDER.

Mother Declared Boy Was Kidnapped from Farmhouse.

Special to The New York Times.

DANBURY, N. H., May 5.—The discovery to-day in an ashbox in the Braley home of a dozen pieces of human bones and a half-burned swallow's nest has turned the story of a kidnapping into the belief that Elwin Braley, three years old, who disappeared on Thursday, was the victim of murder. The largest piece of bone is apparently a section of a child's spine, four inches long.

The half-burned nest indicates that a fire was started in the chimney, which had not been used for some time. The nest was burned from its position and fell to the bottom of the chimney. Shortly afterward the aperture was cleaned out.

It is probable that the body of another Braley child who died fourteen months ago will be exhumed.

Mrs. Sadie Braley, the mother, declares that Elwin disappeared in less time than he could have toddled away.

HERMANN TELLS HIS STORY.

Says His Wife Hit Him and Knocked Him Into Brook.

George Hermann, the lumber merchant whose wife, Florence Crosby Hermann, is suing him for separation, took the witness stand in the Supreme Court yesterday and denied the story of his wife that he had ill-treated her. On the contrary, he said, it was Mrs. Hermann who had done the ill-treating. While they were in camp on the farm of Selah Decker, the old guide and hunter of the Pennsylvania woods, Mr. Hermann said Decker was continually "butting in" between the witness and Mrs. Hermann. Whenever Mrs. Hermann demanded money from her husband, Hermann said, Decker helped her in arguing for it.

On one occasion, Hermann said, his wife slapped him over the head with a wet towel. Once, he also said, she quarreled with him on an old rustic bridge, and hit him so that he fell into the water of the brook beneath the bridge. Then when he went home to get dry clothes, he said, Mrs. Hermann and Decker, the old scout, walked off together, laughing at his predicament. On another occasion, Mr. Hermann said, while they were hunting in the woods his wife struck him with the barrel end of a gun, and hurt him so that he was compelled to lie down. Once, when he was in bed, he said, Decker entered his room and called him a name, and Mrs. Hermann hit him in the face because he, Hermann, had told Decker that Decker would have to leave the camp. The witness said that once when Decker told him that Hermann ought to settle about $10,000 on Mrs. Hermann he answered that he had no such amount, as he depended on his mother for money. Then the old scout told him he ought to get the $10,000 from his mother.

Mr. Hermann said that after washing his hands one day he forgot to pick up his diamond rings, which he had left on the washstand. Upon learning that his wife had picked up the rings, she asked her to hand them over. She replied: "I will give you the rings if you will give me some money."

"Then," continued the witness, "I said: 'Florrie, give me my property; I have no money.' She said: 'Well, then, give me notes.' I gave her two notes for $550, payable in seven months, but I never got my rings back."

FLORAL GIFT FROM BIRDIE.

Assemblyman's Wife Summons Him Into Extraordinary Session.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 5.—Not in years has there been such a gorgeous floral display as was witnessed in the Senate and Assembly chambers. A Brooklyn Assemblyman walked into the chamber with his wife.

"Oh, isn't this beautiful!" she exclaimed. Then her eyes, in wifely pride, caught sight of a floral piece on her husband's desk.

"Look," she said, "there are flowers on your desk, too. I wonder who sent them?"

"Some of my constituents of course," said the Assemblyman.

"I'm curious to see the card," she said, and this is what she read.

"With sincerest regards, from Birdie."

There was an extraordinary session called for the Brooklyn member immediately.

POLICE PARADE IS TO-DAY.

Men Grumble at Price of Collars and Sleeve Emblems.

The police parade will take place to-day. Every station house in the city became a distributing point last night for the collars which the men will wear through the Summer. There was considerable grumbling because the patrolmen are compelled to pay 20 cents each for the collars. One policeman found out who supplied them and called the firm by telephone, representing himself to be a Sixth Avenue clothier. He asked the price of the collars and was told he would be supplied with them for $1 a dozen, larger quantities for less. The collars are bought independently by each Captain for the men in his command.

The policemen who manage traffic were also complaining over the fact that they are required to buy wheels at 25 cents each as emblems to be worn on their sleeves. They say that 10 cents would be enough for that [illegible] the parade the [illegible] and [illegible] the crowd at [illegible]

LEGISLATURE ADJOURNS; NO SAVINGS TAX REPEAL

Ahead to Gov. Higgins Marks Last Day of Session.

RAINES HOTELS UNDER BAN

Important Excise Amendments Ready for Governor—Niagara and Goodsell Bills Allowed to Die.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 5.—Having done some things desired of it and left undone certain things it ought not to have done, the one hundred and twenty-eighth session of the New York Legislature ended this afternoon in a spectacular setting of flowers and oratory. The calendars were cleared some time before the hour set, so that the Senate adjourned at 1:55 o'clock, and the Assembly at 2 o'clock.

Gov. Higgins was thwarted in his final effort, made through an emergency message, to redeem his campaign pledge for repeal of the savings bank surplus tax. The bill was passed in the Senate, 30 to 16, but was killed in the Assembly through the activity of Assemblyman Merritt of St. Lawrence County.

"Gov. Higgins is pledged to the repeal of the savings bank tax law," said Senator Cobb, "and there was an implied pledge in the Republican platform. Yesterday some of us were branded as bolters. And yet to-day the very leaders who denounced us are advocating that we repudiate our party platform and the pledge made by our Governor to the electors of the State."

"Senators who are urging the defeat of this measure," said Mr. Page, "are trying to repudiate the most solemn pledge ever made by a political candidate."

"I want to warn my Republican colleagues on this floor," Mr. Elsberg added, "that if we vote down this bill we are going to do exactly what one does who obtains property under false pretenses."

The Assembly did not get the formal statement of charges against Justice Warren B. Hooker from the Judiciary Committee, and delay on the hearing will result. The statement must be adopted in special session, and then adjournment taken to allow Justice Hooker time to prepare his answer.

The Niagara power condemnation scheme was killed for another session, the Cassidy bill reposing in the files of the Committee on Rules.

The Goodsell railroad bills, which have appeared in one form or another for several years, and bearing the names of various sponsors, the purpose being to validate certain disputed franchises, also died.

The amendments designed to do away with the Raines law hotel and other evils that have been fostered by the Raines excise system, were passed and await the Governor's signature. Under the Ambler bill, as passed, any taxpayer may bring about an immediate inspection of any place where liquor is sold as to its compliance with the requirements of the excise code, as well as the building, fire, and health regulations.

Senator Platt was favored by the passage in the rush of the last few minutes in the Assembly of a bill which will make it possible for the new Hotel Gotham on Fifth Avenue to serve liquor to its patrons. The Gotham is within the proscribed distance of a church. The vote on the bill, introduced by Senator Saxe, was 92 to 39.

Isaac V. Baker, Jr., of Washington County was taken care of by the reappropriation in the Supplemental Supply bill of $50,000 for a site for an insane asylum in that county. The total appropriation in the bill was $400,000.

The Tully bill, increasing the State Railroad Commission from three to five members, received its final vote of approval to-day.

The increase of power and in number of deputies for the Superintendent of Elections in the metropolitan district is ready for the Governor's approval.

The Elsberg bill changing the election law by reducing the number of voters necessary for an election district in New York City from 650 to 500, and making the last registration day three weeks before election, was passed.

The case of James Stetson Metcalfe, dramatic critic of Life, was represented in the bill introduced by Freidel, Eighth New York, making the exclusion of persons from theatres unlawful under certain conditions. The bill was passed unanimously.

Just before the Senate adjourned Minority Leader Grady on behalf of the fourteen Democratic Senators presented to Lieut. Gov. Bruce a handsome silver loving cup. On behalf of the thirty-six Republicans Senator Malby presented to the Lieutenant Governor a diamond ring. The complimentary speeches of each were enthusiastically applauded.

Speaker Nixon in his review complimented the members on the passage of the Stock Transfer and Mortgage Tax bills. The work of the Stevens committee, he said, would confer benefits on the people of the State and city.

Minority Leader Palmer followed with a severe criticism of the policy of the administration, especially in the matter of expenditure and taxation. He said:

"Not only have the Legislature and the Governor ignored the recommendations for economy contained in the Governor's message, but they have, in defiance of the Higgins law, which Mr. Higgins, as State Senator, was largely instrumental in passing, provided $27,000 for a deficiency incurred by the Odell-Morgan Elections Bureau in New York City in excess of its appropriation last year, and for a deficiency of about $450,000 illegally expended by the State Lunacy Commission.

"The burdens of taxation which the Governor, in his annual message, said that it would be unwise to increase at this time, have been added to by the imposition of a special tax upon insurance premiums by the stock transfer tax, and by a prospective tax upon mortgages.

"It is now clear as never before that the revenue derived from a new indirect tax is already expended, in the minds of the Republican State leaders, before the tax is enacted; that each new tax begets a new extravagance, and each new extravagance begets new taxation, so that there is an endless chain running from the pockets of the taxpayer to the sinecure officeholder or some other of the army of taxeaters with which the State Government is becoming more and more infested.

"The scandals, charges, countercharges, and rumors affecting the business management of the Equitable Life Assurance Society having become acute and there being no appearance of an intent to take official action on the part of the Governor, the Attorney General, or the Legislature, the Democratic leader in the Assembly attempted to offer a resolution for a legislative joint investigation in order that the interest of the policy holders might be protected and thorough publicity brought about, but was prevented by the objection of the Republican leader.

"As a whole, the Legislature has been a good one," Gov. Higgins said to-night. "A great deal of good legislation has been passed. It is always true of a Legislature that some things may be open to criticism, because the introduction of bills, not wholly in the interests of the people, cannot be prevented. But when all the measure have been disposed of I am sure that very few bad bills will be found on the statute books.

"I am very much disappointed at the failure of the Legislature to carry out the recommendation made in my message for repeal of the savings bank tax. I was told yesterday that the Assembly would pass the bill this morning. I had more reason to take in the Senate than in the Assembly."

The Governor left to-night for a ten

GAS AND 4-YEAR TERM BILLS AWAIT MAYOR

Five Lighting Measures Come to Him for Approval.

STATE BOARD MAY CUT PRICE

Consumers' Hope in New Commission —Season's Batch of City Legislation Reviewed.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 5.—The gas legislation was completed to-day with the concurrence of the Assembly, by unanimous vote, in the changes made by the Senate yesterday. It remains for Mayor McClellan to pass on five of the measures, which are city bills, before they go to the Governor.

The State Utilities Commission measure goes directly to the Governor, but he will not act on it until after his ten days' vacation at Cambridge Springs. On this commission now depends the private consumer's hope for cheaper gas in New York City.

In the closing hours the Republican leaders put the Tammany Senators face to face with their own proposition for seventy-cent gas, introduced by Senator Fitzgerald early in the session, when there was no idea that the gas agitation would be taken seriously by the majority. The Fitzgerald bill was the first on the Senate's calendar to-day.

As soon as they looked at the calendar the Tammany men recognized the purpose to embarrass them by compelling them to vote on the bill. Most of them voted against eighty-cent gas yesterday.

Senator Fitzgerald consulted with several of his associates, and then left the Chamber, not returning until the Senate had finally adjourned. He explained that he had been called out to see "a sick friend."

While the bill was on the calendar on the order of third reading, it was also on the table, and it was necessary that some Senator make the motion to take it up. No such motion was made.

Senator Walter L. Brown (Rep.) of Oneonta, who cast the deciding vote against the eighty-cent gas bill, to-day said, in explanation of his action:

"I favor the State commission because I think justice will be done in all parts of the State on the question of the price of gas and electric light. It would have been unfair to embarrass such a commission by placing such a maximum price on gas in New York."

In the closing hours of the Senate the fate of a number of important New York City bills was determined.

The Agnew bill providing a four-year term for the Mayor was brought up on reconsideration of the vote by which it failed yesterday, and was passed, 29 to 16.

The amended Committee of Nine's Police bill was killed, the vote being 23 to 21, three less than the number needed to pass it.

The Three-Platoon Police bill was killed, 23 to 20.

The Hartman bill which allows street cleaners in New York extra compensation for work on Sundays and two weeks' vacation annually, with pay, was passed.

Mayor McClellan's veto was sustained on the Agnew bill to limit the time during which action may be taken for the removal of or for damages by reason of certain encroachments upon streets and public places in New York.

The Hackett bill for a new hospital north of Chelsea and south of lower Harlem on the west side was passed and goes to the Governor.

The conference report on the Gardner bill providing that in all future subways the city shall have control of the pipe galleries was adopted.

The Freidel bill designed to prevent "any more Allen Streets" by forbidding the construction of elevated roads on certain east side streets, Delancey, Grand, and Clinton among them, was killed by motion of Senator McCarren to lay the bill aside.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Guy, whose duty it has been throughout the session to look after all city bills, tonight issued a statement showing what legislation the city had obtained and what bills affecting the city had failed to pass because of opposition of the city authorities.

Mayor McClellan's chief triumph, he declared, was the passage of his bill for a local Water Supply Commission and permitting New York City to go into other counties for additional water supply. He gave credit to him for the bill introduced by the Stevens committee giving the city the right to generate electric power from its water sources. On the gas question the attitude of the Mayor had been in most respects vindicated.

Following are minor measures introduced at the request or with the approval of the Mayor and passed:

For the issue of $1,230,000 of corporate stock for enlargement of the Metropolitan Museum of Art; conferring additional powers upon the Deputy Commissioner of Charities for the Borough of Brooklyn; for sale of buildings acquired in condemnation by the Sinking Fund Commissioners instead of by the Borough Presidents; compulsory filing of birth certificates with the Department of Public Health; authorizing the Police Commissioner to regulate street traffic; for issue of corporate stock to make up deficiencies resulting from non-collection of taxes; for maintenance of Carnegie libraries; for use in the court of certified copies of records in the Controller's office; authorizing the city to appropriate money for Memorial Day observances; providing that interest on awards in condemnation proceedings shall run from the date of entry of order confirming the Commissioners' report; authorizing the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to issue corporate stock for the proportionate cost of public improvements assumed by the city; permitting the Mayor to designate a clerk to perform the manual labor of signing bonds and corporate stock when authorized by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment; placing West End Avenue north of Seventieth Street in the jurisdiction of the Park Department; increasing the amount of special revenue bonds that may be issued for emergency purposes from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000; extending the area of assessment for the extension of Riverside Drive; providing increase for the Public School Teachers' Retirement Fund by deduction of 1 per cent. from the salary of all teachers; exempting teachers' pensions from execution; authorizing the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to assume part of the cost of opening West Farms Road and other streets and avenues where no part of such cost has already been assumed by the city; providing for investment of moneys paid into the hands of the City Chamberlain; permitting the Commissioners by a two-thirds vote providing that interest on the cost of property purchased by the city without condemnation shall run from the date of execution of the contract.

HUGHES AND GROUT PLEASED.

Expect State Commission to Adjust Price for Gas Satisfactorily.

Both Charles E. Hughes, counsel for the Stevens committee in its gas investigation, and Controller Grout yesterday expressed themselves as confident that the State Utilities Commission would have ample power to reduce the price of gas in New York City. Mr. Hughes said:

"The action of the Legislature was all right. I think the State Commission will find that it has all the needful power to act on any price reductions, so long as the present legal maximum rate of $1 is not exceeded.

"If the city is assured of pure gas of the right power and pressure, as it is under the legislation passed, the rate shortly will take care of itself. As to the manner in which the Senators voted on the bills, I think they completely exposed the pretenses of many political organizations and of many members."

Controller Grout said:

"The bills which have been passed will surely serve a useful purpose, and will prove better, I am inclined to think, than the passage of a straight seventy-five-cent bill. Should a large and radical reduction have been made at once it might have done more harm than benefit. The argument that investors would be injured by such action had its effect, and the State Commission can easily bring about any proper price reduction. The cut in electric lighting prices is a good thing, and the State Commission bill idea is an excellent arrangement."

Representatives of several civic organizations in the city have telegraphed Gov. Higgins, asking a hearing to present objections to the State Commission's bill. The organizations represented in the request are the New York Board of Trade and Transportation, Citizens' Union, People's Institute, East Side Civic Club, and Riverside and Morningside Heights Association.

The Committee on Legislation of the Citizens' Union has asked for a hearing on the bill transferring the franchise powers to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

Charles F. Mathewson, counsel for the Consolidated Gas Company, last night said that he had not examined the State Commission bill with sufficient care to tell whether he believed the commission had ample power to order cuts in gas rates in New York. He added:

"I will say, however, that I believe a small commission, the members of which have no other business except to keep in touch with lighting matters and to ascertain the true state of affairs, will be able to look into the situation far more carefully and justly than could the Legislature, or even a legislative committee.

WHIPPLE AS FOREST HEAD.

Senate Clerk Appointed in Commissioner Middleton's Place.

ALBANY, May 5.—Senate Clerk James S. Whipple of Salamanca, Cattaraugus County, succeeds De Witt C. Middleton of Watertown as Forest, Fish and Game Commissioner.

Gov. Higgins this morning sent to the Senate the nomination, which was immediately confirmed. The term is four years, at a salary of $5,000. He appoints a deputy at $2,500, and each is required to give a bond of $10,000. The present deputy is J. Duncan Lawrence of Bloomville, Delaware County. Minority Leader Grady made a complimentary speech on the nomination.

Gov. Higgins nominated and the Senate confirmed Jerome B. Johnson of Oyster Bay and Michael Hines of New York City to be Port Wardens for New York, and reappointed William R. Stewart, Anna G. De Peyster, and Stephen Smith of New York to succeed themselves as State Charity Commissioners.

BEEF TRUST BONDS READY.

Said to be Prepared for Employes Who May Be Indicted.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 5.—Strong testimony in the investigation of the alleged Beef Trust is said to have been presented to the Federal Grand Jury to-day. Among the most important witnesses was Jesse P. Lyman, former President of the National Packing Company. He was questioned by the jurors for more than one hour, and was notified to reappear next Monday, when the jury reassembles.

John S. Miller, counsel for the packers, and Eugene E. Prussing, attorney for the Etna Trading Company, were in consultation with District Attorney Morrison at night, and it was announced that the corporation representatives had arranged to give immediate bonds for any of its men who may be indicted. It has been declared, however, that no indictments will be returned until the end of the session.

OBJECTS TO STRUCK JURY.

Plaintiff in Suit Against Bankers Seeks New List.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday handed down a decision in regard to special struck juries. The decision had to do with the case of the Industrial and General Trust against J. Kennedy Tod and others. The suit is brought to recover about $1,000,000 from the Reorganization Committee of the Birmingham, Sheffield and Tennessee River Railway Company.

This is the third trial. On the first trial there was a verdict for the plaintiff of $358,000, which was reversed in the Court of Appeals. On the second trial the complaint was dismissed, but the Court of Appeals held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover.

Thereupon the defendants asked for a special struck jury because of the large amount and the complicated questions involved. The Special Commissioner made a list of forty-eight names as required by law. This list included largely bankers and accountants.

The plaintiff objected to this sort of a list because the defendants are bankers, and the Appellate Division yesterday ordered that the jury be selected after a different fashion.

Wanamaker Fifteen-Dollar Clothing For Men

THIS IS a very popular price for Men's Business Suits, and it is a price that will pay for very exceptional qualities when the suits are properly planned.

In the first place, Wanamaker Clothing is made of absolutely pure wool fabrics. The style is just as carefully designed as though the suit was to be sold for double. The shaping of the collar, which means everything in the coat, is done by hand. The inside work on the coat is done just about twice as well as in ordinary fifteen-dollar clothing. This means that a man can safely pay this price at Wanamaker's, and get a suit that is going to be shapely as long as it is worn.

The collection includes Single-breasted Sack Coat Suits, of fancy mixed cheviots and worsteds.

Single and Double-breasted Sack Coat Suits, of black thibet. Very remarkable suits at the price.

Also a collection of Double-breasted Blue Serge Sack Suits, half-lined, for hot-weather wear, at $15 a suit.

Wanamaker Raincoats at $15 are made of fine Oxford mixed worsteds, modeled after our fine overcoats.

Of course, we have clothing of all good grades, but the store can be safely measured by the clothing it sells at this popular price.

EX-NAVAL OFFICER IN TROUBLE

Alfred Owen, Spanish War Veteran, Convicted of Defrauding Hotel.

Alfred Crosby Owen, a graduate of Annapolis, who served through the war with Spain, and left the naval service in 1902, was found guilty in the Court of Special Sessions yesterday of defrauding the Hotel Buckingham out of $35. Upon his assertion that his relatives would settle the bill if they were communicated with, the Justices remanded him until Monday and placed his case in the hands of Probation Officer Graveur for investigation.

Owen, who is a good-looking young fellow, gained notoriety last Summer, when he was arrested in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, charged with passing a check signed with the name of Stephen B. Elkins, Jr., son of Senator Elkins of West Virginia. That case never went further than the police courts.

Owen's father was a distinguished officer in the civil war and retired from the navy in 1876, dying the following year. Young Owen was born in Brazil while his father was there in the United States naval service.

SENDS HALVES OF BILLS.

Contributor to Conscience Fund Afraid Money Would Go Astray.

Collector Stranahan yesterday received at the Custom House a letter containing the lower halves of five United States bills, two tens, two fives, and one one-hundred-dollar bill. The letter read:

"Please forward the inclosed parts of bills to the Secretary of the Treasury, which I have requested him to treat as duties and interest thereon on goods brought from Canada. I choose this method for safety in transmission."

The writer evidently intended the money as conscience money, and afraid that it would go astray.

CITY COLLEGE CELEBRATES.

Commemorates Foundation of Free Academy, from Which It Grew.

The foundation of the "Free Academy" from which the College of the City of New York grew was celebrated yesterday by ceremonies in the chapel of the old building at the corner of Twenty-third Street and Lexington Avenue.

President John Huston Finley said that the college had properly no personal founder, but an impersonal one in the City of New York, and that while this was true there were two men, Townsend Harris and Robert Kelly, whose work for the college really entitled them to be considered as founders.

Prof. Alfred G. Compton, on behalf of the Faculty, gave interesting reminiscences of the college from 1849 to 1866. Prof. Bischoff gave reminiscences from 1866 to 1905. A poem was read by Louis Friedland, class of '05.

At the new college building, St. Nicholas Avenue and One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Street, another ceremony was held which wound up with a game of baseball between the students and Faculty. Later a debate between two of the college societies was held at the Board of Education building, Thirty-ninth Street and Park Avenue.

Cooper Union Judgment Reduced.

GOMPERS MAY STEP IN TO END CHICAGO STRIKE

Labor President Makes Move for Conciliation.

LESS RIOTING YESTERDAY

Sheriff's Threat to Call for Troops Has a Quieting Effect.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, is likely to take an active hand in settling the Chicago strike. He has set in motion the machinery which will enable him to do so, and if the Executive Council of the federation authorizes him to act his influence will be for conciliation.

"I have not the power to take the initiative in this matter without a hint or a request to act," said Mr. Gompers today. He said, however, that he had written to all the members of the Executive Council and had asked each to reply by telegraph. A vote of the Executive Council is required to determine what course shall be taken, but it is not doubted that Mr. Gompers's suggestions will be accepted.

"I have no hesitancy," he said, "in predicting that our Executive Council will help to the fullest honorable extent to bring about an adjustment by mutual agreement."

CHICAGO, May 5.—This has been the most orderly day Chicago has had in a week. There were instances of violence, but in only two instances were they serious. The Employers' Association had more wagons on the streets than at any time since the strike reached riotous proportions. Great processions of them passed along, carrying belated deliveries, all guarded by the police and Deputy Sheriffs.

Mayor Dunne and Sheriff Barrett each made a trip through the affected districts, but neither encountered any trouble. Barrett said there was no need yet for troops. Two hundred deputies were sworn in and armed to-day. They were instructed not to shoot except as a last resort, and then to get the man attacking them and not to shoot into crowds. Such strong pressure has been brought upon the Mayor and the Sheriff that they are said to be ready to ask for the militia if the increased force of deputies and police does not put a stop to rioting.

Gov. Deneen will order out the troops if a request is made by Sheriff Barrett, and on the failure or success of the attempt at coal deliveries to-morrow depends the coming of troops. Fifteen wagons were sent out to-day by the large dry goods and department stores, and all of them made deliveries with little interruption. On each of these wagons rode two Deputy Sheriffs. The success of this attempt at delivering goods prompted the stores to decide to send out to-morrow nearly their full force of wagons.

Either because of the threatened appearance of the troops or because of the addition to the police force in the shape of Deputy Sheriffs, there was much less rioting and fighting in the downtown streets.

Express wagons, each of which carried a guard armed with a rifle or a double-barreled shotgun, went to and fro between depots and express offices without interruption other than that of an occasional stone thrown from the sidewalk, or of some missile hurled from a window.

Three coal wagons, after making a delivery at the factory of Seiz, Schwab & Co., were attacked by a crowd which pursued them for more than half a mile, raining stones, bricks, and bottles on the police officers and the drivers. The riot began when stones and bottles were thrown from windows of the Schultz Paper Box Company factory. This was the signal for a general onslaught, and missiles were hurled from all sides. One woman was seen to throw several bricks from a window of the Schultz factory.

As the wagons continued down Ohio Street they were targets for persons in the windows of all the buildings, and for the crowd which followed them. The mob was composed entirely of young men and women, the women taking an active part in the rioting and urging the men to further violence. Terrific explosions of large firecrackers occurred at several corners, but a search among the crowd by several detectives failed to find the person who threw the explosives.

Edward Lashem, President of the Lashem Teaming Company, was brutally beaten by union teamsters at West Madison and Union Streets. He was dragged from his wagon, knocked down and kicked. Police Lieutenant O'Connor went to Lashem's assistance in time to capture seven of his assailants. Lashem's condition is serious.

Edward Johnson, a negro porter in no way connected with the strike, was attacked at West Van Buren and Halsted Streets to-night and beaten with brass knuckles. Sheriff Barrett to-night expressed the belief that the crisis of the strike was over and its backbone was broken.

"We will man every wagon in Chicago with a Deputy Sheriff in order to preserve peace, if such a step is necessary," the Sheriff said.

Mayor Dunne has given orders that all the employes of the city water pipe extension department shall hold themselves in readiness to assist the police.

Fire started to-night in the yard of the Peabody Coal Company. A crowd gathered, but no one would turn in an alarm because of the feeling against the Peabody Company. The blaze was seen by a policeman, who called the Fire Department. The damage was slight.

TISZA TO FIGHT A DUEL.

Hungarian Premier Sends Seconds to Pozsgay of the Opposition.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, May 5.—A duel between Premier Tisza and a member of the Opposition, Herr Pozsgay, will be the outcome of a stormy debate in the lower house of the Hungarian Diet to-day.

Premier Tisza had bitterly assailed the demand of the Opposition in the address to the throne, and especially that section demanding customs boundaries against Austria. He pointed out that Hungary as an independent State would only be able to conclude treaties under the most unfavorable conditions, while it was of the utmost importance that Austrian markets should be open to Hungarian agricultural produce.

The Premier was interrupted by Herr Pozsgay, a member of the Opposition, who said it was "beyond patience for a fallen Premier to speak with such insolence." An uproar ensued, and the sitting was suspended. Afterward Count Tisza sent his seconds to Herr Pozsgay.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 5.—"If you set foot on our ground you will be shot. You have had your last warning, and your life will be worth nothing if you come near us," are the words of an anonymous letter received by Agent Rose of the State Board of Health, who has been making a tour of Northern Massachusetts towns—Acton, Shirley, Carlisle, Billerica, Bedford, Harvard, Westford, Concord, and Chelmsford—inspecting milk farms. His reports have caused great alarm in the sections he

POINT FOR WATERED STOCK.

Prof. Meyer Tells Senators It Has Helped the Country.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Prof. Meyer of the Chicago University was before the Senate Committee on Inter-State Commerce again to-day. He criticised the Inter-State Commerce Commission, saying all the important decisions of the commission were in the direction of restricting trade and commerce. If given the power to fix rates it would be compelled to adopt a mileage system, he declared.

Prof. Meyer said that stock waterings in many cases had been beneficent. It enabled the building of roads, and many of the great interests of the country had been started and built up by watered stock.

Prof. Meyer told the committee that Germany could not make preferential rates, and the same thing would happen if this Government tried it. He thought that near-by points would have all the advantages, and that the farms of the Northwest would be destroyed. In France, where there is private ownership to a large extent and Government control of rates, the Government paid the roads large sums of money. He said, however, that in all the foreign countries, whether the Government owned the roads or fixed the rates, there were complaints; more complaints than in the United States.

Frank H. Blodgett of Janesville, Wis., engaged in miscellaneous milling, protested against giving the Inter-State Commerce Commission power to fix rates. He said the country mills under present conditions are given equal privileges with the city mills.

The presence in Washington during the last few days of a number of prominent railroad men has resulted, according to a well-defined belief among those who attend the hearings of the Senate Committee, in a general agreement in regard to the rate legislation to be had next Winter. Members of the Senate Committee agree that only by a compromise will it be possible to secure any legislation whatever on the subject, and they are disposed to accede to the demend that all abuses in railway management be remedied as far as legislation can be made to secure this end, but the rate-making power will not be given to any Governmental agency. Authority to curb or prevent discriminations, preferential rates, terminal facilities, private lines, and switch charges will be provided and the Inter-State Commerce Commission will be allowed greater jurisdiction in the matter of investigating rebate abuses. If there is to be any concession in the matter of rate-making it will be along the line of the President's position that the Inter-State Commerce Commission shall have power to make a rate where one has been the subject of review before the commission, and that this rate shall stand until passed upon by the courts.

L. & N. STOCK WAS DOUBLED.

It Was a Culpable Proceeding, President Smith Declares.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 5.—The Alabama Railroad Commission completed the hearing of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad and the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railway to-day in the investigation of freight rates in this State with a view of general revision of rates.

The testimony of the Louisville and Nashville occupied the greater part of the time. President Milton H. Smith and General Traffic Manager C. B. Compton were under examination. President Smith's statements were nearly all voluntary, and were intended to show the immense investments of his road in the State of Alabama since its history began in 1852. He told how the entire properties were owned by an aggregation of the people and municipalities along the line until 1879, when, he said, they unfortunately were acquired by speculators. He admitted that two years thereafter the capital stock was increased from $9,000,000 to $18,000,000, and characterized this proceeding as very culpable.

Mr. Smith said it was a fortunate thing for the road and its patrons that it is now impossible for speculators to "tamper with more than a minority of the stock."

President Smith announced that it is the intention of his road on May 22 to increase the rate on domestic and steam coal from the Birmingham district to Anniston, Gadsden, and Alabama City 25 cents a ton.

AT THE RAILWAY CONGRESS.

Delegates Hold a Short Session and Visit the White House.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—After three hours of discussion this morning the International Railway Congress adjourned to the White House, where Vice President Fairbanks, in the East Room, received the members of the congress in behalf of President Roosevelt. Receptions were also tendered the delegates by President Samuel Spencer of the Southern Railway and Mrs. Spencer and Major W. M. Grinnell of the Illinois Central Railway and Mrs. Grinnell.

No conclusions resulted from the discussion to-day. The first section considered wooden sleepers or crossties. The second and third met together, and considered great power locomotives; the fourth debated slow freight rates, and the fifth light railways and their effect on trunk lines. After the sections have held two meetings each to-morrow, the delegates will inspect the Capitol and Congressional Library.

FUN WITH VETERANS' BOYS.

One of Them Shows Mustache at Third Army Corps Dinner.

Gen. Daniel E. Sickles was the principal speaker at the dinner of the veterans of the Third Army Corps at the Hotel Manhattan last night. He said he believed that in the providence of God wars had been necessary steps in the progress of civilization, and that the history of no other nation illustrates that so well as ours. The old General brought out a lot of applause and laughter from the diners, many of whom were women, when he pointed to Capt. C. W. Wilson at a nearby table.

"Instead of the Third Army Corps diminishing, it seems to me to be increasing," said Gen. Sickles. "There's Wilson, over at that table, for instance. Look at him. There is a whole table full of Wilsons. I remember when Wilson was satisfied to occupy one chair, and now he needs nine. And perhaps in two or three years, at another dinner, he'll bring a round dozen.

"I've brought along another one, too. There he is over in that corner. Stand up, my boy, and let 'em look at you."

The "boy" stood up. He's a boy with a long, brown mustache and must be fully forty-five years old. He didn't seem to like the attention much, but made a bow gracefully and sat down again.

Gen. George W. Mindil read a paper on the battle of Williamsburg, the first the Third Army Corps took part in. He criticised Gen. McClellan rather severely and said that if that officer had acted differently Williamsburg might have been the deciding battle in the Peninsular campaign. The mention of Gen. Philip Kearny's name was met by cheers.

"After Phil Kearny died," Gen. Mindil said, "and I asked for a leave of absence to carry his remains home, I saw on the desk of the Secretary of War at Washington an unsigned order placing Kearny in command of the Army of the Potomac."

ONLY THREE SUPPORT IT

Simply an Economy Measure, One Principal Declares—Says There Is Too Much Economy Now.

Following the example set by Manhattan and Queens, Brooklyn last evening declared itself against the proposed "shorter day" plan by an almost unanimous vote at a hearing held in the Girls' High School before the Committee on Elementary Schools. Out of a gathering of almost 200 only three stood by the school day of three and a half hours, and none of this minority represented an organization of any kind. They were simply individually opposed to the present five-hour day for young children.

The "economy" argument of the "shorter day" advocates was strenuously attacked by the representatives of the several taxpayers' associations of the borough.

"If the Board of Education is afraid the taxpayers' are unwilling to support schools, it is laboring under a delusion," said A. B. W. Furman, representing the Allied Boards of Trade. "The people of Brooklyn are not parsimonious; they want their children to get a full day's schooling and they are willing to pay for it."

These views were echoed by the representatives of the other organizations present.

"No advocate of the shorter day has the welfare of the children at heart," said Miss Ruth Granger, Principal of Public School 137. "It is simply a matter of economy.

"The classrooms are overcrowded, and simply for economy. Fifty and sixty pupils are crowded into one room. It is not right—it is time to protest against this overcrowding. A teacher has no chance to instruct with sixty restless pupils on her hands. Much adverse criticism to the course of study could be avoided if the teachers had a reasonable number of children to instruct."

Miss Granger's assertions were greeted with cheers.

The most aggressive speaker for the "shorter day" was Channing Stebbins, Principal of Public School No. 77. He made sarcastic reference to the "street influence" argument advanced by his opponents, and said that he failed to see what particular good the city would do if it kept the child off the street for an extra hour and a half each day.

"Ask your physician if it is right to keep a six-year-old child in school for five hours a day," he said. "I don't think it is. As far as education is concerned, the shorter day will do no harm to your children. Experience with part-time pupils in my school has proved this to me."

Mr. Stebbins was supported by Mr. Charles Skinner and a man who refused to give his name.

City Superintendent Maxwell was present, but did not speak.

The societies which sent representations to the hearing to oppose the shorter day include the Allied Boards of Trade, the Ridgewood Board of Trade, the Broadway Board of Trade, the Brooklyn Saengerbund, the Brooklyn Arion, United Singers, Eastern District Turn Verein, and every Principals' and teachers' association of the borough.

GIRL FINDS $380, GETS $50.

Refuses to Accept It, but Owner Puts It in Bank to Her Credit.

May Tobin, nineteen years old, of 566 Lorimer Street, Williamsburg, who works in a factory, found a few days ago a wallet containing $380 in cash and a check for $200. She picked it up at South Eighth Street and Driggs Avenue, and, putting it in her pocket, did not discover the value of the contents until she reached home.

When she discovered the money she went to the Rev. Father Crowley of St. Mary's Church and told him about it. Father Crowley advised her to keep the money until she found the owner.

Two days ago Miss Tobin saw an advertisement in a newspaper offering a reward for the return of the money and check. The advertisement had been inserted by Phillip Lovingham, a real-estate man, of 168 Clymer Street. Miss Tobin communicated with Lovingham and he went to her home yesterday and got it. Miss Tobin refused to accept $50 he offered her and he deposited the amount to her credit in a savings bank.

GIRLS IN TENNIS FINAL.

Misses Kissel and Loomis Won After Three Hotly Fought Sets.

Three prolonged sets of spirited lawn tennis were necessary to decide the final match in the girls' junior doubles yesterday before Miss Irene Kissel and Miss Janet Loomis defeated Miss Jeanie Barger-Wallach and Miss Dorothy Moran on the courts of the St. Nicholas Rink. Both pairs played surprisingly good base line tactics for the three sets, two of which went to deuce before they were won. Four times in the second set and six times in the third set Miss Barger-Wallach and her partner, Miss Moran, were within a stroke of the victory.

All of the playing in the first set was in favor of Miss Barger-Wallach and Miss Moran. Their drives to the base line and the corners of the opposite court proved too good for Miss Kissel and Miss Loomis, whose returns failed both on length and direction. Taking this set at 6-2, Miss Barger-Wallach and Miss Moran continued their long driving tactics. But the team on the other side of the net began to break up that sort of work by deep and timely lobbing. This seemed to completely wreck the attack of Miss Barger-Wallach and Miss Moran. Only by the most spirited work were they able to run the score up to deuce at 5-all. They vainly tried to get back to their old driving game and win, but Miss Kissel and Miss Loomis held them off and took both the second and third sets after the keenest sort of play. The summary:

Girls' Junior Doubles, Final Round.—Miss Irene Kissel and Miss Janet Loomis defeated Miss Jeanie Barger-Wallach and Miss Dorothy Moran, 2-6, 7-5, 9-7.

AUTOMOBILE RECORDS GO.

Wridgway Making New Figures in 1,000-Mile Run at Brighton Beach.

Charles Wridgway, a well-known automobilist, started in a 1,000-mile non-stop run yesterday morning at the Brighton Beach track in an effort to break the existing record of 20 hours 53 minutes 37 seconds, made at Detroit last August by Charles Schmidt. Shortly before 10 o'clock last night Wridgway completed the first half of his journey, his time for the 500 miles being 12:20:34, which is 2:41:54 ahead of Schmidt's mark. He was then going at the rate of about thirty-seven to thirty-eight miles an hour and fully expected to establish new figures some time this forenoon.

A heavy fog was coming up rapidly at that time, but the powerful searchlights prepared for by Wridgway for the night run, in addition to a large number of colored lights distributed around the track, were giving plenty of light, and he had shown no apparent cessation in speed. He is using a twenty-four horse power touring car, stripped for racing.

Wridgway began his run at 9:38 o'clock in the morning. He made his first fifty miles in 1:08:04 and the 100 miles in 2:09:16, which establishes a new world's record. He was going then at the rate of nearly forty-seven to forty-eight miles an hour, and this speed was maintained with slight changes until early in the evening. Just after finishing the 500 miles Wridgway stopped his machine for about five minutes and fitted a new rear wheel. He intends to drive the entire 1,000 miles himself, food being handed to him on the track.

The judges are A. S. Walden and W. B. Hurlbut, while the timing is being very carefully done by "Al" McMurtry and A. S. Stevenson.

Early arrivals at the track to-day to see the races scheduled to open the racing season will probably see Wridgway complete his task with a new record. The time of starting was so arranged that he would finish, provided he established a record, shortly before the regular events begin, which will be at 2 o'clock.

AUTOISTS' NOVEL RUN.

Licensed Manufacturers Take Long Spin and Change Cars on the Way.

Nearly seventy members of the mechanical branch of the Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers took part in their second annual run yesterday. The route was a long one, starting from Seventy-sixth Street and Broadway at 11 o'clock. There were twenty-three cars in line, and the novelty of the run lay in the fact that at certain stages the passengers all changed cars, the idea being to give the members opportunities of studying the individual features and running abilities of the various makes of machines.

After crossing Central Bridge, the run went up Jerome Avenue to Fordham Road, Pelham Parkway, to Travers Island, where a stop for luncheon was made at the country house of the New York Athletic Club. The cars then went to Larchmont, stopping at the Larchmont Yacht Club, then to Mamaroneck, White Plains, Elmsford, Ardsley, Dobbs Ferry, Hastings, Yonkers, Van Cortlandt Park, and back to the city.

Among those in the run were F. B. Stearns, C. R. Mabley, W. H. H. Hutton, A. E. Rainey, A. M. Day, A. A. Post, Hiram P. Maxim, Charles Clifton, Elwood Haynes, Charles T. Fletcher, S. T. Davis, Jr., George H. Day, Howard E. Coffin, M. J. Budlong, H. W. Alden, R. M. Beck, Herman G. Farr, L. D. Hubble, J. S. Marvin, H. C. Tillittson, John Wilkinson, Peter Forgarty, F. L. Smith, and Charles Schmidt.

Boston's Indifferent Play Enables Champions to Win by 5 to 1.

Three consecutive double plays by the same men, Dahlen, Gilbert, and McGann, were the features of the fielding in the game between the champions and tail-enders at the Polo Grounds yesterday. From the start the Bostons, as usual, were outclassed; in fact, they gave about the dullest exhibition that has been seen in this city since the championship campaign was opened. There was not much difference in the batting records of the teams, but there was quite a difference in the character of the hits. Of the five runs scored by the New Yorks three were earned, while the eight hits off McGinnity were so scattered that they were totally ineffective. Boston's solitary run was scored in the sixth inning after two men were out. Tenney hit safely to left field, and on Strang's surprisingly easy miss of Abbatichio's fly ball, the visitors' manager reached the plate.

For four innings the Bostons were retired in one-two-three order, the side in the second, third, and fourth innings being put out by double plays. In the fifth inning a fumble by Gilbert allowed Wolverton to get to first, but he was forced out at second by Barclay's hit to Devlin. Sharpe's high-bounder was well stopped by McGinnity, but the "Iron Man" threw badly to second base, and both runners were safe. The poor throw, however, did not turn out to be serious, as Raymer and Needham put out fly balls to the outfield.

The New Yorks showed their first batting streak in the second inning, when, after Mertes and Dahlen had been easily retired, Devlin hit to right field, and was forced to second on a base on balls to Gilbert. McGinnity caused the first shout among the "rooters" by a well-placed hit into right field, scoring Devlin and enabling Gilbert to reach third base. Donlin then hit for three bases, tallying both Gilbert and McGinnity, but Strang left the hard-hitting centre fielder at third. McGann scored in third inning on his two-base hit. Bresnahan's out and Mertes's single, and Mertes tallied in the fifth.

PITTSBURG, 4; CINCINNATI, 2.

PITTSBURG, May 5.—Leever was almost invincible up to the ninth inning to-day, only two of the visitors reaching first. Then a single, a triple, and an error gave them two runs. Pittsburg hit Harper freely in the fourth, and won the game. Capt. Kelly protested the game on the ground that the pitcher's box is not graded according to rules. Score:

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Ferris's Long Hit to Left Field Scored Three Runs and Beat New York.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., May 5.—Dougherty's run scored in the fourth inning of to-day's game looked big enough to win until the seventh inning, when, with Collins on third, and Grimshaw on first, Ferris hit to deep left field for a home run. The drive was a beauty, and, while Fultz fielded the ball rapidly Ferris beat the throw home. In the ninth, Keeler began with a home run, but the next three men were easy outs. Boston also added a run in the eighth, on two singles, Parent being hit by Powell and Freeman's fly to Keeler, Burket. scoring.

So far as hits were concerned, both teams were equal. Powell did not have enough speed to break a pane of glass, but the local men could not seem to do anything in the early innings except to put the ball in the air.

Dougherty was the star for New York. He made a triple hit in the fourth inning and later scored. In the sixth he singled, and after getting to third tried to steal home as Winter pitched to Williams. The veteran Criger was not to be fooled, however, and got Dougherty out by an inch. Collins fielded and hit in splendid fashion, although his double in the second inning was made possible because Conroy, Dougherty, and Yeager watched the ball drop safe, each looking at the other and thinking the other would take it.

Fultz fielded finely. Ferris made a couple of hair-raising stops, and Burkett made a spectacular running catch off Williams in the sixth inning. In the fourth inning Dougherty hit to rignt for three bases. Keeler struck out, but Fultz singled to centre and Dougherty scored. Dougherty singled again in the sixth and took second on Keeler's sacrifice and third on Fultz's safe bunt. With Williams at the bat, Dougherty tried to steal home, but was caught.

Collins began the seventh inning with a single to centre, but went out on Freeman's sacrifice. Grimshaw was safe when Chase dropped Yeager's throw, and the crowd began to "root." Then came Ferris's drive, and men, women and children jumped to their feet, cheering wildly. Singles by Burkett and Stahl, and Parent being hit by Powell, filled the bases in the eighth inning. Freeman's fly to Keeler scored Burkett. In the ninth, Keeler hit for four bases, and the next three men retired. The score:

Jersey City Bats Hard and Is Victorious Over Baltimore by a Run.

The Jersey City and Baltimore Baseball Clubs opened a series of four games at West Side Park, Jersey City, yesterday, the local men proving victorious by a score of 4 to 3. Pfanmiller held the visitors safe at all times when hits meant runs. One of the odd features of the game was that only one of the outfielders had a put out. Keister and Merritt carried off the batting honors for Jersey City and McAleese for Baltimore. After Baltimore had tied the score in its half of the ninth inning, Jersey City secured what proved to be the winning run on two safe hits, after two men had been retired. The score:

MRS. GERKEN'S HORSES WIN BLUE RIBBONS

Newsboy and Shopgirl Take Three Firsts at Durland Show.

AWARDS FOR A. G. VANDERBILT

He Captures Challenge Cup and Road Coach Prize, Giving Him a Total of Seven Victories.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt and Mrs. John Gerken were the leading winners last night in the final judging classes of the Durland Academy horse show, held in the Durland Riding Academy, West Sixty-sixth Street. Vanderbilt won two blues while Mrs. Gerken captured three, each getting first in all of the classes in which they were entered. Vanderbilt also took the challenge cup in the class for harness horses suitable for a gig. He drove the winner, the bay mare Rustling Silk, one of his famous four. Later he drove his Belmont Park coach Venture, with his road team of grays, and won handily against Mrs. Grosvenor's team, driven by Dick Donnelly, and J. Campbell Thompson's team, shown to his road coach Faugh-a-Ballagh.

This was one of the most picturesque exhibits of the show. The cock horse accompanied each coach and the guard, resplendent in red, tooted his long horn melodiously from each coach. Vanderbilt has been very fortunate in the four nights of the show. He exhibited in nine classes and won seven firsts and two seconds.

Mrs. Gerken stands next to Vanderbilt in the number of first awards, as she took six blue ribbons and one second. The only time she was beaten was when Vanderbilt's Lady Kathryn beat her famous Newsboy in one of the harness classes. Mrs. Gerken last night won the harness class shown to runabouts with Newsboy and Shopgirl, and got first in the tandem class with the same pair, while Newsboy won in the single harness class. She drove in the winning classes.

Mrs. J. B. M. Grosvenor won the blue ribbon in the harness double class, but was forced to take second in two saddle classes, H. G. McElwaine and Mrs. W. S. Elliott taking first places, respectively.

Summary:

Single Harness Horses, over 15.2 hands, (Dealers' Class.)—Won by Charles T. Proctor's bay gelding Hot Stuff; Standard Coach Horse Company's ch. g., Standard's Magician, second; Fias. Doerr & Carroll Horse Company's bay gelding, Broker, third.

WILL OPEN BETTING RING.

Racing Managers to End Exclusive Control by Bookmakers' Association.

The first move for the establishment of an "open betting ring," practically resuming the old plan under which bookmakers operated before the organization of the Metropolitan Turf Association, was made last night, when the officials representing the Westchester Racing Association, in charge of the public inclosures at Belmont Park, served notice on George Wheelock, President of the Turf Association, of the decision that the Metropolitan Turf Association's old exclusive control of the betting ring has come to an end. Henceforth the Metropolitan Turf Association must guarantee that eighty members of its body shall be present daily at each track on which there is racing around New York City under the agreement which the Bookmakers' Association made to secure the privilege it enjoys.

It is provided in the plan approved by the various racing associations that, should the Turf Association go on to do business any day without the full quota, a sufficient number of "back-line" bookmakers, non-members, shall be drawn by lot to make up the full list of eighty. This provides each day a central ring of eighty layers, while, as before, as many other men may go in the back line as can be accommodated. Under this plan there will be no discrimination between the Metropolitan Turf Association and the outside layers, except that the Bookmakers' Association in return for the guarantee to the race fund will have the first choice as to how many of its members may do business.

Another provision in the plan of the racing managers is that John Cavanagh, against whom the Metropolitan Turf Association began a fight in the effort to displace him as manager of the betting rings, shall have the entire management of the betting arrangements for the future.

It is expected that the new order of things will be in force Monday, when the Bookmakers' Association will either be shorn of its old exclusive privileges, or open betting will be established, with places in the ring equally free to all.

CHANGES AT BELMONT PARK.

"Path" in the Stretch to be Plowed Up and Liverpool Removed.

The experience of two days' racing on the new course at Belmont Park has induced its managers to alter arrangements of the track in response to the criticism of its patrons. One of the trees that obstructed the view of the stretch was cut down yesterday, and the second tree is to follow to-day.

On the track in the ruff through the stretch plows will be set to work to-day, and the soil will be turned up for a distance of fifteen feet from the outer rail to destroy the "path" which has figured so conspicuously in the racing so far. The existence of this path was explained by the fact that an old country road which ran there had never been entirely displaced, and the earth packed there very readily. The trainers early saw the advantage of a horse running here, and the jockeys when told of it all scrambled for the outside rail, producing crowding in every race. An additional advantage it afforded the horse was that he had the rail to his left as a guide, as is the case on the older tracks. The ploughing up of the path may make an important change in the character of the sport.

Another change contemplated is in the steeplechase field, where it has been decided to remove the Liverpool jump, now the last jump of the course. This will remove an obstacle regarded as dangerous to horses racing at top speed in the run home. In the Fall the course will be remodeled and a Liverpool arranged.

It has been suggested that a change in the finish line be made by moving the judges' stand from its present place to the last sixteenth pole, just about the middle of the grand stand, so that the public may have a better view of the finish. As this would reduce the distance of the straight to six and a half furlongs, and the distance out of the present mile and a quarter chute to a mile and three-sixteenths, the plan has not been received with favor by the officials.

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

Jerry C., entered by the Leland Stable to sell for $2,000 in the second race at Belmont Park yesterday, was claimed by T. E. Mannix, owner of Carrie Jones, a runner in the race, for $2,500.

The weights for the Crotona Handicap, six furlongs, for three-year-olds and upward, to be run Monday, have been assigned, with Ort Wells, 129 pounds; Beldame, 125; Lord of the Vale, 123, and Lady Amelia, 122, the four top weights.

The sale of a big draft of horses in training, twenty head from the stable of J. B. Haggin and eighteen head from the stable of Sydney Paget, nearly all the horses being overaged, will be held to-day at the paddock of the Belmont Park track.

ROAD DRIVERS' BIG ENTRY.

Nearly Five Hundred Horses Will Participate in Parade and Show Events.

More than 350 harness horses, kings and queens of New York roadsters, will participate in the annual parade of the Road Drivers' Association next Saturday afternoon. The entry list, which closed yesterday, includes this record-breaking number of entries, while the contestants for the prizes at the horse show to follow the parade bring the total up to nearly 500 high-class animals. Every indication points to an event transcending any of the five that have preceded it in the association's history.

The plans as now projected call for the rendezvous of all the parade entries at Riverside Drive and Seventy-second Street. They will proceed out the drive to One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street, to Broadway, to One Hundred and Fifty-second Stret, to St. Nicholas Place, to the Speedway. Here they will be reviewed from the clubhouse porch by the association officers and their invited guests, including some fifty city officials, proceeding then to the specially constructed ring just north of the clubhouse for the show events.

The hundred-odd aristocratic high steppers enlisted will show in twelve special classes, including trotters and pacers to speed wagons and to runabouts, a short-tail division, a special class for novelty hitches to appropriate vehicles, women's classes for horses to runabouts, and teams to spider phaetons suitable for Speedway driving. Ribbons will be awarded for soundness, appearance, manners, and action.

TRAVIS DEFEATS CHICK.

Harvard Golfer Put Out of Garden City Tournament—Finals To-day.

Walter J. Travis squared accounts with the young Harvard student, W. C. Chick, yesterday in the second match play round for the chief trophy in the Garden City Golf Club tournament. It was a week ago in the Lakewood tournament that Chick defeated Travis, and the luck of the draw brought the rivals face to face yesterday afternoon in the semi-final round. Travis was in fine golfing trim. He started out with a determination to beat Chuck, and he had little mercy upon him, as he scored the big victory of 6 up and 5 to play over his former conqueror. Travis will meet Arden M. Robbins this morning in the final match.

For the second or Governors' Cup the survivors are E. M. Byers of Pittsburg, twice runner-up for the National championship, and E. S. Parmelee of New Haven. The latter had a hot game in the afternoon with F. O. Horstman of Philadelphia, winning on the last green by 1 hole. For the Club Cup the finals are J. G. Batterson of Fox Hills and C. F. Watson of Essex County.

COLUMBIA AND PENN TO-DAY.

Rare Sport Expected at Annual Dual Meet at the Oval.

At Columbia Oval, William's Bridge, to-day the first of the big intercollegiate dual games and the only one scheduled for New York City during the year, will be contested by the teams of Columbia and the University of Pennsylvania. A more evenly matched pair could hardly be found in the colleges, and even those who keep closest watch on college track men cannot figure out the winner. Pennsylvania appears to have rather the better of it in first strings, looking like the victor in seven of the thirteen events; but Columbia's second choices hope to turn the tide in her favor.

RACING DATE FIXED FOR VANDERBILT CUP

Big Automobile Contest to be Held Either Oct. 7 or 14.

OVER LONG ISLAND ROADS

Donor of Trophy Present at First Meeting This Year—Entries Close on May 15.

Plans for the second Vanderbilt automobile cup race assumed definite shape yesterday when the first meeting of the Cup Commission this year was held at the Waldorf-Astoria. Chairman Robert Lee Morrell presided, and the other members present were William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., George Isham Scott, T. M. Hilliard, G. L. Weiss, E. T. Birdsall, Samuel M. Butler, and A. G. Batchelder.

Arrangements for the coming race were discussed at length, and it was decided to hold the event on Oct. 7 or Oct. 14. The members present were heartily in favor of holding the run again on Long Island, and Nassau County was selected. The course will undoubtedly be the same, with slight modifications, as the one used last year. There has been a strong desire on the part of prospective contestants to have the course this season free from controls, making the race, therefore, a straight run from start to finish. The controls last year, especially to some of the foreigners, were not properly understood, and some penalties were exacted which they considered unjust.

Mr. Vanderbilt and George Isham Scott, Chairman of the Racing Committee of the Automobile Club of America, were requested to act as a special committee to investigate the Long Island roads and take steps toward the securing of an available course. The subject of patrolling the course is also receiving careful attention, and improved methods will be adopted to prevent the crowd from swarming over the line during the progress of the race.

The entries for this automobile road race will close May 15. Four American cars are already entered and a fifth is practically assured. Five cars are all that can represent a country, so if more than that number should enter an elimination trial would be necessary. France has nominated the five cars finishing first in the Gordon Bennett eliminating test.

Italy has designated the American agents of the Italian car to enter five machines, if possible, in this country. Germany has already nominated one car, and the entry of Robert Graves of this city and four more are expected. Nothing definite has yet been heard regarding probable entries from England or other European countries.

Yachts and Motors Change Hands.

The motor yacht Pip has been sold to A. Winebugh of Great Neck, L. I., through Stanley M. Seaman. The boat will be used by her new owner for cruising on the Sound. She was built last year and is fitted with ten-horse power engines. She is of the torpedo boat type, 32 feet over all, and 8 feet beam. Through the same agency E. S. Rowell also effected the sale of his cruising yawl Adelaide to Emerson R. Newell of this city. She is now in commission in New Rochelle harbor, awaiting orders from her new owner. The sale of the knockabout Scintilla, built by Lawley and owned by John R. Hoyt of the Manhasset Bay Yacht Club, to David Kay, Jr., of Newark, N. J., is also reported.

Why Regal Oxfords Fit

Regal Oxfords fit where most Oxfords chafe—at the heel. They lie snug where most Oxfords "gape"—at the sides. They are smooth where most Oxfords wrinkle—under the instep.

They are built over special Oxford lasts, while other Oxfords are built over ordinary lasts—that's the reason why!

It was a huge undertaking to equip the Regal factory with a duplicate set of specially-designed Oxford lasts, and it couldn't have been done except through the waste-saving Regal tannery-to-consumer system.

It's that same direct one-profit system that gives you a choice of 75 new styles in Quarter Sizes; that gives you honest live-oak leather in the soles and a way of proving it; that gives you the best-wearing shoes sold at any price—and a guarantee to back it; that gives you absolutely any style of shoe and any kind of leather you prefer—and only one price to think about; that makes that one price $3.50 instead of $6.

There's a good deal more reason for you to take a stand against the "mercerized cotton" cheat in clothes than for us. It's an injury to your interests; it doesn't affect us particularly. Indeed, it may do us good; sometimes people will learn the value and economy of good quality only by having experience with trash.

The wearers of the "mercerized cotton" adulteration are not drawn from the ranks of the Hart Schaffner & Marx army. Our clothes hold the trade they get; and keep getting it.

We advise you to avoid "mercerized cotton" fabrics, and insist on all-wool for your own sake, not because it means "buy our clothes." It doesn't mean that; there are other all-wool clothes.

In other words, we are working in this cause for the common good; yours—the makers and dealers in "mercerized cotton," though they may not realize it—and ours. Our benefits will come in the strengthening of the idea of all-wool honesty among the public and the clothing trade.

Our label means all-wool, and nothing less; a small thing to look for, a big thing to find.

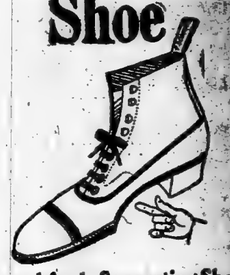
The Coward Shoe



Coward Arch-Supporting Shoe.

When the trouble first begins, few folks realize the "arch" of the foot is breaking down or dropping out of place. They put down those acute shooting pains which run up the calf or the leg, even to the knee, to gout or rheumatism. Take warning! It's the first stage of "flat-foot."

The Coward Arch-Supporting Shoe containing a metal prop, relieves all pain and preserves perfectly the natural shape of the foot. For Men and Women.

THE LEGISLATURE AND THE CITY.

The two matters of most importance to the City of New York which were before the Legislature this year were the provision of an adequate water supply and the regulation of the gas and electric companies. It was quite possible to treat the two matters together in an efficient and economic fashion, and that was what Mayor McCLELLAN, with a just conception of the needs of the city and of his own duty, urged on the Legislature. The party in power refused to adopt this perfectly sensible and practical plan, and proceeded to evolve two sets of bills, the most prominent feature of each of which is the creation of a State Commission, with very considerable powers, and with corresponding political influence.

The Water Commission will be the more important of the two. For its personnel the Governor and Senate will be held accountable. The quality of the Commission may be accurately gauged by the manner in which it shall make "a reasonable effort" to meet "with all convenient speed," in the terms of the act creating it, the needs of this applicant community. Maps and plans have been prepared and approved by eminent engineers for acquiring the added water supply and for building the necessary aqueducts. Within three weeks the Governor's Commission should be prosecuting in entire harmony with the Mayor's Commission a work of incalculable importance for the future welfare of this city.

For the quarter ending Sept. 30 of last year the average daily consumption of water from the Croton basin was 290,000,000 gallons, whereas the average daily flow of the Croton River fell to 209,000,000 gallons in the dry year of 1880 and to 222,000,000 gallons in 1883. The city must have its augmented supply at once, and it must provide for an increase in population that will swell it to 7,000,000 souls in 1925.

The worst feature of the Legislature's action as to the water supply is the refusal to allow the city to use the water it is to buy and pay for in generating power to supply electricity either for the lighting of its streets or for sale to private consumers. For this refusal there is not the slightest excuse. It must have been intended to bind more closely than ever the fetters the monopolistic combinations have fastened on the city, and it will surely carry out the intention of its devisers.

The second Commmission created by the Legislature is to have the regulation of the gas and electric supply in this city. For this there was not the slightest occasion. The city authorities are amply able to do the work if their powers had been made sufficient. Had the bill fixing the price of gas and electricity been passed it would have been the duty of the Governor to veto the Commission scheme. As it is, the Commission is the only hope the people of the city can have that they will not be extortionately treated by the companies. If the Governor chooses he can probably put on the Commission men of integrity, independence, and firmness, who will be able to resist the influences that will be brought to bear. He will, however, have to deal with the leaders of his party, and Heaven knows what sort of men they will force upon him. Another bill of importance was the Police Reform bill of the Committee of Nine. That had every prospect of passage at one time, but the combination against it was too strong. Its defeat is a triumph for "the system" in the police force. It leaves the bad men in the force stronger and the good men less strong than before. The former have less occasion to fear and the latter less reason to trust the operation of wholesome public sentiment.

Decidedly the most important act of the Legislature so far as this city is concerned is the bill extending the term of the Mayor to four years. At the last moment Senator ELSBERG succeeded in raising the embargo that had been placed on the bill in the Senate, and it now goes to the Governor. We cannot imagine his failing to approve it. The opposition to it in the Senate was unquestionably due to the fear that it would help the election of Mayor McCLELLAN, as it clearly will. But it is to be remembered that a longer term is favorable to good government, and the [illegible] can take advantage of [illegible]. This bill, the bill reproducing the powers of the Board of Aldermen, and the Ambler bill, amending the Raines law, stand to the credit of the Legislature on the city's books. It has been a pretty reckless Legislature, but on the whole the city comes out better than was expected.

THE COMING SEA FIGHT.

We pointed out a week ago the incredibility of the reports that NEBOGATOFF had already emerged into the China Sea and was in a position to effect a junction with ROJESTVENSKY, unless forcibly prevented from so doing. That the commander of the "third squadron" should be where he was then reported to be would have involved the making, by his antiquated battleship and his antiquated coast defenders, of their full "nominal speed," which seemed quite out of the question. But the present report that the squadron has come out of the strait at Singapore is as credible as the former report was incredible. The Russians have, then, nothing to wait for but the junction of the squadrons and the covering of the distance which separates them from the battleground, or battle-water, chosen in advance by the Japanese, before engaging in the conflict which is expected to be decisive and final. The Russian objective would be Vladivostok, and the direct road to it would be via the Korean Strait. If they could reach it, they would have the co-operation of the warships in Vladivostok for ulterior operations. The notion that they mean to dodge the Japanese by avoiding the strait where they must encounter them, and making for Vladivostok, or even for Petropavlovski, "outside," may doubtless be dismissed.

The cabled opinion of the Russian Admiralty that ROJESTVENSKY has "more than a chance" with Togo is not very impressive. The procedures and the predictions of the Russian Admiralty thus far have not been adapted to inspire confidence. But when Capt. VON ESSEN of the Russian Navy says in effect the same thing, in saying that the fight will be decided by the "twelve-inch guns," of which Russia will have more than Japan, his opinion is entitled to attention. For Capt. VON ESSEN is one of the Russian naval officers who are serious students of their profession. He is by no means one of those who glory in describing themselves as "champagne officers," and with whom it is as much a point of pride to be ignorant of their business as it is with the officers of a "crack" British regiment. He not only fought his ship as skillfully as bravely, in the sortie of Aug. 10, losing his hearing by reason of the deafening cannonade kept up on board of her. But he also, when the Russian squadron was reduced to an acephalous condition by the killing of Admiral WITOFT in that sortie, and the nominal succession to command of a "champagne officer" in the person of Prince UKHTOMSKY, took the manly part of another sortie on his own account. When the Russian ships in Port Arthur were threatened with destruction by the Japanese bombardment, he took his own ship, the Sevastopol, outside, "standing off" the Japanese torpedo boats which attacked him, and, according to the Russian reports, destroying four of them, he sank his ship in 150 feet of water, and made his escape with that of the remnant of his forlorn hope in a steam launch, thus making sure that she should not become a Japanese prize, in a much more heroical way than that adopted by the other Russian Captains who sank their ships to the water's edge at their moorings to avoid the Japanese cannonade, and afterward endeavored to render them valueless to the Japanese by arranging explosions on board.

According to this competent witness, it was the twelve-inch guns that did the damage at the sea fight of Aug. 10. Any gun under six inches he pronounces a "toy." No doubt the Japanese had luck on their side in the fight of Aug. 10, as indeed did the Russians in their turn. The Russians could not understand why they were not pursued when, after the death of WITOFT and the disablement of the steering gear of his flagship, they turned tail and made for Port Arthur. It is now known that it was the shortage of ammunition on the Japanese battleships that procured their enemies immunity, a shortage perfectly explicable if Capt. VON ESSEN is right in saying that during the three hours of fighting the Japanese fired three shots to the Russians' one. If WITOFT had lived, and if he had known or surmised his enemy's condition, he might possibly have broken through the Japanese line and gained Vladivostok.

The whole story of that combat illustrates how largely the element of luck enters into sea naval warfare. Partly by trusting to that element and partly by counting up the number of big guns on each side, and finding that ROJESTVENSKY has the superiority, Capt. VON ESSEN arrives at the conclusion that Russia has a good "fighting chance." It is curious, by the way, how his conclusions differ from those of our own naval experts founded on the experience of our war with Spain, that the eight-inch gun, considering its superiority in the points of manageability and potential number, is the more effective naval weapon. Certainly at Santiago the guns of larger calibre did not make so good a showing. It is doubtless true that, with all their lives visibly at stake upon the issue, the Russian "champagne officers" have really devoted some attention since they left Europe to gun drill and target practice. But that does not [illegible] course to such arguments as Dr. FRANCOIS TREVES, surgeon to King EDWARD VII., has just given us in his recent declaration that alcohol is distinctly a poison, and that its use should be limited as strictly as any other poison. He further states that it is not an appetizer, and even in very small quantities retards digestion; and that its use is inconsistent with any work requiring quick, keen, alert judgment. Reviewing medical experience for a quarter of a century, he felt warranted in saying that the medicinal use of alcohol in the hospitals is distinctly declining.

OUR NATIONAL POLICE.

In the presence of such a situation as now confronts us in Chicago, it should be clear that our old-fashioned reliance on the "posse comitatus" is discredited and obsolete. Nobody formerly imagined that a riot could be anything more than a temporary and casual ebullition of popular discontent. The notion that there might come to be professional agitators who made their livings by fomenting riot, and to whom a chronic condition of riot was desirable and profitable, never entered anybody's head. But that is exactly the condition we now have to face. Such strikes of unskilled labor as that now in progress in Chicago proceed upon the assumption that any set of men engaged at any time in any calling have a vested interest in continuing so to be engaged on their own terms, and that any "strike breaker," or person who is willing to take any employment upon terms with which the man who has been exercising it is not content, is in the position of an "outlaw" under the old English law, whom anybody that met him was at liberty to slay without having any questions asked. As a Chicago correspondent of The Sun well puts it, the present strike is simply "a routine conflict between organized labor and organized society."

Since the rioters or instigators of riot have become professionals, it is absurd that the defenders of order should continue to be amateurs. When a riot transcends the power of the local police to handle, it has been our custom to call out the local militia. Thus we call away the militiamen from their ordinary business, subjecting them to discharge by their own employers, and we also mark them for future vengeance by the rioters. All this is wrong and absurd. What we need, as was shown in the Chicago railroad strikes, where we had it, is a body of men not in the least amenable to local sentiment, knowing nothing but its orders and having for its orders to suppress rioting and keep the peace. Such a body is the United States Army, and it is the only trustworthy National police that we possess. It is moreover the nucleus of our National defense, and while it is engaged in keeping order at home, it is also preparing itself to repel possible invasion from abroad. Its only defect is that it is inadequate in numbers. At least the size of the present army is the irreducible minimum of our National requirements.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE AND LONGEVITY

A paper by Mr. J. G. VAN CISE, Actuary of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, on the "Effect of Total Abstinence on the Death Rate," lately printed in pamphlet form for general circulation, will be cordially welcomed by those who are looking for arguments to support not merely personal preferences in favor of total abstinence, but the propaganda of prohibition. As a temperance document his paper is just what is desired; as a contribution to statistical literature the average reader of intelligence will be apt to think that he has not proved his assumptions.

For this it is probably true that the author is not wholly to blame. The facts are not at command to show exactly what he desires to make appear, and as the actuarial classifications are necessarily based upon the voluntary statements of the assured as to their habits in the use of liquor, it is impossible to be absolutely sure of anything. Generally speaking, a man or woman who proclaims himself or herself a total abstainer does so with the abundant warrant of an unalterable conviction of duty. Of this class it is accordingly possible to be reasonably sure. But in the class of moderate drinkers we have room for a very wide range. A "common drunkard" would probably give sufficient evidence of his habits to be ineligible if he applied, which he would not be likely to do, but what constitutes a "moderate drinker" depends so wholly upon the point of view that the testimony of an applicant cannot possibly be accepted without the closest verification if it is to be used as a basis for statistical computations. Nearly every man who drinks at all insists that he drinks in great moderation. Perhaps when he thinks how much more he could drink than he does, he is inclined to stand, like Lord CLIVE, "amazed at his own moderation." At the same time, from the point of view of the total abstainer, he may be what is popularly known as "a tank," while from that of the man who is really self-restrained he may appear to drink a great deal more than is good for him.

It is these uncertainties which exist the moment one leaves the absolute classification of total abstinence that deprive comparative tables of longevity of much of the value which it is desired shall attach to them by those whose thesis they seem to prove, which is that from the life insurance point of view the total abstainer is a somewhat better risk than the "moderate drinker," because his actual death rate falls somewhat lower under the actuarial expectancy.

The Rapid Transit Commission may have very good reason to decide against the moving platform for the crosstown service in Thirty-fourth Street, but in doing so it disregards the judgment of the most highly qualified experts in its service. By deciding upon a four-track railway they have consented to cut the service down to a fraction of what the moving platforms would have afforded. As it does not appear that the grounds for lay opposition to the moving platform are nearly as good as those given for its professional approval, it is fair to assume that the reasons for its rejection for Thirty-fourth Street were other than those having reference primarily to the public convenience.

A poll of his countrymen would probably decide that the baby act was not made for LAWSON, but he comes into court with the plea that he has been cheated in a stock transaction and doesn't think he ought to pay what is demanded of him. According to the court proceedings, he was induced to subscribe for $225,000 worth of Kern Incandescent Light Company's stock and made a first payment on the transaction, but declined to come up with further installments, "by reason of the false and fraudulent representations made to him as to the value of the stock and the patents which it covered." This is singing somewhat small for a bird of LAWSON'S glowing topknot and tail feathers, who has been thought proof against all false stock representations, seeing through and through them at a glance like a magpie looking into a hollow bone. If he is so easily cheated his clamor for a public following louder than an army of Chinese gongs and kept up at no end of advertising expense would appear to have something more than a spice of effrontery in it.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Teaching and Research.

Instead of advising colleges and universities to demand less of the work of teaching from their professors and to give them more time for thought and the investigation of new fields, Dr. OSLER might well have preached the wisdom of completely separating the functions of instruction and research. Not only are the two without any close or necessary relation, but they are antagonistic, at least to the extent that notable ability in both directions is rarely if ever combined in the same individual. Very good teaching is often done by persons who know little or nothing of the subjects with which they deal beyond what they find in the textbooks supplied to them, but such persons must possess a sympathy, a tact, and a presence without which the man whose genius is for adding to the world's stock of accumulated knowledge can do his work with a success almost if not quite complete. The customary imposition of the two tasks on the same man is due to nothing but the irrelevant accident that in many branches of original thought and experiment the results are not of a sort to be salable—in other words, they do not provide a livelihood—and teaching supplies the most convenient, and in some ways the most congenial, way to make up the deficiency. But for the man who feels within him the power and the inclination to be something more than a conduit between the reservoirs of acquired knowledge and the little vessels not too eager to receive it, teaching is drudgery of the most disheartening kind, and by them it is commonly done something less than well; often it is done extremely ill. The great difficulty, of course, in the way of reforming this costly evil is that of identifying the man in whose case it will be economically safe to say, "Go ahead and discover something, and we will support you, your wife and children, and your dependent relatives in comfort while you are doing it." The discovery may be deferred for years, or, worse still, it may never come, though the man may conscientiously utilize for years his considerable talents for the admirable end he has in mind. But the promise that could not safely be made to the young man might often be made with comparatively little danger of waste to him who, amid the distractions of the classroom, had found or made time for original work that was also productive. This would save many a professor from falling into a rut and give his place to another man who would perform the lower duties more profitably to all concerned, including the professor. Conscience-stricken millionaires, fortunately, are now deliberating on this knotty problem, and, still more fortunately, some of them are intelligent enough to see that they cannot better make the restitution their awakened souls demand than by giving to men of brains the opportunity to do what they can do better than anybody else.

Murderers Do "See Red."

Mr. RAND'S assertion that NAN PATTERSON "saw red" just before she killed YOUNG has already been sufficiently characterized as part of a prosecuting attorney's argument in a murder case where he found himself almost without any real evidence of guilt, but the phrase is interesting in itself, and perhaps worth a little more consideration. Doubtless a very old expression, the first notable use of it that we remember was made by EUGENE SUE in "The Mysteries of Paris." One of the characters in that book habitually "saw red" before he killed anybody, and his description of the phenomenon is about as effective as anything SUE every wrote. Probably, also, it is as well founded on observed fact, and that is not a satirical statement, either, for SUE had in his diversified life the chance to observe a vast number of facts, and he by no means neglected his opportunities. Moreover, SUE had both training and experience as a doctor, and when he wrote of pathological states he did it with most of the knowledge available in his time, and with

At any rate, he didn't go wrong in making his murderer "see red," for that is just what some murderers do, according to the best of modern authority, and if it had been NAN PATTERSON who claimed, instead of Mr. RAND who charged, that she "saw red" during that fatal ride in the cab, her counsel could have found experts by the dozen who would have testified in all sincerity that the phenomenon went far toward proving her legal irresponsibility for what happened. That she made no such claim is the best of proof that Mr. RAND was wrong—that he either was indulging in a wild guess or else thought he was merely using a figure of speech. It was not at all a figure of speech as SUE employed it, but an accurate description of one effect of a grave nervous affection, amounting to periodic insanity of the homicidal sort.

One Rule Without Exceptions.

One of our correspondents clings to the notion that trees, even if they cannot raise nails driven into their trunks, can increase the elevation of objects deposited among their branches. And he makes the—to us—somewhat embarrassing statement that he has seen a tree in Havana that has lifted a cannon ball caught between two boughs something like ten inches. This statement we call embarrassing, because we, who have not seen that tree, are forced to declare that the correspondent, who has seen it, is mistaken. The wood in any particular part of a branch is no more pushed along by the growth of a tree than is the wood in any particular part of its trunk, and that cannon ball, if it has been raised ten inches or even one, owes its elevation to something else than an elongation of the parts of the branches upon which it rested. That is one of the few certainties in this uncertain world. Even the palms and their relatives, which grow from within instead of by additions on the outside after the fashion of our own nobler and more beautiful trees, would not raise cannon balls unless they were adjusted and kept at the very tip of their terminal buds—and then they would prefer to go around if they could. Observation is death to theory, when the observation is correct, but the deductions from observation are very often false, and the man who "trusts his own eyes" before he has given a lot of training to all the senses and faculties he has commits himself to a multiplicity of errors, grave and gay.

INFLUENCE OF PENSIONS.

If They Dignify Professional Work, Why Not Manual Work?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read in your paper the statement of President Schurman that Mr. Carnegie's fund for pensioning superannuated college professors "dignifies the professor's office and provides for his wants when he is no longer able to work," and President Pritchett's declaration that it will "give dignity and security to the calling of the professor." On the other hand, when a Socialistic plan for old-age pensions for workingmen was under discussion, I have often met the argument—and in your paper, if I mistake not—that such a system would degrade and demoralize the workingmen.

May I not hope that you will give an editorial expression in favor of one or the other of these conflicting opinions? If old-age pensions would be degrading to mechanics, they must be so to professors as well; if the assurance of such a pension adds dignity to a professor's life, it can hardly be demoralizing to a laborer. In view of the fact that the handicap of lower pay, insecurity of employment, danger to life and limb, and unhealthfulness of occupation (as attested by longevity statistics) is all against the manual workers, it seems to me rather unreasonable to expect them to provide for their old age by individual savings, and yet to give pensions to professors.

Deplorable Condition of the Streets.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Wherever breaks in the asphalt of our streets have made places for dirt to accumulate the sweepers carefully avoid putting their brooms and scrapers; neither will they play the hose into them to wash them out.

On the southeast corner of Seventy-second Street and Broadway there is a veritable pest spot, the dirt having lain there for months, and now is so deep that a large pool of stale water lodges there. And this is only one such place along a thoroughfare where countless people pass and repass daily. No wonder that spinal meningitis has prevailed to such an extent.

What are the sweepers paid for if not to remove the dirt? One of them when spoken to about it said: "You should complain to the Commissioners of Highways and the Board of Health," and because of their repeated and persistent avoidance of these spots—deliberately going around them and not into them—I'm beginning to think they must be standing on their rights.

AN INTERESTED CITIZEN.

New York, May 3, 1905.

"Step Lively, Please"—but Forward!

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The congestion that bothers the Interborough and the public is almost entirely at the ends of the cars.

Much education has been imparted to the thoughtless many with respect to "letting 'em out first," and the egress and ingress are better and better timed, with less and less of collision. Much, too, might be done to teach consideration in the matter of crowding the car ends if the daily press would take up the job and enforce it by the advantage of safety in the middle.

The traffic companies should add "Step up forward," and with new emphasis, to the weary guard's hail of "Step lively, please," and very large placards to the same effect might with advantage be posted all over the stations and cars. The people act like brutes, but they are not, and even brutes, with much lessening, might learn to place themselves so as not to unnecessarily obstruct or even keep out the people.

Preserve, but Utilize Bowling Green.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is no reason for abolishing Bowling Green. It is, as far as it goes, a fit termination of Broadway and an eminently fit frontispiece for the new Custom House.

However, there is room for improvement, and the north and south gateways, which are practically unused as a means of thoroughfare, should be supplemented by east and west gateways to accommodate the immense pedestrian traffic which naturally exists between the Bowling Green Building and the Washington Building on the one side and the Produce Exchange and many such buildings on the other side. A pathway a few feet wide would do a great deal to improve the temper of the thousands of people who have heretofore had to encircle Bowling Green to get to a destination lying directly in front of them, and would do very little harm to Bowling Green.

Outlawed National Banknotes.

From Case and Comment.

The financial world will be greatly startled by a decision just rendered in Minnesota by a Justice of the Peace to the effect that a National bank bill is outlawed and cannot be of any value to any one, and therefore cannot constitute a good tender for a debt after six years from its date. The opinion of the learned Justice states that the law is to the effect that a demand must be made within six years in order to preserve a cause of action on a demand note, that the banknote is a demand note, and in the absence of proof that payment thereof had ever been demanded of the bank the years is outlawed. THE NINE TO TRY AGAIN.

Members Surprised That Mayor Wasn't Solidly Behind Bills.

"Disgusted rather than disappointed; by no means discouraged or defeated." This was how the most active member of the Committee of Nine put it when asked how he felt regarding the defeat of the committee's Police Department bills by the Senate after they had passed the Assembly.

Isaac N. Seligman, who was the moving spirit of the Committee of Nine, followed up this statement with the announcement that the committee would not go out of existence with the undoing of its work of several weeks, but would make a renewed effort to obtain legislation.

"The committee will be heard from again next Fall," said Mr. Seligman. "I have conferred with some of the members, and they are one with me in their determination that our hard work must not go for naught. We are determined to have measures embodying the contemplated reforms passed. The efficiency of the Police Department depends upon it."

Mayor McClellan, who all the members of the Committee of Nine thought favored the bill, made it known yesterday that this impression was erroneous. When the Mayor was asked to comment on the defeat of the Police bill in the Senate he said:

"I do not care to make any comment on it either one way or the other. I have not seen the bill and have nothing to say."

"Was it not understood that you were as much in favor of the proposed legislation as was Commissioner McAdoo and the committee itself?" the Mayor was asked.

"Not altogether," was his reply. "I favored some of the recommendations made by the committee, especially after the amendments suggested by the Police Commissioner. But before the bill came up for final reading it had been very much amended. When the Legislature is through with a bill it is likely to be quite different from the measure as originally introduced."

"Your Democratic friends in the Senate seemed to be unanimous in their opposition to the proposed reforms," was suggested.

"Well, that does not necessarily mean that they acted with my approval," was his reply.

All the members of the Committee of Nine who consented to comment on the situation said they understood that both the Mayor, the Police Commissioner, and Gov. Higgins were unqualifiedly in favor of the bill. The only amendments were the striking out of the clause creating a bureau outside the department to deal with disorderly houses, and the provision giving the Commissioner the power of dismissal and reduction in rank.

"The failure of the Senate to pass this bill after the Assembly had passed it certainly looks very suspicious," said Mr. Seligman, in discussing the matter. "I don't wish to insinuate, but I would not be a bit surprised if the secret benevolent organizations in the Police Department, who sent representatives before the Committee of Nine to testify that they were 'purely benevolent,' had extended the scope of 'pure benevolence' to Albany.

"The Democrats seemed to be solidly against the measure for some reason, Senator McCarren being the leader as usual when something tending to the benefit of the people and purity of the city's civic life had to be defeated. It was the same crowd in the main that defeated the gas measure. It is a shame."

Commissioner McAdoo received a telegram yesterday afternoon informing him that the Committee of Nine bill had been defeated, but that another bill, giving him the right to make the [illegible] and formulate any rules he may desire for that purpose, had passed.

TAFT ORDERS DAVIS HOME.

Canal Zone Governor, Ill, Refused to Heed Physicians' Advice.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Secretary Taft to-day cabled Gov. Davis at Panama to return at once to the United States, placing Col. Gorgas in charge of the administration of the Canal Zone until the arrival there of Gov. Magoon.

Gov. Davis is suffering from malaria and his physicians advised him to leave the Isthmus to recuperate. He had resisted their appeals, however, fearing that his sudden departure at a time when the health conditions on the Isthmus were adverse would be misunderstood. Secretary Taft in his cablegram said:

"No one who knows us I do your courageous fidelity to duty in face of all obstacles will attribute any unworthy motives to your coming when it is my order against your will."

It is the Secretary's purpose to appoint Gen. Davis one of the Board of Consulting Engineers, which will consist of twelve members, eight of whom have now been selected.

The report that determined Secretary Taft to summon the Governor home was the following cablegram received from Col. Gorgas dated at Panama to-day:

"Four yellows in hospital; none since May 1. Outbreak under control. General conditions excellent. Have advised Davis home health May 16."

The Secretary plans to have the Executive Committee of the Canal Commission, consisting of Chairman Shonts, Gov. Magoon, and Chief Engineer Wallace, sail for the Isthmus on May 16. They will be followed by the remaining members of the commission on July 1.

COLON, May 5.—The steamer Seguranca sailed from this port yesterday for New York with a large number of passengers, over thirty of the employes of the Canal Commission going home in consequence of discontent with conditions on the Isthmus.

Legislative and Executive Ability.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. J. S. Crosby asks in this morning's TIMES whether the proposed transfer of the franchise-granting power from the Board of Aldermen to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment is not a departure from the principle requiring the separation of the legislative and executive functions of government. Judging from the seriousness with which he poses this query it would seem that in his mind this separation was a foundation of our system of government. Perhaps it is. But anyway, folks don't look upon it nowadays as a fetich, such as, for instance, well, say, municipal ownership. A good many people are coming to believe that it's a pretty good business principle that a man who is qualified to plan out how a business is to be carried on is equally qualified to do the carrying out of it. England with its Parliamentary system isn't so much worse off than we are with our beautiful separation plan.

Not "Fiend," but "Friend."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In Wednesday's issue it is stated that M. Kronshevan of Kishineff has started a paper bearing the gruesome name The Fiend. The cable news of other New York dailies gives it the same way, as the translation of the Russian word "drug," which really means "friend."

The error recalls the episode of the Dunkard convention, held in Pennsylvania many years ago. The London Times had never heard of this religious sect, and as a letter "r" had crept into the word in transmission The Times published an editorial bewailing the ravages of intemperance in the United States, pointing out that the topers over there actually had organized [illegible]

FREDERIC W. KITCHELL.

MOODY SAYS CONGRESS CAN CONTROL RATES

Attorney General's Opinion to Senate Committee.

HE CITES MANY DECISIONS

Power to Regulate Common Carrier Is Legislative and Not Judicial, He Says.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Attorney General Moody has sent to Senator Elkins as Chairman of the Senate's Inter-State Commerce Committee an exhaustive opinion as to to the right of the Government to regulate the operations of railroads, especially in the matter of fixing rates.

The Attorney General holds that the Government has full right to regulate the operation of the railroads and to prescribe the maximum rates which they may charge. He holds that this power is vested in Congress.

The opinion was given in response to the committee's request, and is in substance as follows:

"It was settled in the group of cases commonly called the Granger cases, that there is a Governmental power to regulate operations of railroads acting as common carriers, and, as a part of such regulation, to prescribe the maximum rates which they may charge in the future for the services which they shall render to those who resort to them, and that the power is vested in, and may be exercised by, the legislative branch of the Government.

"These cases affirm the right of a State Legislature to confer the power in question upon a State Commission. No reason has been advanced, and none can be perceived, why the same principles would not apply to Congress. The right of Congress to confer upon a commission the rate-making power was distinctly presented to the court in the case of the Inter-State Commerce Commission vs. Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific Railway Company.

"Assuming that the rate-making power is a legislative function and not judicial, it follows that Congress has not the right to vest it in the courts either by conferring original or appellate jurisdiction over the subject."

After citing many Supreme Court decisions to support his opinion, the Attorney General submits this summary:

"First—There is a Governmental power to fix the maximum future charges of carriers by railroad, vested in the Legislatures of the States with regard to transportation exclusively within the States, and vested in Congress with regard to all other transportation.

"Second—Although legislative power, properly speaking, cannot be delegated, the lawmaking body having enacted into law the standard of charges which shall control, may intrust to an administrative body not exercising in the true sense judicial power the duty to fix rates in conformity with that standard.

"Third—The rate-making power is not a judicial function, and cannot be conferred constitutionally upon the courts of the United States, either by way of original or appellate jurisdiction.

"Fourth—The courts, however, have the power to investigate any rate or rates fixed by legislative authority and to determine whether they are such as would be confiscatory of the property of the carrier, and if they are judicially found to be confiscatory in their effect, to restrain their enforcement.

"Fifth—Any law which attempts to deprive the courts of this power is unconstitutional.

"Sixth—Any regulation of land transportation, however exercised, would seem to be so indirect in its effect upon the ports that it could not constitute a preference between the ports of different States within the meaning of Article I, Section 9, Paragraph 6 of the Constitution.

"Seventh—Reasonable, just, and impartial rates determined by legislative authority are not within the prohibition of Article I, Section 9, Paragraph 6 of the Constitution, even though they result in a varying charge per ton per mile to and from the ports of the different States."

What Is the Matter with the Teachers?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

How is it that the teachers in our public schools who pass an examination before they are admitted to teach, and who are supposed to have had the advantages of a good education, are themselves such poor users of the English language? The fault must lie somewhere. Are their examinations not strict enough, or do they allow themselves to grow careless once they have their diplomas?

The Board of Education would render one of its greatest services to parents of children if it took this matter up and made a rigid investigation, and perhaps it might be surprised at the amount of ignorance it would meet in this respect.

A PARENT.

New York, May 3, 1905.

A SONG OF MOTHERHOOD.

Sew, sew, sew! For there's many a rent to mend;
There's a stitch to take and a dress to make,
For where do her labors end?
Sew, sew, sew! For a rent in a dress she spies,
Then it's needle and thread and an aching head
And see how the needle flies!

Brush, brush, brush! For there's many a boy to clean,
And start to school with a slate and rule,
With a breakfast to get between.
Comb, comb, comb! In the minute she has to spare,
For what is so wild—unreconciled
As the wastes of a youngster's hair?

Sweep, sweep, sweep! Oh, follow the flashing broom,
As with towel bound her forehead round
She goes from room to room.
Dust, dust, dust! As down on her knees
she kneels,
For there's much to do in the hour or two
Of interval 'twixt meals.

Bake, bake, bake! For the cookie jar piled high
But yesterday, in some curious way
Is empty again, O my!
Stir, stir, stir, in a froth of yellow and white,
For well she knows how the story goes
Of a small boy's appetite.

Scrub, scrub, scrub! For the floor that was spick and span,
Alas, alack! has a muddy track
Where some thoughtless youngster ran.
Splash, splash, splash! For the dishes of thrice a day
Are piled up high to wash and dry
And put on their shelves awsy.

Patch, patch, patch! And oh for a pantaloon
That would not tear or rip or wear
In the course of an afternoon!
Patch, patch, patch! And see how the needle flies,
For a mother knows how the fabric goes
Where the seat of trouble lies.

Toil, toil, toil! For when do her labors end,
With a dress to make and a cake to bake
And dresses and hose to mend?
Stew, stew, stew! Fret and worry and fuss,
And who of us knows of the frets and woes
In the days when she mothered us?

BINNACLE BILL WON THE BASEBALL GAME

With His Ballooning Trousers He Made Several Home Runs.

"DON'T CHEER, BOYS," HE SAID

As Generous to Defeated Marines as Capt. Philip Was to the Overwhelmed Spaniards.

"Friend Scribe," said Toddy Jones, contemporaneous historian of the navy yard, yesterday, "it's a $50,000 gun to a chew of deep-sea plug that there won't be no more baseball functions with ancient mariners over here. The reason? Well, there was one of those parties here yesterday. Mr. Binnacle Bill McDougall, A. B., he pulled out the game in the fourth attack with a few continuous an' picturesque home runs. I wouldn't swear that the same Mr. Binnacle Bill McDougall isn't running yet. Them marines were certainly sore.

"Ever since the President took to the tall timbers out West there has been a feelin' at the yard that the athletic side of the service needed a boost. What brought on yesterday's joust was the arrogance of them marines with their pompadour chests, who have been goin' around the yard talkin' learnedly of 'lost bags' and 'wet bails,' and sneerin' at the more venerable sea dogs. Timbers of Paul Jones! the service seemed goin' to—high school. Arose the man to fit the hour in Twelve Bore Tavish, A. B., who is credited with a head like a salt horse cask. Twelve Bore knows this National game, because his niece's best fellow is on the Bangor Giants, an' he flagged all the mariners to a mind meetin' last week, and with much strokin' of his brow explained that them half-calked, dinky draught marines were simply slingin' around baseball shot, the players in the durned game beatin' at a ball with marlinspikes and the marker chap at the target putting his face in jail so that it might not become like the Cristy Colon."

Mr. Jones then told how the seamen greeted the news that the marines were boasting of their baseball prowess.

"Humph!" said B. Bill McDougall, according to Mr. Jones, "they use armor, eh? Fust thing ye know them papar-collar marines will be callin' themselves the U-nited States Navy Yard team an' a-playin' college doods that'll log them fer full-draft sailors. We got to train. Forty years hev I stood up fer the sarvice. Sign me on a ball fleet."

"Sign me on, too," said Glory-Hole Charlie.

Twelve-Bore Tavish was made trainer on account of having a player nearly in his family. All during the week there were weird noises in obscure parts of the yard—the team was in secret training. It was to be a surprise attack on the marines.

In picturesque column formation at last Toddy Jones, A. B., led the fleet of grizzled veterans to the field of glory. Corporal O'Hara, who is a fighting man, umpired with a club in his belt—the club being just for military effect, as he explained to Toddy. Glory was catcher, being very broad of beam, and Barometer O'Brien insisted by virtue of his great age on occupying the post of danger, shortstop. McDougall gyrated in the outfield.

"It war a great engagement," lingeringly said Mister Jones in looking over the log. "We didn't lose a ship, barrin' Bill, an' he ain't scuttled by a long sight, but we did dent them pore marines like Port Arthur. I ain't never had no hard feelings agin the critters, but arter Barometer O'Brien, whose binnacles ain't now as good as searchlights, war hit plumb amidships with a hit ball that nearly went through his timbers an' he heels till his keel war top-up an' stays there a-talkin' to hisself—an' arter Bill in the outfield nearly blows off in the wind storm in bobbin' up fer a high ball we just turns loose a broadside of art an' slangbanged around that loop.

"When Binnacle had that trouble it was because his pants ballooned. He takes his knife then an' slits 'em promiscuous like on his starboard side to prevent such difficulty with his canvas again.

"It war arter this that Bill, who got kind o' groggy runnin' under a lop-sided sail, won the game. It looked green an' choppy for us fer a while. Twelve-Bore, who was pitchin' for us, swore we went around the firin' end o' that loop like cruisers on parade round a buoy, and I guess 'bout all the hits we made war one Barometer gave the marines' marker on the load line when he war swingin' natural like fer a ball going aft. Them marines offered to git the helm of the Hancock over fer a bat an' to git big gun sights for Twelve-Bore. Never heerd sich sass. We seen the crisis.

"About that time them marines began to hit the target hard. Barometer O'Brien was responsible. He got a crick in his back, an' as he lay disabled at the home port them marines—a whole crew of 'em—came racin' in with tallies. They all was yellin,' 'Kiss me, Hobson,' an' it certainly made us feel bad.

"Seemed like big seas when we goes in fer the next attack, an' we feels like fer-boats in a fog. 'Never give up the ship,' says Bill as he took up the spike. Link Flannigan goes to the turret. That marine has an arm that can rake three mess tables in time o' peace an' a leg that's still growin.' He wiggles all up in a clew tryin' to beat Twelve-Bore's heavin' style.

"'Ye can tire when ye are ready,' says Bill at the bat. We lays our hopes on Bill. An' Bill he startin' did lay out about him, but, splice my jibs, that ball would not hit his spike. Bill tried all ways, but it war no good. But the clouds broke. Link sends in one of his supper curves that seemed comin' three ways. Bill he up with his bat hard aport an' elevates his starboard leg, bow on, like a disappearing gun. The wind balloons his pants again. He swung. One thing did disannear—it war the ball, Mister.

"Bill heels as though injured; then he looks aloft. All them half-calked marines looks up.

"Then a light like a liner's lamps hits in on Bill, who was feelin' hisself aft. He gets a half nelson on his pants with both flippers an' starts out to loop the loop like a hurricane. 'Come back,' yells Corporal O'Hara. 'Never give up the ship; haul down yer flag,' says Bill. An' he keeps runnin'. Great timbers, how he steamed! Them marines think he's crazy an' try to torpedo him. It war like ferry-boats buttin' a battleship. Bill might be looping the loop yet an' a-pilin' up that score but that he eased on his pants a minute to suit on his hands. The last ball reports down from under his pants where he had been a-holdin' it as a prize o' war. Being a matey of Bill's I just gives him two seconds to give the marines sea room.

"'Don't cheer, boys; remember what Cap. Philip said concernin' them other landlubbers at Santiago,' says Bill as he lights over the yard wall, him a-waving his loose propeller canvas, which same, Mister, war the pennant."

ELASTIC LIFE PHILOSOPHY.

Equipped Only with Rubber Band a Sage Edifies Broadway.

A novelty arrived in Broadway last night in the Philosopher of the Elastic Life, who may yet found a new school intelligible to all, and requiring as equipment only a rubber band.

The philosopher appeared in front of the Hotel Imperial and attracted a crowd by his actions. He removed his coat, folded it, laid it on the sidewalk, placed his hat upon it; then he drew a small rubber band from his pocket. He broke the circle with his fingers, and, stretching the elastic to its limit, held it above his head.

"Gentlemen," said the philosopher, "and pardon me—ladies—I did not see you. In this little piece of elastic there is the philosophy of life and living. When it is stretched to its full length it represents the strained life; when relaxed it is the simple life.

"Appearances, ladies and gentlemen," said the philosopher, stretching the elastic until it threatened to snap. He allowed the rubber to relax with a snap and chuckled. "But there's the goods. It doesn't look so big, but it amounts to as much and is more solid.

"And you, ladies?" Once more the elastic extended. "Dress! But there's simplicity. And who shall say that the original Eve was less of a woman than any of you?"

That decided Policeman Xenodocius, the Classic Cop of the Tenderloin. He arrested the Philosopher of the Elastic Life.

"Pardon me," said the sophist. "I have but one more lesson to—"

"Come on!" said Xenodocius urgently.

"Well," said Sergt Charles Place, placidly, a moment later, "I don't see that he did anything dangerous."

"Aha!" cried the philosopher. "Here is a man of good elastic. I congratulate you, Sir."

As the philosopher turned to go, he saw the reporters. Out came the inevitable elastic.

"Gentlemen," said he, "you see it is stretched. Now it is not stretched. This applies also to journalism. There is no need for you to make it the length of this. See!" And he slowly allowed the rubber band to contract. "Observe that it loses nothing but gains rather by compactness."

A wave of his hand and he was gone.

BENEFIT FOR SANATORIUM.

Theatre Well Filled at Performance to Aid Stony Wold Institution.

A benefit performance for the Stony Wold Sanatorium was given yesterday afternoon at the Broadway Theatre. On the bill were "Dorothy's Christmas," a play in one act; the second scene from "The Merchant of Venice," acted by H. R. Roberts, John Glendinning, and R. D. MacLean; the Alice Fischer Company in the first act of "The School for Husbands," Sam Bernard and Hattie Williams; the second act of "The Heir to the Hoorah," Joseph Coyne, Digby Bell, Edna Wallace Hopper in "Captain January," and Arthur Donaldson and the Heidelberg Boys from "The Prince of Pilsen."

Virginia Harned, who was to have appeared, announced to the audience that the setting for her act not having arrived, it would be impossible to give it.

The house was well filled, and a comfortable sum was realized for the home.

FIRE AT FISCHER FARM.

Outbuildings at New Canaan Destroyed in Incendiary Blaze.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., May 5.—The stables and a number of outbuildings on the New Canaan estate of Mrs. Benedict Fischer, widow of Benedict Fischer, were destroyed by an incendiary fire this morning. The loss was $15,000.

Several blood horses and some fine cattle were in the barns. Most of these were taken out safely. It was necessary to blindfold the horses. The place was being made ready for the arrival of Mrs. Fischer, who is now at her home in New York.

HAY'S HEALTH IMPROVES.

Secretary Able to Take Long Walks and Will Return in June.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—Letters received here from Secretary Hay speak most encouragingly of his physical improvement. A letter to a friend states that the Secretary has received beneficial results from his visit to Bad Nauheim, and that he is able to take daily walks of two or three miles.

Assistant Secretary Loomis has received a letter from Mr. Hay in which he says his sojourn in Italy was highly beneficial and that he has gained strength daily. A cable from Vienna says Mr. Hay will sail for the United States in June.

STEAMER FAST IN ICEFLOE.

The Turbine Victorian, with 1,600 Passengers, Held Off Cape Ray.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., May 5.—The Allan Line steamer Victorian, from Liverpool for Montreal, with 1,600 passengers, is fast in an icefloe one mile off Cape Ray, at the entrance of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. She is unable to proceed, the ice being packed across Cabot Strait.

The purser, who came ashore to telegraph to the owners, reported all well on board.

BARGE TURNED TURTLE.

Man and Woman Saved by Tug in Heavy Blow.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., May 5.—Capt. James McDonald of Jersey City, in command of the tugboat Zouave, put into this place this morning and reported a rescue last night off Hog Island Buoy. A man and a woman were saved from drowning when a coal barge turned turtle and sank in a short while.

The Captain said that yesterday afternoon a severe sand and wind storm struck them while off this town. He had in tow a coal barge which was loaded with 670 tons of coal. A great gust caught the barge and she turned turtle. On the barge at the time were Mr. and Mrs. Henderson of Jersey City. Both the man and the woman leaped into the water when the barge began to sink, and Capt. McDonald with the tug hurried to their aid. It was several minutes before he was able to reach them, and when he did they were in an exhausted condition and much the worse for their experience. They were both taken aboard the tug.

Verdict for $40,650 Reversed.

A decision reversing a verdict for $40,000 obtained by Robert Maynicke, an architect, against the Central Realty Bond and Trust Company was handed down yesterday by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. Mr. Maynicke sued for $81,000 for preparing plans for a $3,225,000 building at Broad Street and Exchange Place, and the Appellate Division holds that the company was not bound by conversations between its President, Henry Morgenthau, and other officials and Mr. Maynicke, upon which the architect based his claim.

Engagement Announced.

Frank R. Lawrence has issued invitations for the marriage of his daughter, Miss Eva Lawrence, to David Houghtaling Taylor on Thursday, June 1, at 4 o'clock at St. Bartholomew's Church. A reception at the Lawrence residence, 534 Madison Avenue, will follow the ceremony.

LOCKED IN PRISONERS RESCUED BY FIREMEN

Police Furnished Ladder That Seemed Too Short to Prisoners.

THEY COGITATED 3 HOURS

Mr. Gernshym and Mr. Seeligman of Franklin Street Furnish Amusement to Home-Going Crowd.

The Broadway business crowd hurrying down Franklin Street to the elevated stations at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon stopped suddenly when somebody noticed that on the third story of the building at 73 Franklin Street, occupied by H. Gernshym & Co., jacket manufacturers, were two men who waved their arms from the windows and shouted. The men were Max Gernshym and A. L. Seeligman, members of the firm.

"What's the matter?" said a man in the crowd.

"We're locked in. We can't get out. The elevator boy's gone off with the keys."

"Come down to the first floor and come through the windows," suggested a man of brilliance.

"We can't!" retorted the man in the window. "The boy's done his work so well that we are locked in even up here."

As the crowd had nothing further to suggest it simply blocked Franklin Street and grinned. Mr. Gernshym and Mr. Seeligman held a council of war.

"Ha! The telephone!" cried Mr. Gernshym.

"The very thing. We'll call Police Headquarters," said Mr. Seeligman.

Police Headquarters heard their tale. The Leonard Street Station was notified, and Policemen Haggerty and Hughes were sent to 73 Franklin Street. They took in the situation at a glance and went off to get a ladder. The one they brought was a little short, but it was estimated that if the prisoners in the building climbed down the fire-escape a little way it would be all right. These instructions were shouted to Messrs. Gernshym and Seeligman.

"But—but you expect us to climb down those ladders to the street?"

"Of course," said the policeman.

"We won't do anything of the kind!" retorted Mr. Seeligman, "Why, we would break our necks."

"Exactly," agreed Mr. Gernshym. "We are no acrobats."

The police, however, fixed up the ladders, but the men in the third-story windows made no move to come down.

"We've done our duty, anyway," said Policeman Hughes. "You can come down or not, as you please. There's a ladder waiting."

"Before I risk my life coming down that ladder," cried Mr. Seeligman, "I'll stay here all night, and get the restaurant at the corner to hoist up food to us."

"How about your family?" asked Policeman Haggerty, with attempt to induce.

"Why—why? Yes. Gernshym, how about home?" said Mr. Seeligman, turning to his partner.

After a brief consultation the men announced from their lofty platform that sooner than come down the ladder they had decided to stay in the building all night and would telephone their wives that they were safe. Whatever their wives thought of this proposal both Mr. Gernshym and Mr. Seeligman refused to say last night, but it is certain that after they had telephoned, Mr. Gernshym to his home at 38 West Eighty-ninth Street and Mr. Seeligman to his residence at 231 West One Hundred and Twenty-ninth Street, the two seemed more desirous to descend. But they only seemed. The policemen went off duty at 8 o'clock and took the ladder away.

Somebody suggested that the Fire Department could furnish a ladder. At that Mr. Seeligman and Mr. Gernshym gleefully called up the Fire Department by telephone. Soon a truck ladder arrived, and upon that the merchants descended to mother earth amid thunderous cheers from the crowd.

Mr. Seeligman refused to discuss the matter when called on the telephone last night, but Mr. Gernshym chuckled over the wire and said:

"You should have seen me scaling down that ladder!"

CHASE STEER IN ENGINE.

Jersey City Police, After Much Trouble, Kill Escaped Animal.

With six policemen in a patrol wagon, one on horseback, and another in a Lehigh Valley Railroad locomotive close on his track, a steer, even one of the wild Texas variety, would seem to have little chance for his life. Yet one kept that many policemen with several foot volunteers busy in Jersey City for more than an hour yesterday. The animal arrived from the plains on Wednesday, and was put in the abattoir yards near Jersey and Johnston Avenues until the market demand should call for his beef.

Early yesterday the steer, with a bellow, made a rush at the side of the pen and tossed the palings of which it was composed over his back. Then he made a dash for the street. The route the animal selected was through Johnston Avenue to Whiton Street, and thence to Phillips Street. Many children were on their way to school at the time. They scampered into hallways and yards. The steer continued his flight without paying any attention to them. Reaching Phillips Street, the steer continued his flight along the line of the Central Railroad.

By this time an alarm had been sent to the Communipaw Avenue Police Station, and the six reserves jumped into the patrol wagon and started out. In the meantime Mounted Policeman Connolly had got after the steer and chased it half way to the National Storage Docks. Then the steer wheeled and got after Connolly. His horse, not liking the steer's wild Texan manners, wheeled so suddenly as almost to throw Connolly from the saddle. For a time the position was reversed. Connolly's horse went flying through Phillips Street with the steer a close second. On they went until the patrol wagon arrived and the police began peppering at the animal with their revolvers. They say that they fired at least fifty shots at the steer, but either they did not hit him or his side was so tough that the bullets failed to penetrate it.

The steer wheeled again and dashed down Phillips Street a second time. At that moment a Lehigh Valley freight engine came down the Central tracks. Patrolman Stanley and Detective Sergeant Holtic, who had left the patrol wagon, hailed the engineer. He took them aboard and started after the steer. The engine chased the steer to the National Storage Docks. There the workmen joined in the attack and turned the steer back. As the animal faced the engine Holtic and Martin each sent a bullet into the steer's head. He fell dead. It was dressed and quartered by butchers from the abattoir.

BISHOP POTTER'S BOYHOOD.

He Recalls the Time When He Hoisted Doughnuts on a String.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 5.—Bishop Henry C. Potter gave reminiscences this evening of the days when he was a schoolboy in Philadelphia. He addressed the annual meeting of the alumni of the Episcopal Academy, at Locust and Juniper Streets. When he was a student the Academy was at the southwest corner of Twelfth and Filbert Streets. He said:

"Our head master in those days, the Rev. Dr. George Emlen Hare, was something of a disciplinarian. He insisted on the boys going up one stairway and down another. The lad who descended the wrong one was certain to encounter the Principal at the landing. I was frequently guilty of such offenses.

"My punishment was incarceration in one of the upper rooms of the building. I well remember how I let down some twine to the school yard on such occasions. The boys below fastened doughnuts to the string, which I speedily pulled up to my window and enjoyed.

"How well I recollect dear old Dr. Hare saying to a lad who could not sing a note: 'Smith, I observe that you are not singing.'

"To which the other replied: 'Well, Sir, I can't sing, but I'm endeavoring to make a joyful noise.'"

The academy was established in 1785, and the Bishop's father, Bishop Alonzo Potter of Pennsylvania, reorganized it in 1846.

SOCIOLOGS AT ELLIS ISLAND.

Yale Men Miss Immigrant Rush, but Hear Conditions Described.

Prof. William Bailey and his party of ten "theologs" and thirty academic students, who are making a whirl-about-town study of the social conditions in Manhattan, dropped in yesterday afternoon for a two-hour peep at the immigration problem as portrayed at Ellis Island.

Unfortunately the party, which was pleasurably augmented by a party of twenty-four young women, who are members of the Sociology Class at the University Settlement, under the guidance of Dr. Hamilton, were unable to see the immigration station in full operation. This was due to the fact that for two days there had been a lull in the Spring rush of aliens, and the few that there were to be examined has been passed in the morning.

The party, however, was entertained in the Commissioner's office with speeches and talks on immigration. Commissioner Watchorn gave an informal talk on immigration, and explained the workings of the service, closing with a brief description of the class of people who are flocking to our shores, and indicating the persons which the department considers undesirable. The methods of ascertaining and detecting this class of people he went into quite fully, in response to questions, mainly put to him by the young women of the party. Dr. Wild of the Bureau of Statistics, who is on his way to Porto Rico, also spoke.

TO OMIT HARVARD DINNER.

President Coming to Commencement—No Room Big Enough.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 5.—The regular Harvard commencement dinner, an institution nearly as old as the college itself, is to be omitted this year, because President Roosevelt, '80, is to be the guest of honor. A simple luncheon will be served at the Union.

Since alumni all over the country signified their intention of being present, it has been figured that a place for an alumni dinner to accommodate all could not be found in Cambridge, unless perhaps on Soldiers' Field. The price of tickets for the luncheon will be 50 cents.

PRESIDENT HUNTS IN VAIN.

Bears All Gone to Cover—May Delay Breaking Camp.

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Col., May 5.—Slippery trails could not keep President Roosevelt under cover to-day. At noon the clouds lifted, and the snow and rain which had fallen continuously for four days ceased.

With the first appearance of the sun the President's party started out after the dogs, but, though the hunt was continued until dark, it was unsuccessful. An early start will be made to-morrow. The President's health has been excellent. If to-morrow proves a good day for the chase, the most will be made of it, and the arrival at Glenwood Springs may be delayed until Sunday morning.

RAYMOND HITCHCOCK WEDS.

Comedian Married to Flora Zabelle, a Member of His Company.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 5.—Raymond Hitchcock of "The Yankee Consul" company and Miss Flora Zabelle, leading woman of the same organization, surprised the other members of the company to-day by becoming man and wife. The Rev. M. M. Mangasarian of Chicago, father of the bride, performed the ceremony.

Mr. Hitchcock and Miss Zabelle had been engaged for some time, but it was one of the stipulations of their contract that they remain single during the present theatrical season. Dr. Magasarian arrived unexpectedly in St. Louis in time to bid farewell to his daughter before departing on a tour of Europe. The marriage took place in the parlor of the Planters' Hotel.

PALLAS TEMPORARILY BLIND.

Treatment with Belladonna Sends Commissioner to Dark Room.

John J. Pallas, President of the Park Board, is ill with gastritis and an affliction of the eyes. He was compelled to leave his desk at the Arsenal on Saturday of last week and has not been able to resume his duties since. He has been living at 366 West Fifty-eighth Street, but in order to get better attention moved to the apartment hotel at 308 West Fifty-eighth Street.

The Commissioner's principal trouble is with his eyes. He has had trouble with them for several years. Recently he has undergone a course of treatment for them, and so much belladonna has been used as for the time to render him almost sightless. He is at present kept in an entirely dark room.

Last night he was comfortable, but it will be several days before he can resume his work.

HARVARD WINS IN DEBATE.

Defeats Yale in Contending for Commission to Fix Rail Rates.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 5.—The Harvard debating team won the seventeenth annual debate with Yale in Sanders Theatre to-night, supporting the affirmative of the question, "Resolved, that power be given a commission to fix railroad rates."

Prof. W. Z. Ripley presided. The judges were Prof. J. W. Jenks of Cornell, Judge A. L. Brown of the United States District Court, and Judge Edgar Aldrich of the United States District Court of Appeals.

The Harvard men contended that, although the Inter-State Commerce Commission could condemn excessive rates, it was powerless to afford the relief due the public, inasmuch as it could not fix new and just schedules.

The Yale men's line of argument was to the effect that present laws, if enforced, were sufficient. It was doubtful whether Congress had authority to place such power in a commission and that Inter-State commerce rates were regulated by natural causes that could not be influenced by legislation.

The speakers were:

Harvard—A. C. Blagden, '06; Myer Kasbatchnick, '06, and A. M. Newald, '06.

Yale—J. N. Pierce, '06; F. B. Pierce, '06; G. B. Hopkins, '05, Lu B.

Following the debate the speakers were entertained at dinner by the University Club.

SKIBO HOLDS THE FORT IN RUNAWAY BROUGHAM

Owner Follows Vehicle to See If Her Pet Dog Is Safe.

WILD DASH IN BROADWAY

Department Store Caller's Voice Too Much for Team—Bolted, Leaving Miss Bradley Behind.

"Four-fifty-one," bellowed the Stentor who summons shoppers' carriages to the front of a Broadway department store, between Eighteenth and Nineteenth Streets, late yesterday afternoon. The brougham in which Miss H. W. Bradley of 136 East Thirty-ninth Street and her Scotch terrier Skibo had come downtown shopping drew up for its occupant. Stentor bellowed another number, and the two horses started on a race down Broadway just as Miss Bradley stepped forward to get in.

John Stapleton of 814 Columbus Avenue, who drives the brougham for its owner, and Alfred Moulton, a stableman at 215 Lexington Avenue, tried to bring the animals to a standstill. They were on the uptown side of the street. Other drivers were dodging for their lives. The kingbolt had been jerked out of place and the brougham was swinging loose from the pole, frightening the horses by the noise.

A dead car at Twenty-third Street had caused a line-up of Broadway cars down to Fourteenth Street. The brougham swung close to them. A few women passengers on the cars screamed out to the driver to stop the horses or quit his job. Policemen dashed out into the street, but failed to stop the runaways.

Stapleton turned the horses into the curb at Fourteenth Street. He was hurled to the ground and badly bruised. The horses broke loose from the vehicle, turning up Fourth Avenue. With the pole dragging behind, and followed by a hooting mob, they signaled their coming ahead, so that the way was cleared. They were stopped at Twenty-third Street. The driver refused medical attention, and led his horses to their stable.

Miss Bradley had followed the brougham down Broadway, wringing her hands and asking the policemen who joined the chase if Skibo were still alive. When she got up with the vehicle, Miss Bradley opened the door and found Skibo sitting coolly on the seat as if nothing had happened. She folded Skibo in her arms, exclaiming ecstatically:

"Dear, brave old Skibo! You held the fort."

CAMPAIGN AGAINST GIFT.

Committee Seeks to Educate Church on "Tainted" Money.

BOSTON, May 5.—The educational campaign against "tainted" money will be begun to-morrow by the Committee of Twenty representing Congregationalists who protest against the course of the American Board in accepting John D. Rockefeller's $100,000 gift. To-morrow's mail will carry to every church of the denomination four documents calculated to arouse opposition to future acceptance of such gifts.

One is a letter explaining the significance of the movement; another is the statement recently issued by Dr. Washington Gladden of Columbus, a moderator of the National Congregational Council; the third is a sermon entitled "The Spirit of Protest," recently delivered by the Rev. Artemas J. Haynes of New Haven, and the fourth, the work of the committee, bears the caption "The Issue Before the Church."

WHAT IS DOING IN SOCIETY.

To-day's chief feature, socially, is the parade of the Coaching Club. Neither the President, Col. Jay, nor the Secretary, William C. Gulliver, will be in line. Robert L. Gerry has charge of the meet. In past seasons it has been the habit of the club to have its parade before noon and to drive to Morris Park. It being out of the question to drive to Belmont Park, the whips are to have luncheon at the Metropolitan Club, and the parade will follow. Eleven coaches are expected to be in line, and include those of Gustave Kissel, G. L. Boissevain, Robert L. Gerry, J. Henry Smith, Oliver G. Jennings, C. Ledyard Blair, E. Victor Loew, Seymour Le Grand Cromwell, and G. G. Haven, Jr.

There will be the usual review at the upper end of Central Park. Next Saturday the members will tool their coaches to Blairsden, the country place in New Jersey of C. Ledyard Blair. As many as possible will leave town Friday, driving to Tuxedo, where J. Henry Smith and T. Suffern Tailer will entertain them, and the following day they are to go to Blairsden.

Mrs. Henry Sedley, Mrs. Forbes, and Miss Forbes are booked to sail to-day for Europe and will probably not return until August, when Miss Eleanor Sedley, who has been in Europe several years, will return with her mother. The Forbes party will spend some time at one of the "cures" and later will be in Paris.

Mrs. Andrew Simonds, well known in Tuxedo, where she has spent much time, has left the Louisiana plantation of her father and returned to Charleston. Her ankle, which was broken last Winter, is still so troublesome that she uses a cane in walking.

Mr. and Mrs. H. McK. Twombly have opened Florham, their country place at Madison, N. J., for the season.

A musicale for the benefit of the Washington Heights Day Nursery will take place at the Hotel Astor on Friday afternoon next at 3 o'clock. Hans Kronold, Miss Lamport, Edward Barrow, and Max Herzberg are to be among the artists.

Two dances took place at Delmonico's last evening. Both were small and both were for Yale undergraduates. One was arranged by Mr. and Mrs. William P. Dixon and took place in the large ballroom, and the other in the small ballroom was under the auspices of the Alpha Beta Phi.

Michael P. G. Grace, who has just arrived from abroad, is the father of the Countess of Donoughmore and of Mrs. John S. Phipps. The engagement of his niece, Miss Amy S. Phipps, to the Hon. Patrick Grant, a son of Lord Windsor, is announced.

WOMAN NOW A LAWYER TO BE PHYSICIAN ALSO

Mrs. Wallerstein in New York Medical College Graduating Class

TO OPEN CLINIC FOR POOR

Object in Taking Degree Was to Equip Herself for Work—Eight Other Women to Graduate.

Mrs. Harry Wallerstein of 121 West Eighty-sixth Street, who five years ago received a lawyer's degree, will be graduated with honors from the New York Medical College and Hospital for Women next Tuesday evening. The commencement exercises will take place in the Astor Gallery at the Waldorf-Astoria, when a class of nine will receive diplomas.

One of Mrs. Wallerstein's chief objects in taking the medical course was to fit herself for the work of establishing a free private clinic for poor women and children. Mrs. Wallerstein has not yet decided on the location of the clinic, but it will doubtless be in one of the east side tenement districts. Later as the work grows a downtown branch will be established.

Mrs. Wallerstein, who is well-to-do, has devoted all her leisure time, outside of her studies, to charitable work. In establishing the new clinic it is not unlikely that many of Dr. Osler's recent suggestions will be utilized. Mrs. Wallerstein talked enthusiastically of her work yesterday.

"I have not all my plans completed yet," she said, "as I have been so busy with my school work, but I shall give it my immediate attention after next Tuesday, and hope to get it in shape for opening at an early date. My work among the poor suggested the proposed clinic to me and the very great need for such an institution. The clinic will be open night and day, and trained nurses will be in attendance. There are many unfortunate women and children who are too poor to engage the services of a physician and whose pride rebels at appearing before a student body. The institution will be a boon to this class."

The downtown clinic, which may be established later by Mrs. Wallerstein, will be opened with a view to taking care of emergency cases, such as slight accidents.

The Rubenstein Club, of which Mrs. Wallerstein is President, out of honor to her, will render the music at the commencement exercises Tuesday evening next. The Rev. Minot J. Savage will deliver the address. Prayer will be said by Mrs. Phoebe A. Hanaford, the Hippocratic oath will be administered by Prof. M. Belle Brown, Dean of the Faculty, and Mrs. William Tod Helmuth, President of the Board of Trustees, will confer the degrees.

Other members of the graduating class are Mary M. Benedict, Mary Ethel Broadnax, Ethel Dolinsky, Bertha Florence Johnson, Harriet Eliza Kenney, Gertrude Van De Mark, Jean M. Williams, and Eva Wilensky.

Three Plays for Vacation Fund.

A benefit performance for the Vacation Camp Fund will be given in the Young Men's Hebrew Association Auditorium this evening. Three one-act plays will be given—"What Does It Matter?" by Maxim Gorki; "Whose Fault?" by Henryk Sienkiewicz, and Bernard Shaw's "Man of Destiny." Some of the players to appear are John De Persia, Franc V. Le Moyne, L. Milton Boyle, and Mme. Mercedes Leigh.

Will Leave Plymouth Church.

Members of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, were surprised yesterday when it was announced that the Rev. Willard P. Harmon had tendered his resignation as assistant pastor of the church. The Church Work Committee has accepted the resignation, and Mr. Harmon will leave Plymouth Oct. 1. He said that his resignation was due to a desire to enter another field of work.

Sale in Aid of Day Nursery.

A sale of fancy articles and home-made cake, the proceeds to be donated to the Little Missionary's Day Nursery, (non-sectarian,) will be held at the Majestic Hotel Banquet Hall this afternoon and evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary No. 1.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Recover; Call Money Easy, 1½@2¾ Per Cent.

Prices Rally Upon Improvement in Sentiment—Union Pacific and Reading Among the Leaders.

Business upon the Stock Exchange underwent one of its lightning changes yesterday, prices advancing as unitedly as they had fallen on Thursday. Of course nothing happened intrinsically to make securities worth 2 or 3 per cent. more, but plenty were found to pay more for them. Reading affords a good example. On Thursday all the talk was about the shrewdness shown by Lake Shore and Baltimore and Ohio in selling 160,000 shares, with disparaging inferences about the outlook. Yesterday the fact that the market had advanced since the sale was emphasized to show either that the sale was maladroit, or that somebody had made what the selling companies lost, and there was revival of reports about melons to cut, now that the stock had got into the right hands. It ought to be a demonstration that nobody would take a serious market position upon such considerations, but the sales sheets of Thursday and Friday show that many did. Consolidated Gas moved in a manner to heighten the sadness of those who knew too much regarding what the law was going to be about the price of gas. People's Gas proved itself an equally diverting twin, making a larger improvement for a similar reason. Of course the serious talk of the day was regarding the Union Pacific meeting. Its result was not known until after the close, but there were authentic intimations both that the $100,000,000 issue would be authorized and that no immediate use would be made of it. The stock improved as though Western Pacific had never been heard of, and Missouri Pacific advanced as though its construction scheme had not a few hours ago been thought more of a bear argument upon Union Pacific than upon Missouri Pacific. It is useless to labor the point. Market conditions are the only conditions which change within a single night. Everybody is free, therefore, to argue and believe either that the decline is merely interrupted, or that the advance is resumed.

The foreign markets for Americans seemed rather puzzled than stimulated by this sudden change of attitude here. But then foreign markets have troubles of their own. Money is working closer abroad, politics is unsettling there, and consols fell below 90. Still gold was cheaper, denoting less uneasiness in Paris. Our own money market continues to soften, the indications being for an increase of reserve to-day, with a larger increase of surplus through decreased requirements upon the week's liquidating market. There were more specific accounts of a surplus of iron, but this need not be taken too seriously so long as there is a deficiency of steel. If the finished product is taken off the market the raw material will take care of itself, even if production at the rate of 24,000,000 tons seems portentous. Steel Trust shares may be as good a barometer as a temporarily overloaded metal market, and they rallied with the market just as they had fallen with it the day before.

TRADE CONDITIONS.

On the subject of general trade Dun's Review says:

Weather irregularities provided the only check in business, partly through the direct effect on retail distribution of seasonable wearing apparel but more through the development of caution among traders in some agricultural sections where crops have been damaged or farm work retarded. On the whole, however, encouraging progress is shown in most trade reports, and industrial activity is unabated. The special jobbing dry goods sales attracted a large attendance, and results surpassed expectations. Textile manufacturing is in a better condition than at any recent date, the strength of the raw materials giving additional firmness to finished fabrics. Footwear factories in New England are well engaged, and there is no reduction in the forces at work in the various departments of the iron and steel industry. Aside from the Chicago strike there is exceptionally little friction between capital and labor, many higher wage scales going into effect this week. Traffic returns are well maintained, railway earnings for April exceeding last year's by 10.5 per cent., and lake navigation is heavy.

At the leading commodity exchanges there has appeared a natural reaction from the downward tendency of prices that was carried to a extreme lengths. Statistically the cotton situation is no stronger, port receipts promising a large surplus at the end of the season, but active domestic consumption, large exports, and vigorous speculative support received much of the recent loss in prices.

Bradstreet's says:

What might be termed a breathing spell is being taken in numerous lines of trade and industry pending the advent of settled weather, clearer views of crop outturn, and the settlement of the Chicago strike. Heavy rains or cool weather have retarded corn and cotton crop preparations and retail trade, but have rather favored Winter wheat, which fully holds the magnificent promise of a month ago, while an increased area is certain in Spring wheat, which latter, however, needs more moisture. Iron and steel are rather quieter as regards new business, and increased ease is noted in old material, pig iron, and bars, but structural material is eagerly bid for, and large orders for railway cars guarantees activity in the mills for months to come. The building trades and allied lines, such as lumber, hardware, paints, and glass, are apparently doing the business of their lives, unchecked and untouched by the usual May-Day labor disturbances.

Bank clearings for the week ending with May 4 aggregate $3,470,224,206, 23 per cent. over last week and 68 per cent. in excess of last year. This total is the second largest on record for a similar period, the banner week being that ended March 2 the current year. Exchanges outside New York City were 5.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Rally in Market—Shorts Believed to Have Lost a Good Deal.

The rally in the market yesterday, which was quite respectable in its proportions, was not accomplished without some strenuous opposition from the short interest. The shorts made several attempts to stop the advance, and in their drives are believed to have lost considerable stock. After each attempt the market came back with a suspicion of snap which caused a good many traders to cover their short contracts. The activity, however, was much decreased, less than 1,000,000 shares being traded in yesterday, as compared with 1,300,000 shares on Thursday. The dullness was well distributed over the reactions and the rallies of the day, and it was only at the very close that there was a burst of activity accompanied by a demonstration of enthusiasm.

Union Pacific Issue.

The sharp advance in the last five minutes was on the news from Salt Lake City that the Union Pacific preferred stock issue of $100,000,000 had been authorized. The way this news was received showed the curious working of the speculative mind. When the issue was first proposed it was used as a bear argument on Union Pacific common, but yesterday, when it became known that the much-criticised issue had gone through without any active opposition the market seized upon the fact as a bull argument, forgetting its previous interpretation. Union Pacific rose a full point to the highest price of the day on the publication of the result from the West.

Railroad Earnings Good.

Railroad earnings continue excellent. The Soo line for April showed an increase of $150,000. This helped Canadian Pacific, which held strong, in spite of reports that London had been selling the stock. Interests identified with the property declared that these reports were incorrect. It is asserted that a certain large speculative house in the Street has been "shorting" this stock for some days, and that a considerable part of a line of 20,000 shares was put out at 147 and lower. As the insiders are determined to protect the stock, a neat tussle in this issue may be expected.

Outstanding Short Interest.

In some mysterious way the Street heard that the short interest would not be permitted to cover at these low prices. Just where the information came from it was impossible to find, but the tip was all over the Street. That only a limited number of the bears acted on the advice is shown by the number of shares sold, and from this it is argued that the short interest outstanding must be still be very large. In some well-informed quarters, however, the opinion is held that a good part of the stock sold short in the earlier stages of the break has been taken back. The bears have had such a good chance to lay in a supply of the sinews of war that they will probably attempt to protect whatever lines they may still have out. Bears put up a much more stubborn fight than the bulls do.

Talk of Pools.

Almost every day in the recent decline there has been a great deal of talk about the weakness of pools and the enforced liquidation of some of the operators identified with these pools. One of these men so was even reported to have "gone broke." Looking over the list it appears, however, that the stocks which suffered the most were not those in which there was pool liquidation unless it was liquidation by a pool too secretly managed by men so high up in the financial world that instead of "pool manipulation" their operations would be called "excellent buying." Union Pacific, New York Central, St. Paul, in all of which there were no lowly pools are down from 17 to 27 points, while some of the so-called weak pool issues show losses not anywhere that large. The pools quite evidently had either sold out most of their holdings or they were strong enough to stand the break. If the latter is the case, it is a question how much more of a break they could have stood.

Gas News Out Early.

Consolidated Gas repeated its advance of the day before, crossing 200, but interest in the movement was overshadowed by the performance of People's Gas, which rose 6½ points for the day. Of this advance four points were made in as many minutes on the announcement from Chicago that the Gas bill pending before the Illinois Legislature had been killed. The news was known to a few houses in advance. In one broker's office the head of the firm tried to get all his customers into the stock about five minutes before the news bureaus sent out the announcement. The stock was selling at 106¾. When the news was out the stock jumped up half points at a time.

Bulls Encouraged.

The bulls found encouragement in the action of Northern Pacific and Pennsylvania, which sold ex dividend yesterday, Northern Pacific not only regained its dividend, but advanced a point more. Pennsylvania regained only a third of its dividend, but even this gain was looked upon with satisfaction. In a bear market stocks do not recover their dividends at once after they have come off, but are rather inclined to sell off some more.

Clark Line Open.

The San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake City Railroad, which was built by Senator Clark and his associates, and in which the Union Pacific has a large interest, was opened for through traffic on May 3. It is now in full operation for carrying both freight and passengers. It runs through cars from Chicago and St. Louis to the coast. Its route is described as being through a picturesque mining country, and it is considerably shorter than any other route to Southern California. The road has appointed as General Agent for the territory east of the Missouri River M. De Erabant, formerly of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, who will have temporary offices at 49 Wall Street, but who will open offices in St. Louis and Chicago as well.

THE LONDON MARKET.

LONDON, May 5.—Money was in strong demand in the market to-day. Discounts were firm and bill buyers were cautious owing to the money stringency and the gold arrivals being taken for foreign account.

Prices on the Stock Exchange were heavy owing to the dearness of money, and there was some nervousness as to the outcome of the fall in Americans and the next settlement. The market closed unsettled, though the tone was a shade better. Consols sagged on realizations and closed a fraction above the lowest quotations of the day.

Americans opened weak, but rallied later on Wall Street and local support, though operators were in the dark regarding the meaning of the heaviness in New York and were indisposed to commit themselves until they could see their way more clearly. The improvement continued until Americans were well above parity, with Union Pacific the feature, but they closed unsettled.

Foreigners were steady. Paris supported specialities. Russians were steadier. Imperial Japanese Government 6s of 1904 were quoted at 101¼.

CURRENCY MOVEMENT.

Discussing the movement of currency during the week, The Wall Street Journal says:

The reported movements of currency this week indicate a gain in cash held by the banks of $966,400. They received from the interior $5,020,900 and sent to the interior $4,341,500, including $1,510,000 National bank notes to Washington for redemption and $1,000,000 transferred through the Sub-Treasury to San Francisco. The gain from the interior was $679,400.

Receipts of new gold were $897,700, namely, $762,300 on New York Assay Office checks, $94,800 on San Francisco Mint checks and telegraphic transfers, and $40,600 on Seattle Assay Office checks.

Ordinary disbursements by the Sub-Treasury were $20,411,300; payments by banks to the Sub-Treasury for customs, internal revenue, 5 per cent. redemption fund, return of United States deposits, &c., were $21,022,000; the loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper was $610,700.

The total gain (from the interior $679,400, and new gold $897,700) was $1,577,100; deducting the loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper, ($610,700), gives net gain as $966,400.

The gross receipts from the interior are about the same as the average of the previous two weeks. The shipments were increased by the transfer through the Sub-Treasury of $1,000,000 to San Francisco, presumably on account of the California wheat crop. It costs only $1.30, the price of a telegram, with the consent of the treasurer of the United States, which is seldom refused, to transfer a million or any other sum from New York to San Francisco and thus make commercial exchanges equal to make San Francisco financially almost as near New York as Boston and Philadelphia.

The loss on Sub-Treasury operations proper is more than accounted for by the falling off in pension payments, which were $544,000, comparing with $1,308,000 in the preceding week. Payments by banks for returns of United States deposits were not large. Customs collections were $2,902,500; a daily average of $483,800, comparing with a daily average of $462,400 in the preceding week.

The Sub-Treasury received from banks and sent to Washington for redemption $4,087,000 mutilated currency.

United Railroads Meeting.

At the annual meeting in Jersey City yesterday of the stockholders of the United Railroads Company of San Francisco F. I. Shobert retired as a Director and Ernst Thalmann and Benjamin S. Guinness of the firm of Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. and George W. Bacon were elected Directors.

WILMINGTON, Del., May 5.—These charters were issued at Dover to-day:

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 5.—The local money market to-day was very easy. The usual table of rates, &c., follows:

Call loans, 3@3½ per cent.; time loans, collateral, 3½@4½ per cent.; time loans, mercantile paper, 3¾@4 per cent.; clearing loans, 2½ per cent. New York funds at par. Clearings, $26,471,334; balances, $2,089,911; Sub-Treasury debit, $13,011.

The Boston market was generally quiet, but firm. There was an early weakness in a few stocks, but aside from this the market had a very good tone. Traders became active, bidding for copper shares, but found few offering. Daly West was heavy on light transactions. Shoe Machinery was also heavy in the early trading, but later recovered its loss. The weakness is said to be due to profit taking. As the day progressed buying orders made their appearance, and the closing was strong. The complete list of transactions follows:

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 5.—The local market hesitated for a while to-day, indicating that traders were waiting for New York to more clearly define its immediate future course. When they became satisfied that prices in Wall Street were on the upward trend, for the time being at least, the local issues were more freely bought. This was especially true of United Gas, which, after holding firm the greater part of the day around 112½, in the last half hour spurted to 114¼, closing with that figure bid. It carried Philadelphia Electric along with it, the stock just before the close selling at 11⅜, with that bid. Lehigh Valley moved up 1½ under continued New York buying. Westmoreland Coal warrants were off 1, and West Jersey and Seashore lost a similar amount. The arbitrage stocks were again active, with Reading the leader. The total sales were 46,683 shares, $89,800 bonds. The list follows:

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 5.—New York exchange to-day was 5c discount. Time and call loans, 3½@4½ per cent.

There was something of a better tone on the local Exchange, with a number of issues showing price recoveries from yesterday's depression. Trading, however, was perfunctory and dull most of the day. Biscuit common rallied 2 points from its sharp break of yesterday. Swift's recovered part of its recent loss and sold around 107. Can issues were somewhat improved, and Edison rallied to 162 early in the day.

In the afternoon there was a sharp recovery in Chicago Subway shares. New York curb prices rose to around 55, and sales in this market were recorded at 55¼. Presumably buying is based on the liberal tonnage the tunnel is carrying at present, and on the fact that Mayor Dunne has signed numerous permits for the new downtown connections with the Subway. The list follows:

LONG ISLAND. FOR SALE.

Long Island Real Estate Investments

Plant gold Dollars in acreage property to-day under our direction, and you will reap gold Eagles inside of five years. We will be pleased to give you specific examples of our operations for some investors who began with us back in 1892, and who are still with us, reaping the dollars planted earlier. During the entire Real Estate history of New York there has never been a time so favorable for purchase as now. In Brooklyn and Queens Boroughs and in Nassau and Suffolk Counties values will certainly increase from two to five times within the next five years. We know present values. We know pending developments, which we largely control, and we therefore know future values as no other firm in the business.

We are ready to give you our best advice.

INDICTMENT AGAINST MORGAN SMITHS QUASHED

Judge Foster Severely Censures Grand Jury for Its Finding.

NO EVIDENCE OF CONSPIRACY

Efforts to Obtain Release of Nan Patterson on Bail Practically Abandoned Until Monday.

Interest in the case of Nan Patterson, twice tried on the charge of having murdered "Caesar" Young, was largely transferred yesterday from the woman herself to her brother-in-law and sister, the J. Morgan Smiths, whose counsel, Herbert R. Limburger, obtained from Judge Foster in the General Sessions Court an order quashing the indictment charging his clients with conspiracy to extort money from Young. The Judge provided, however, that the order should not be formally issued until the District Attorney had had a chance to submit to the present Grand Jury the evidence on which the indictment was found. And until Mr. Jerome has announced whether he wants to avail himself of this chance or not the Smiths will remain in the Tombs.

The matter probably will come to a head on Monday. Limburger said last night that he would then demand of Judge Foster that he issue the order at once unless Mr. Jerome consents to take immediate action.

But even if Mr. Jerome has no intention of further pressing the conspiracy charges against the Smiths, this will only result in the release of Mrs. Smith, as against her husband there is still a detainer calling for his appearance before Judge Newburger to answer to a charge of contempt of court. This charge grows out of his failure to obey a subpoena calling on him to testify before the Grand Jury that returned the murder indictment against Nan Patterson.

In a memorandum written on the back of the quashed indictment yesterday Judge Foster censured the Grand Jury for returning it. He wrote:

"The minutes of the testimony herein before the Grand Jury disclose no evidence whatever of conspiracy on the part of these defendants. The Grand Jury had no right to find an indictment when there was no evidence to support it. I can only explain the fact that an indictment was found on the theory that, because the defendants, who were without the State, were needed as witnesses in an important case, the Grand Jury forgot both the laws and its judicial position, and, feeling that the end justified the means, indicted the defendants, that they might be brought here by extradition."

Nan Patterson was somewhat improved yesterday, physically and mentally. She spent part of the day in the council room reading papers. She seemed in good spirits, and these rose still further after she had received letters coming from sentimental sympathizers all over the country.

Lawyer Levy practically abandoned all efforts to get his client released on bail till Monday. District Attorney Jerome was out of town, and Mr. Rand was also invisible. Mr. Levy said he had received a score of offers from men willing to act as bondsmen provided their names were not made public.

CHASED HER UP BROADWAY.

Felt Tug at Satchel and Saw $10 Bill in Hand of Pursued, Woman Says.

Two women rushed across Union Square and started up Broadway yesterday afternoon. One was pursuing the other. Policeman Logue stopped the foremost woman at Sixteenth Street. The pursuing woman rushed up and a crowd gathered. She said she was Mrs. Mary C. Murray of 137 West Fifty-first Street.

"I was in a store around there in Fourteenth Street, buying a Spring bonnet," she said. "I was looking over a lovely hat when I felt a tug at the satchel on my arm, and, looking down, I saw it open and a ten-dollar bill fluttering in the hand of this woman. I ran after her.

"Out of the store she went, I and my friend after her. But my friend soon fell behind. I yelled to her to stop. She yelled back: 'I haven't got it; you can search me.' But she kept on. Down Fourteenth Street she flew, and then into Broadway. How could anybody search her when she wouldn't stop? But I would have caught her if the policeman hadn't halted her. I was gaining on her fast."

The woman who wanted to be searched was locked up in the West Thirtieth Street Station, where she gave her name as Mrs. Anna Coyle, forty years old, of 27 Bright Street, Jersey City. The matron, yielding to Mrs. Coyle's pleadings, searched her, finding nothing but $1, $2, and $5 bills.

WATER PLAN IS HELD UP.

Board of Estimate Rescinds Approval of Richmond Contract.

The Board of Estimate yesterday rescinded its action of last week when it approved a contract with the New Jersey Water Company for a ten years' supply of water for Staten Island. The matter came up on motion of the Controller, who had found two objectionable sections in the contract submitted.

President Cromwell said that the Richmond County local water companies were unable to furnish sufficient water, and that even more than good ferry service Staten Island needs a water supply. Counsel for the water companies said the companies could supply twice the needed amount. In reply a resident of the borough said that he received water now and then in a watering cart, but that the supply was so limited that he had to send his children to Manhattan for baths. Another resident said he had been four days without water.

It was decided that a commission, composed of the department engineers, Nelson P. Lewis, Allen Hazen, J. Waldo Smith, and D. Varona should make a report to the next meeting of the board. Under the plan to take water from New Jersey the city is to install a distributing plant and mains at a cost of $1,500,000.

EQUITABLE DIRECTORS CALLED, OFFICERS NOT

MORE TALK OF SYNDICATES

Story from the Alexander Side That Hyde Headed One That Got $800,000 in Profits.

A new element of mystery was added to the Equitable Life controversy yesterday by the issuance of an unsigned call to the Directors of the society for an informal conference in the board room on Monday.

The call was as follows:

"Dear Sir: You are respectfully invited to attend an informal conference of the Directors of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, not including the executive officers, to be held in the board room of the society, 120 Broadway, Monday, May 8, 1905, at 3 o'clock."

Representatives of both sides said they could not explain the genesis of the call or the purpose of the meeting. It was declared in Alexander quarters that the call was probably a scheme of James H. Hyde and Henry C. Frick, Chairman of the investigating committee, to stir up the Directors to demand some resignations of officers who have been talking a good deal for publication during the past few weeks. Supporters of Mr. Hyde declared that the call was probably the result of the indignation of some of the Directors at inspired statements calling them "dummies," and calling attention to laws under which they might be held accountable.

Attention was called to the fact that the executive officers were not to participate in the conference, and out of this grew the suggestion that the resignations of Mr. Alexander, Mr. Hyde, and Mr. Tarbell might all be demanded, or action taken looking to their suspension and the transfer of the management of the society to a committee of the Directors until matters could be straightened out. Henry C. Frick declined to discuss the call at all. He said, before leaving for an over-Sunday trip to Pittsburg:

"The investigating committee is doing its work as rapidly as possible and thoroughly. My letter to Mr. Alexander on April 8, which was made public, fixed the scope and character of the investigation, from which there has been and will be no deviation."

From quarters sympathetic to the Alexander faction in the society came yesterday further discussion of syndicate operations. This was based on the formation of a Wabash-Pittsburg Terminal Railroad syndicate in June, 1904, to underwrite issues of first and second mortgage bonds of the company. There were authorized $50,000,000 of each kind of bonds, and $20,000,000 of each were issued.

The investment list of the Equitable as of Dec. 31, 1904, shows $253,850 book value of one kind and $166,400 book value of the other kind. The present market values are given at $273,157 in the first instance and $184,080 in the second instance. The story told is that Winslow S. Pierce, who is one of George J. Gould's closest legal advisers, and Louis Fitzgerald interested James H. Hyde in the underwriting and that Mr. Hyde headed a syndicate, the members of which were the two men first named, another, who is no longer Director, and an "outsider." The syndicate profits were said to have been $800,000.

FIREMAN RUN OVER.

Thrown from Tender and Under Wheel—Is Badly Hurt.

Fireman John Jones of Engine Company No. 60, which is housed in East One Hundred and Thirty-seventh Street, between Willis and Alexander Avenues, was thrown from the tender at Willis Avenue and One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street last night and received severe injuries. He was removed to the Lincoln Hospital, where it was said that his injuries might prove fatal.

The company was responding to an alarm of fire at Southern Boulevard and One Hundred and Thirty-eighth Street. As the tender, which was closely following the engine, was turning into Willis Avenue, the wheels "skidded," and Jones was thrown under the rear wheel. He was run over and was picked up unconscious.

The fire was in a lot on the Southern Boulevard.

Referee Finds in Broker's Favor.

John K. Creevey, who was appointed as referee by the Supreme Court to find out whether Louis H. Roberts and Peyton C. Richards had any claims against Edward Clarence Jones, a Wall Street broker, on an alleged partnership agreement, has filed his report, in which he recommends that the claims be dismissed. Roberts and Richards were connected with a concern of which Jones was really the owner, the Edward C. Jones Company, although Roberts and Richards owned a share of stock for qualifying purposes.

James Henry Smith Wins Suit.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday dismissed the appeal of Benjamin N. Oakeshott in a suit brought against James Henry Smith and George A. Cooper. The plaintiff was, with the defendants, co-executor under the will of George Smith, who died in London, leaving an estate valued at about $46,000,000, a large amount of which was in this city. Oakeshott retired as executor, and says he was to receive £500 a year. The court holds that such an agreement is against public policy. The will was probated in England.

May Day In the Park To-day.

To-day, the first Saturday in May, will be a gala day for the children, weather permitting, for it is the first of the so-called "May days" when recourse is had to the lawns of Central Park. Permits have been issued this year for parties aggregating more than 10,000 children. Each party is assigned to a specific part of the park to play games, drink lemonade, and eat cake, until darkness or stomachache overtakes them.

JAMES CHURCHILL LOSES.

Appellate Division Affirms Dismissal of Police Sergeant.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court handed down a decision yesterday affirming the action of ex-Police Commissioner Partridge in dismissing Sergt. James Churchill and quashing the writ of certiorari.

Justice McLaughlin wrote the opinion of the Appellate Division, in which Justices O'Brien, Hatch, and Laughlin concurred. Justice Patterson concurs in the result, so that the decision of the court is really unanimous.

Justice McLaughlin says in the beginning that on Nov. 18, 1901, Churchill was assigned to duty as acting Captain in command of the Fifth Street Station and continued there until April 24 following, when he was suspended and put on trial. There were six charges against him, and he was found guilty on four. The specific offense was the neglect to close and suppress upward of thirty disorderly houses in his precinct, making false reports regarding them, and failure to detect violations of the liquor tax law at eleven places. The Commissioner found him guilty, basing his decision on twenty-two of the disorderly houses and ten places where the excise law was violated.

Justice McLaughlin says that there does not appear to be any serious dispute as to the existence of the disorderly houses or as to the excise law violations. The conclusion in his behalf was apparently that, being only a Sergeant, he could not be expected to perform the duties of a Captain, and that anyway the evidence did not justify the conclusion that there had been any neglect of duty upon the part of the relator.

Justice says there is no force in the first contention and that the rules of the Police Department expressly provide that a Sergeant may be assigned to act as a Captain.

FEDERATION'S WIDE PLANS.

Women's Clubs Denounce Smoot and Advocate Many Reforms.

The New York City Federation of Women's Clubs held its first meeting under the administration of its new officers for 1905 yesterday at the Hotel Astor, and began its year properly with a long list of resolutions. The one received most enthusiastically was that in which the members agreed to write to the Senators at Washington urging them to unseat Reed Smoot. A proposal that a mass meeting be held was tabled.

The federation resolved to petition the Board of Education to give the girls of the city a business, technical, and industrial education; to ask that women be made Commissioners of the Board of Education; to assist in the movement to have slaughter houses, fertilizing, and other similar establishments removed from the city; to petition the Mayor in regard to the regulation and speed of automobiles; to request the President to appoint women physicians and biologists on the commission to investigate the divorce question, and to ask Congress to forbid the adulteration of foods and medicines.

The federation voted a hearty yes in regard to giving moral support toward a bronze bust of Mrs. G. H. Gilbert and also to have the Gill "school city" system introduced into the New York schools.

After this the convention disbanded, breathless, but happy at its wide field of accomplishments. Mrs. Belle De Rivera, the President, presided.

FRESH AIR FOR MENINGITIS.

Dr. Darlington Says It Has Proved Better Than Serums.

At the conclusion of the meeting of the Cerebro-Spinal Meningitis Commission at the Health Department Building last evening, Health Commissioner Darlington announced that the commission had concluded that the fresh-air treatment for cerebro-spinal meningitis is the best. Windows should be kept open day and night, he said, and plenty of fresh air and sunlight admitted to the sick room.

Dr. Darlington said it was the belief of the members of the commission that the disease was frequently brought on by a lack of pure air.

It was announced that, according to tests performed under the direction of the commission, no benefit has been derived from the injection of diphtheria antitoxin or from any serum. Further experiments will be made.

Deaths from cerebro-spinal meningitis for the six days ended yesterday noon numbered 95.

DELAYS BRIDGE TERMINAL.

Court Denies Motion for the Appointment of Commissioners.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday reversed an order of the lower court in the matter of the westerly terminal of the Brooklyn Bridge, and denied a motion for the appointment of Commissioners. The proceeding was an application on the part of the city to acquire certain real estate for the construction of a new terminal with an extension up Centre Street.

The contentions of the appellants, who are the owners of the Staats Zeitung Building, Leggett's Hotel, and other property near the bridge, are sustained.

The Bridge Commissioner must now begin all over again to acquire for the city the right of way for a westerly terminal, and must obtain the approval of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment upon all plans and specifications.

MR. BOURNE'S FINE UPHELD.

Was Arrested on Charge of Overspeeding Motor Car.

The Appellate Division of the Supreme Court yesterday handed down a decision affirming the conviction of Frederick G. Bourne for exceeding the speed limit in a motor vehicle on Nov. 17, 1904, on the Boulevard Lafayette. He was tried in the Court of Special Sessions, and, upon conviction, was fined $25.

Mr. Bourne was arrested by Patrolman Charles Silverbower, who timed the automobile with a stop watch as he came down a grade above One Hundred and Eighty-third Street. The Policeman testified that the automobile went one-twentieth of a mile in seven seconds.

The seedless apple, the fadeless flower, and the Birdseye Rumchundas, are all modern improvements on old standbys.

Foulards have been popular scarfs for years—never more than now; and the good foulards are so cleverly imitated in cheap grades that even an expert can hardly tell the difference.

But introduce a diamond weave in place of the usual twill, restrict this weave absolutely to a fine grade of silk, and you have the Birdseye Rumchunda—a characteristic foulard with added richness and character.

In the usual foulard polka dots and solid colors.

TOPICS OF THE WEEK.

MR. ANDREW CARNEGIE'S "James Watt" is published to-day in a handsome volume of 240-odd pages. Readers of THE NEW YORK TIMES have already had much of this book placed before them in the five installments of selections from its most striking chapters printed in the Sunday edition. It contains a lucid account of the career of the inventor of the steam engine, with an ample statement of the lessons aspiring youth may draw from it set down by a Scot who, like Watt, began at the foot of the ladder and achieved fame. Mr. Carnegie's quotations from literature to point his moral and adorn his tale are plentiful and catholic and include Kipling's McAndrew. This, it seems, is the sixth book the great ironmaster, founder of public libraries, and pensioner of pedagogues has written. The others are "The Empire of Business," "Gospel of Wealth," "Triumphant Democracy," "An American Four-in-Hand in Britain," and "Round the World." Mr. Carnegie has also signed many articles in newspapers and magazines.

Many pages of the new number of The Sewanee Review are given up to appreciations of Longfellow's poetry by two Southern writers, Prof. Edwin W. Bowen of Randolph-Macon College, Virginia, and Prof. R. B. Steele of Vanderbilt University. Prof. Bowen, writing of "Longfellow Twenty Years After," holds that while Longfellow does not deserve to rank as a world poet, his poetry has a larger appeal to the heart than that of his contemporaries, Bryant being cold and Lowell bookish, while Whittier was the poet of a party and a section. Longfellow's greatest triumphs, he thinks, were in lyrical poetry, though he succeeded also in his long narrative poems, especially in "Hiawatha," which possess rather meagre literary merit. But "of the sacredness and importance of the office of poet no man ever entertained a more exalted opinion," Prof. Steele, in his article on "The Poetry of Longfellow," finds much of interest and significance in both the "Tales of a Wayside Inn" and the "Birds of Passage." He makes a good point in his classification of Longfellow as a poet of the individual, uninfluenced by social reformers, almost unmoved by National perils and triumphs. "He will never," writes Prof. Steele, "become the ideal poet of a new social organization. Keeping his eyes steadily fixed on the individual, he writes, again and again, of his moral betterment."

The author of the apt couplet we quoted from Tom Watson's Magazine last week, touching the noisy and broken sleep of President Roosevelt's sword within its scabbard, it seems, is Mr. McLandburgh Wilson, who writes frankly admitting the feebleness of the preceding couplet of his quatrain and modestly doubting our estimate of the merit of the lines we quoted. But in this case Mr. Wilson clearly made the mistake of dashing off a trifle too quickly. A number of our readers have been endeavoring this week to improve his quatrain for him by writing new lines for the first couplet. For instance, Mr. D. H. Hanckel would have the verses read as follows:

> Our President "a big stick" keeps—
> Bad manners he deplores!
> His sword within its scabbard sleeps,
> But, mercy! How it snores!

The author of this declares that he knows his lines do not compare favorably with Mr. Wilson's closing couplet, but he merely ventures them as a suggestion. Another of our readers offers as the first couplet:

> Eternal vigilance he keeps;
> For peace his prayers he pours.

But, really, one does not pour prayers. We fancy that the ablest suggestion we have received to help out Mr. McLandburgh Wilson's Roosevelt poem, and give it permanent literary value, comes from Mr. Benjamin C. Nevius, whose proffered couplet is:

> Far distant isles he grips for keeps,
> Slays bears and snakes by scores,

As an alternative for his own second line Mr. Nevius suggests:

> And childless homes deplores.

These communications, of course, merely indicate anew the widespread interest and affectionate regard of the multitude for the subject of Mr. Wilson's verses.

The London Academy enters a vigorous protest against the multiplication of needless biography. For our own part we do not see that superfluous biography writing is any worse than superfluous novel or verse writing, and, frequently, in the matter of biographies, that which may seem superfluous from the literary point of view may have value as a record of facts worth preserving, a book of reference, a book which, according to Ellis's dictum, is not a book at all. The shelves of the libraries of newspaper offices contain many such volumes which are frequently useful. Accuracy in names and dates is the main essential in this kind of writing. The Academy's protest, however, is well founded from its own literary point of view. The biography of a distinguished man which is overburdened with "authoritative expositions of family affairs" is a bore to the reviewer, certainly, and to the reader looking for a literary estimate of the man's worth. Biographies of men of small distinction are apt to be tedious and to lack readers, and, moreover, the thoroughly competent biographer is a rare bird. There are few Lockharts and Morleys. There is only one Boswell. The Academy declares that the biographer "should be able to look through and understand his subject as well, for instance, as Mr. Sargent understands his models," and that, in making his picture, he should reject only "destructive material. . . . SCHILLER CENTENARY.

Study of the Career of the Great German Dramatist and Lyric Poet—His "Sturm und Drang" Period—"Die Raeuber"—His Later Dramas—The Influence of Goethe—His Philosophy—His Songs and Ballads.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW by

JOSEPH JACOBS,
Author of "Tennyson and 'In Memoriam.'" "English Fairy Tales." "Celtic Fairy Tales." "Literary Studies," &c.

SCHILLER is the German poet par excellence. Goethe, when he is himself, is a world-poet, and in some respects has more significance for the outside world than for Germany. Heine, when he is pure Heine, is "universally human," and when he is the other thing, is most distinctly Heinesque. But Schiller in all his qualities, good, bad, and indifferent, is German from the finger tips to the heart's core. He represents German idealism, the German struggle for liberty against bureaucratic tyranny, German domesticity, and even German sentimentality. Above all he has the German capacity of dealing with the abstract as if it were the real, and the German tendency to formula and formalism. He is especially the representative figure of the German poetic movement of the last quarter of the eighteenth century. He is the foremost fighter in the struggle of the emancipated German intellect and German fancy from the French shackles in which they had been enmeshed.

Not that he had not forerunners in that part of his activity which we may term his "Sturm und Drang" period. His great friend and rival Goethe himself produced in his "Werther" and "Goetz" characteristic products of the same spirit of revolt with which the earlier career of Schiller is associated. Even the "Ritterdrama" which crowded the stage after "Goetz" was in its obscure measure an appeal to the romantic and emancipatory feelings which Schiller tried to evoke. The school of Sainte-Beuve and Taine perhaps attempts too much in trying to prove that all great men are products of their age, since they also help to produce their age, but as applied to Schiller the formula holds good as well as any formula can. Much that is characteristic in his utterances can be explained by the time and the clime in which they were first uttered.

Remember the deadening circumstances under which German intellect had lain for the preceding century and a half. Not a poet of even the third rank had appeared except possibly Lessing. Prose writers were mainly occupied with the philosophy of history, like Herder, or with the theology of history, like Lessing. Apart from his earlier contemporaries, Schiller had to depend for poetical nourishment in his own language on Klopstock, Kleist, and Haller. No wonder he was a revolutionist in poetry. And if he looked abroad, the chief spiritual influence then reigning in Europe, that of the semi-sane Swiss, Jean Jacques Rousseau, tended to subvert all the conventions and hide-bound pedantries that were governing all of the German Courts, in one of which Schiller was destined to receive his first impressions of the world. The stress of his life under the martinet discipline of Duke Karl Eugen of Würtemberg were enough to have made any poetical soul a rebel.

His father had risen from the ranks in society and in the army. He appears originally to have belonged to the guild of barber surgeons who were privileged to draw blood both intentionally and unintentionally, and in that capacity had been for some time a sort of surgeon in the Bavarian hussars, from which he migrated to the Würtemberg army, where he came under the personal notice of Duke Karl Eugen, one of the most characteristic products of Little Germany. He was one of those benevolent despots who attempted to imitate Louis XIV. Frederick the Great, and Joseph II. in their encouragement of art and literature so far as they did not interfere with the real interests of life. They were content that an artist should have his way provided it was their way. In particular Karl Eugen imitated Louis XIV. in having poisons and mistresses attached to his Court and institutions of learning attached to himself and his mistresses. It was not one of the smallest

...Stuttgart, that Schiller ... [illegible] ... (1773.) The military academy was a ... or barracks and monastery. ... were obliged to place their ... future in the hands of the Duke, ... were never allowed holidays outside, ... the only woman of culture they ever ... It is natural that her ... and personality recur again ... and again in Schiller's dramas, ... the Lady Milford of "Kabale und ..." as well as some traits in the ... Elisabeth Eboli of "Don Carlos." The literature on which the students were nourished was Bodmer's "Noah" and Wieland's "Sacrifice of Abraham." Yet, notwithstanding this the pupils idealized their condescending monarch, and Schiller's earliest production consisted of various eulogies on him—and his autocratic rule. Yet there are signs that the intolerable authority claimed by the Duke over the pupils of the academy was galling to the pride of the young poet. Even the uniform he wore was an offense. The seminarists wore blue coats faced with black plush, plaited silver buttons, white epaulets, white waistcoats and breeches, white stockings, and shoe buttons of plated metal, hair cut short, rolled tight on both sides of the head, and without powder. Fancy Schiller's red hair rolled tight on both sides of his head, and his first poetic drama of revolt is almost sufficiently explained.

It was while Schiller was still a student at the military academy that he wrote his "Robbers," ("Die Räuber,") partly under the influence of Leisewitz, "Julius von Tarent," and still more under the repressed feelings of revolt against the pedantic tyranny of the Duke. In itself it is mainly a piece of rant with the crudest notions both of plot and characterization, and would fail to reach stage honors even in a barn nowadays. But for its time it was an epoch-making. It broke free from the French classical traditions, it dealt with real human feelings, however abnormal and exaggerated, and expressed the claims of the individual to express himself with such novel force that it is no wonder it captured all young Germany. In a measure it expressed the ideas of the contemporaneous revolution in America just coming to a close, and the subsequent French Revolution put into action. It was something for a student of the military academy to express even in dramatic form the conviction that if Germans were men enough, Germany would soon be a republic, compared with which Rome and Sparta would be nunneries. It is scarcely to be wondered at that Schiller dreaded the wrath of the Duke, who had four years before put into prison Schubart, one of Schiller's poetical predecessors, for giving utterance to sentiments even less violent than these. Schiller fled the servitude of a military surgeon's life upon which he had just entered, and escaped to Mannheim, where his play was to be produced, and where he had hopes of carping a living as a theatre hack.

On the whole the Duke turned out to be not quite so black as Schiller's imagination had painted him. He still kept Schiller's father in his employ, and so far as is known did not make any attempt to prosecute Schiller himself for his breach of conduct and practical desertion of military duty. But the awe in which Schiller stood of the "benevolent tyrant" remained with him for several years, and he wandered about from Mannheim to Leipsic, and from Leipsic to Dresden, writing dramas for the Mannheim stage. Two of these carried on in other directions the spirit of revolt expressed so well though so crudely in "The Robbers."

The subject of "Fiesco," who headed a revolt against the Republic of France, had been suggested by a chance remark of Rousseau's, and the drama itself shows a much firmer grasp of stage scenery and a fuller knowledge of human nature, natural enough in the couple of years that had elapsed since his first work had appeared.

"Kabale und Liebe" ("Intrigue and Love") was even a further advance in dramatic capacity. Schiller showed here that he could beat the contemporary dramatists like Iffland on their own ground, and notwithstanding some crudities of plot formation, the book of the play shows both a remarkable insight for a youth who had been brought up practically in a monastery. The influence of the Duke's mistress was obvious in the intrigue side of the play. Its love episodes were inspired by Charlotte von Kalb, for Schiller had at any rate this supreme qualification for the poetical gift, that he was intensely susceptible to the charms of sex. With "Kabale und Liebe" his period of revolt in its crudest form was to some extent over. He had found himself and obtained a reputation as the representative voice of the struggling spirits of Young Germany.

With his "Hegira" to Leipsic, where he found a congenial circle and Koerner the father of the poet, a new spirit becomes manifest in the poet's activity. When for the first time he came into contact with congenial spirits, the result was seen in one of his finest lyrical outbursts, "An die Freude." This "Hymn to Joy" was in a measure the Spring song of modern German poetry. Lyrics there had been written by Gleim, Hölty and others. But for the most part they were imitative and unreal. Here for the first time a true poetic soul gave adequate metrical expression to real and earnest feeling. Henceforward Schiller was to be as much known for his lyrics as for his dramas, and as a matter of fact his lyrics were destined to endear him more in the heart of the German people even than his dramas. Another change came with his stay with the Koerners. His outlook on life broadened, and his next drama, "Don Carlos," showed a sense of the historic conditions of the dramatic situation not to be found in "The Robbers," and absent inexcusably from "Fiesco." In "Don Carlos," besides the clash of human passions, he dealt with the great historic forces of religious toleration and political freedom. It was here that Schiller gave utterance to one of his finest and best-known lines, "Die Weltgeschichte ist ein Weltgericht." (The world's history is God's judgment on the world.)

It was only a few years before that Lessing had produced his dramatic apologue, "Nathan der Weise," and in the Marquis von Posa Schiller deliberately emulated the broadmindedness of Lessing's Nathan. Unfortunately the attempt to introduce didacticism in the drama, and above all to change the point of interest from the passionate love of Don Carlos to the philosophic convictions of the Marquis spoiled the work as a drama by increasing its effect on the current political and religious opinion. The change from the earlier dramas was indicated artistically by its being written in iambic blank verse instead of the somewhat bald prose in which the earlier three dramas had been composed.

How he managed to live during these "Lehrjahre" of his it is difficult to ascertain. For his plays he seems to have been paid at the munificent rate of about $5 for sixteen pages. He produced poetical year-books entitled "Thalia," but the printing expenses nearly exhausted any possible profits. Poetry was ever a drug on the market. His friend Koerner at times came to his assistance; Baron Dalberg, the Director of the Mannheim Theatre, gave him something for representations on the stage, but his lot was indeed an unenviable one from any worldly point of view for the seven years which intervened between his leaving his tyrant and obtaining his professorship at Jena. It is needless to observe that it was just in the depths of his impecuniosity that he chose to get engaged. The hopes of all aspirants in matters literary was in those days directed toward Karl August of Weimar, who had given such noble treatment to Goethe. Schiller visited him in 1787, but, unfortunately, Goethe was on his epoch-making Italian journey, and so the poets did not meet. But Goethe had, strangely enough, been present at a prize day at Stuttgart, when the raw-boned Schiller had received commendation at the hands of his Duke.

Meanwhile the studies necessary for "Don Carlos" had diverted Schiller's attention from poetry to history, and his fragment on "The Revolt of the Netherlands" gave Goethe an opportunity on his return from Italy to obtain for Schiller the professorship of history at Jena, which was to afford him the assurance of a bare livelihood for the remainder of his life.

With the acceptance of the professorship in 1789 and marriage the following year, the second period in Schiller's life begins, devoted mainly to historic and philosophic research, and leading to his immortal friendship with Goethe and the classic productions of his last years. Of his histories not much need be said. They were of that clear, abstract type which Voltaire has made so familiar to European letters. They were based on no original research, claimed no particular novel point of view, but yet had the immense French virtues of clearness of outline and definiteness of statement. His philosophic labors were of a somewhat higher type. The genius of Kant was then at the height of activity and fame, and Schiller became engrossed in the critical philosophy which seemed to release the human mind from the fetters of superstition while founding religion and morality upon a rational basis. The very absence of imaginative quality in the Königsberg philosopher's dialectics had an attraction for the poet of an imagination all compact. He had at any rate the insight to anticipate modern psychology in one of its most striking analyses. The conception of art as the grown man's play is due to Schiller, and has been carried out into detail by writers like Herbert Spencer and Groos, while on the artistic side both Ruskin and William Morris have developed the thought in making true art the necessary outcome of joyful ingenuity. It is somewhat curious that both great German poets should have anticipated some of the most recondite laws of biological science, Goethe with his typology and anticipations of Darwinism, Schiller with his "Spieltrieb."

Almost simultaneously with this increased interest in history came the first glimpse into the magic world of Hellas which had transformed Goethe's life. It is true that Schiller had once gained a glimpse of Greek at his university, but we always "the Greek of Reinhold," which is about as like the Greek of Sophocles as the Greek of Chaucer. Now, however, he gained him some idea of the Hellas of Goethe, and specious domain of the Greek genius. The parallel with the English Keats who learned his Hellenism from Chapman's Homer, at once presents itself. Still, his enthusiasm found expression in his fine verses "Die Götter Griechenlands," which still stir the pulse as we see the intrepid explorer first venturing into the magic land.

The verses attracted Goethe, who had been repelled by the gaucherie of the red-haired, freckled poet, who had himself felt snubbed by the dauntless air of the poet laureate of Weimar. The elder poet's method, however, in obtaining the gratefulness for Schiller naturally brought them closer together, and in 1794 that immortal friendship began which to a certain extent may be said to have created modern German literature. Each poet supplied something that was lacking in the other. The somewhat cool genius of Goethe was roused to self-forgetfulness by the fieriness of the younger poet. Schiller's want of culture and breadth was remedied by the former poet's superabundance. Goethe gained fire; Schiller gained light and breadth. Goethe became less of a snob; Schiller, more of a man of the world.

It cannot, however, be said that the immediate results were beneficial or desirable. In the exaltation of spirit to which their communion led, they determined on a series of satirical epigrams directed against almost all their contemporaries. These "Xenien" are perhaps the least appreciated of either poet's productions. Some way or other the German tongue does not lend itself to biting sarcasm. The German mind seems not quick enough, the German temperament not ill-natured enough for bitter irony. But it was the indirect effects of the poet's friendship that told on one another. With the effects on Goethe we are not concerned. It made Schiller among other things the romantic balladist of German literature.

He was only transplanting in German soil a movement that had already shown itself in England. Bishop Percy's "Reliques" had attracted attention to the ballad poetry of Scotland and England, and the vogue of Ossian had spread throughout Europe a taste for the romantic. It was, strange to say, in the somewhat pedantic, abstract soul of Friedrich Schiller this movement was to find its most perfect expression. "The Fight with the Dragon," "The Cranes of Ibicus," "The Diver," and "The Pledge" are perhaps the best-known lines in German poetry. Yet it is characteristic that they are each and all didactic in their tendency. It is the Kantian professor who speaks through the romantic lines.

These ballads, all written in the Summer of 1797, were preceded and followed by poems of a still more philosophic tendency. "The Words of Faith," "Ideal of Life," and the like are the versified ideas which attracted Young Germany toward the first half of the nineteenth century. These philosophic poems culminated in "The Song of the Bell," with which it is natural to contrast and compare Poe's marvelous poem fugue of "The Bells." The one deals with the periods of a man's life in a solemn, didactic, and somewhat ponderous manner; the other presents the same periods with all the magic witchery of verbal music. One cannot but give the prize to the American. In all these lyrics the German love for abstract thought comes out and makes them characteristic German productions, while fundamentally the whole principle of poetry is against the representation of the abstract. "Poetry must be sensuous, simple, and passionate," said Milton, and you cannot be any of the three about such figments of the philosophic fancy as the ideal, desire, and the like.

It was in the last five years of Schiller's life that he arose to his greatest heights as a dramatic poet. In four out of the five dramas then produced he dealt with great historic events in the history of four of the chief European nations. In "Wallenstein" he gave a trilogy of the tragedy of the Thirty Years' War in Germany. The conflicts of Catholicism and Protestantism, of personal ambition and patriotism, of love and duty, were dealt with on a grand scale and with the grasp of a master. Catholicism and Protestantism on English soil had their part to play in the drama of "Mary Stuart," but here it was the contrast of the two Queens, Elizabeth and Mary, that gave the dramatic force to the treatment. Unfortunately for English readers, the historic background is so false to history that it is difficult to appreciate the real dramatic power involved in the presentation. In "The Maid of Orleans" the theme is England against France—or, rather, France against England—and we see the fruit of Goethe's influence in the Greek nemesis that is at the root of the action. Finally in "William Tell" Schiller dealt once more with his favorite topic of liberty against tyranny, and this time, while nominally speaking of Switzerland he appealed to an audience that was commencing to chafe against the fetters placed upon Germanic development by the iron hand of Napoleon. It is appropriate enough that Schiller's swan song should be on the same note of liberty. Since "William Tell" has taken the place of the most favorite of German classical dramas. While wanting in variety of action, its vigorous denunciation of tyranny will always appeal to the lover of liberty. At the same time it is to be observed that in all these dramas the liberty for which Schiller pleads is one based upon law and order, though his earliest productions had been inspired by the conditions which gave rise to the French Revolution. But Schiller was a Teuton at heart, he could not away with the "red final fury of the mob," which not at naught the claims of orderly development. He was no where more German than in his recognition of the need of strict obedience to a self-chosen Government.

Besides these original dramas Schiller did an enormous amount of work in the last few years of his life in translating and adapting dramas from foreign languages like "Macbeth," and even in making the necessary changes in his friend's "Egmont" to adapt it for stage representation. He left a couple of dramas in fragmentary condition, one on "Demetrius, the False Czar of Russia," showing great promise. It is gratifying to think that his labors reaped a due reward in the greatest popularity any German poet had obtained in his generation, even exceeding that of Goethe. When "The Maid of Orleans" was played at Leipsic he happened to be present, and was greeted by the whole audience, both inside the theatre and when he left it, walking through rows of men and women who received him with the reverence due to a being of another world.

Already the fell disease that was to carry him away was upon him. It was only by the most indomitable will he kept himself alive for the last three or four years. Time and again he had to desist for weeks from sheer want of strength. At the beginning of 1805 it seemed almost as if Germany was going to lose its Dioscuri, and each of the two great poets was convinced that his friend would die that year. It is a question whether Goethe could not have been better spared. Nothing that he did after 1805 was of the first rank, (the fifth act of the second part of "Faust" had been written before.) Schiller had been increasing in mastery of his art up to the last, and "Dimetri" promised to be his most powerful drama in a purely tragic sense. But it was not to be. At the age of forty-four years, just as he had won fame, rank, and even riches as he counted riches—four hundred thalers ($300) a year!—he was taken away from the world he so enriched each year with new masterpieces.

Can we, however, say that he was taken away from the world? I observe that Mr. Wolf von Schierbrand in the April North American Review declares that Schiller's fame and influence has spread throughout Europe, and especially in the English-speaking world. As a rule the English-speaking world requires a very great effort to appreciate a foreign poet at all, and I doubt very much whether Schiller or his poetry has obtained a very deep hold in the English mind on either side of the Atlantic. True, Carlyle wrote his biography, but his biography was one of his weakest pieces of work, and written in a style utterly unlike Carlyle's. The translations that have appeared of Schiller's works, except Coleridge's admirable version of part of the "Wallenstein," have been beneath contempt. Lord Lytton was scarcely even a poetaster, and his version of Schiller's poems and ballads is not even readable. Yet he is the only English writer who shows any real influence from Schiller. His perpetual reference to the "terue, the goo-ood and the beyutiful," is undoubtedly a tribute to what is conventionally known as Schiller's idealism, in other words, his tendency to deal with pale and colorless abstractions. None of the Romance nations ever cared for any of the Teutonic poets. Schiller never appealed to any one in France or Italy except the professed students of German literature. It is misleading, therefore, to think of him as in any sense a world poet.

But if not a world poet he is, however, the more definitively the poet of Germany. No other poet has appealed so strongly to the best and most ideal side of Germany. It is true that when one comes to the expression of the simpler emotions in the most direct of poetic language, Schiller yields both to Goethe and to Heine on the lyric side. There are no words of his equal in direct force to the "In Allen Gipfeln" of the one or the "Du bist wie eine Blume" of the other. But it is in his appeal to the abstract ideals of life and thought that Schiller is so distinctively more German than his competitors. Even here a distinction has to be made. It is the Germany and the Germans before 1848 who most thoroughly answered to Schiller's call. It was during that period that the misleading comparison between himself and Goethe was rife. It was Germany struggling against disruption, Germany panting to be free, that found in Schiller its true voice. The latter and more successful Germany does not take him at so high a value, and regards Goethe, the bureaucrat, Goethe, the man of affairs, as the true voice of the nation, even declaring with Herman Grimm that he was the greatest of all modern poets. But to those who see in the poorly paid pedagogue and scientist of Germany rather than in the successful soldier and business men of Prussia the most ideal side of German life, Schiller will always represent the most distinctive form of German genius.

MODERN ENGLAND.

Herbert Paul's Third Volume, Covering the Period Between 1865 and 1876.*

THE third volume of Mr. Paul's "History of Modern England" brings the story down to the period 1865-1875-6, a very important decade, as is seen when it is recalled that it covered the disestablishment of the Irish Church, the Franco-Prussian war, the Alabama arbitration, and the beginning of any real attempt to solve the everlasting Irish question.

All of these matters, and others of consequence to England, Mr. Paul treats fully and in a most charming style. His book is exceedingly good reading. The great biographies of the last few years—Tennyson's, Manning's, Gladstone's, and others—he has turned to with eagerness; in consequence, his book contains touches that one looks for in vain in older histories; little anecdotes, side remarks, that lend life to the story, just as Cromwell's wart lent character to his portrait.

The third volume begins with the change of Ministry following Lord Palmerston's death in 1865, the Russell-Gladstone administration. A sentence on the second page of the book is indicative of Mr. Paul's freedom of opinion and speech. In describing the make-up of the new Government he says: "Sir Robert Peel was, however, removed from the Irish office, to which he had been appointed by a mere freak of Lord Palmerston's, and for which, as for any other office, he was quite unfit." Such language may not reach the dignity of ordinary history, but it certainly makes history interesting reading.

Almost at once Lord Russell found himself confronted with the Jamaica question—the alleged uprising of the negroes, which had been suppressed so ruthlessly by the Governor of the island, Mr. Eyre. (Mr. Paul, by the way, with characteristic English indifference to details, never once gives Eyre's full name. It was Edward John Eyre; he died less than four year ago.) Following that came the cattle plague and the reform bill, on which last the Government was defeated. Then came Derby, with Disraeli as leader of the House. The latter promptly introduced and carried a reform bill of his own, based on Gladstone's, and passed it. He became Premier on Derby's resignation, and his Ministry was defeated on an Irish question—the disestablishment of the Protestant Church of Ireland, and Gladstone, returning to power, put the measure through Parliament. An important measure of this time dealt with trade unions, giving them a legal right to existence; another was the first Irish Land act, of which Mr. Paul writes: "Its interest and value lie in the recognition of a great principle and an intolerable wrong." In this administration, which Mr. Paul calls "the climax of Liberalism," the principle of expatriation was recognized for the first time by British law, and the civil-service was reorganized and opened to every person. Somewhat later the army was "reformed" and the purchase of commissions abolished. To us it seems curious that army commissions could ever have been the subject of bargain and sale, (between officers; not, of course, between politicians and the appointive power,) but it took the Queen's intervention to put a stop to the custom, and even then a large sum had to be paid to officers deprived of their "right" to sell their commissions in the army.

In his clear account of the Alabama arbitration, Mr. Paul says, of our American arbitrator, Charles Francis Adams, that, because of his services to peace, "he ought to have a statue at Westminster as well as at Washington." To Americans, who look at the Speaker of the House of Representatives simply as the leader of the majority, who forces majority measures through the House, and keeps the minority in the background, Mr. Paul's comment on Mr. Brand's election as Speaker of the House of Commons should be enlightening. He says that "rightly or wrongly, Mr. Brand was always suspected of an unconscious leaning toward his own side." Think of an impartial Speaker in Albany, Trenton, or Washington!

The Irish University bill caused the fall of Mr. Gladstone's Ministry in 1873, but Mr. Disraeli refused to take office, and Gladstone had to retain power for a few months. The general election of 1874, however, brought Disraeli "for the first time in possession not merely of office, but of power." Then began the development of imperialism—which may be said to date from Disraeli's purchase of the Suez Canal shares previously held by the Khédive of Egypt. It was followed by the interference of England in Egypt; and that, in 1882, by the revolt of the Egyptians, the armed invasion by England, and the practical annexation of the country to Great Britain. Great oaks from little acorns most certainly do grow, but Queen Victoria's assumption of the title of Empress of India cannot be considered an oak.

Valuable chapters of Mr. Paul's book deal with the troubles of the Established Church, and with the literary, intellectual, and social progress of the country. They round out a book which otherwise would not deserve its title of a history of modern England, but would be rather a political history of Parliament.

Jack London, Socialist.

WAR OF THE CLASSES. By Jack London, Author of "The Sea Wolf," "The Call of the Wild," &c. 12mo. Pp. 278. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.50.

The central idea from which Mr. London argues the end of the capitalistic or "bourgeois" reign is that the time is at hand when "predatory capital wandering the world over seeking where it may establish itself" will have no more continents or provinces to conquer—save they be conquered from capital already in possession! When "the maximum of commercial development" is attained, then one of two things must happen. Either it will be a benevolent capitalistic despotism—capital warring no more with itself but regulating production to demand, putting the surplus which can no longer find investment in public works, art, literature, panem et circenses—or it will be Socialism. "Either the functions of private corporations will increase till they absorb the central government, or the functions of government will increase till it absorbs the corporations."

Mr. London admits that for practical purposes the two things are not so different. He inclines, of course, to the opinion that Socialism (as the nobler ideal) will be the actual solution. For the other thing seems to him to imply nothing less than a sort of comfortable slavery for the masses.

No doubt the most interesting of the papers which make up the volume is that on the "scab." "A scab," says London, "is one who gives more value for the same price than another"—and he demonstrates from that definition that nearly everybody is at times a scab—not without reluctance, since the aim of all men (in an economic world) is to give less for more if possible. Mr. London shows how, for instance, any extra efficient workman is "scabbing" on his fellows, and how America as an industrial nation is a "colossal scab." "The result," says he, "of the American scab's nefarious actions (which consist in extraordinary efficiency) will be to strike at the food and shelter of Europe." Therefore, already, alarmed Europe is forming a union against him.

If a scab is merely one who is disloyal to his class, the American workman as a body is still scabbing on the European workman. If he gets, say, twice the wages, he does four times the value of work. His is really the "cheap" labor.

Mr. London has a chapter on the tramp almost equally interesting. In the present state of society capital needs, he says, a body of unemployed men, or only partly employed men, as an emergency force. Without this surplus of labor a sudden need of men anywhere—in a new enterprise or to break a strike—would be fatal to the system. It could only be met by taking men away from other necessary work. Naturally this emergency force (not being kept on a continuous salary) is made up of the less efficient. As for the tramp, he is a "by product," one who might be one of these emergency men, (being unfit for a permanent job,) but prefers to drop out—to die to the economic world. He is a "perambulating carcass." He recognises that there is no work for him save as a stop gap. He refuses to be a stop gap. If he did work, moreover, (the amount of work being strictly limited,) somebody else would have to be a tramp. Wherefore, says Mr. London, do not, for heaven's sake, bid a tramp "go to work."

Mr. Bell's Stories.

MR. PENNYCOOK'S BOY. By J. J. Bell, Author of "Wee Macgregor," "Joss & Company," &c. 16mo. Pp. 272. New York: Harper & Brothers. $1.25.

Into this little book has been bound up a sheaf of Mr. J. J. Bell's stories of Scottish child life. They are very good stories of their kind—informed by the appropriate sentiment and not too much obscured by dialect—humorous also in the sad Scottish fashion of humor. Doubtless all Scottish humor is the visible sign of the strugglings of tortured, humanity straitjacketed into a Calvinistic mold; Scottish child humor as it appears in the books which profess to distill it seems especially stamped with this morbid origin. Yet taken in the proper mood it softens the heart and produces tears or smiles according to the cheerful or lachrymose habit of the reader.

These particular stories tell of a grocer who had a mischievous errand boy, yet loved the imp and forgave him; of a little girl who tried to keep a little boy from smoking cigarettes, and had bitter tears for her reward; of Sarah McGuffie, washerwoman, who adopted a neglected little mite and thereby lost a husband; of the famous Wee Macgregor himself and an adventure he had with green paint; and of Tam, who played truant tragically. There are other stories—but enough has been said.

THE BUILDING OF A TRUST

THE BIOGRAPHY OF A TRUST BUILDER

IDA M. TARBELL'S

HISTORY OF THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY

The two great questions to-day before the American people are:

1. The methods by which monopoly has come to control production.

2. The methods employed by Mr. Rockefeller personally in building up the greatest of all American monopolies, the Standard Oil Company.

In answer to these questions the American people are demanding, not the vague talk and charges that are filling the air and papers, but facts. It is facts that Miss Tarbell gives them in her history of the Standard Oil. She alone shows the real bearing upon monopoly of the railroad rebate, of the control of raw material, of spying on competition, of underselling to drive a rival from the market; she alone dissects in every detail the practical working of a typical Trust, and tells the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth about Mr. Rockefeller.

Says the N. Y. Independent:

"Miss Tarbell's service, and it is a great one, is making clear to the casual reader, as well as to the student the menacing greatness of that problem, its ever growing importance, and in furnishing facts necessary for its comprehension, and, let us hope, its ultimate solution."

THE HORSE.

Mr. Trevathan's "American Thoroughbred" and Prof. Roberts's New Book.*

ALTHOUGH Mr. Trevathan dedicates his volume to the late W. C. Whitney, and Prof. Roberts is more or less of a scientist, both authors early in their books take occasion to say "there is no native horse of America." And yet Mr. Whitney spent thousands of dollars, equipped a costly expedition to the Bad Lands of Wyoming and the Dakotas, and had mounted at the Museum of Natural History in this city the skeletons of a number of fossil horses solely for the purpose of proving that the horse was a native product, and not an importation! Mr. Trevathan was certainly aware of the fact, for he has talked with the writer about the matter. And Prof. Roberts must have been familiar with the researches and claims of the late Profs. Marsh and Cope and their demonstrations that the fossil horses of the Bad Lands were the true precursors of the mustang of the plains and the ponies of the South American pampas. What is to become of the eohippus, the orohippus, the protohippus, and all the other hippuses that it has cost so much money and required so much study to prove were the true ancestors of the thoroughbred of to-day, when two such authorities airily brush the whole elaborately worked-out theory aside as unworthy of their consideration? It would seem as if both had trusted too much to Youatt and Frank Forester, when they prepared their introductory chapters, instead of accepting the later and possibly better informed authorities on the origin of the most useful of all animals. And Mr. Trevathan even goes so far afield as to say, "There is no evidence, therefore, or assertion that his horse ever had habitat upon this continent previous to the coming of the white man." If that is so it would seem as if Prof. Bumpus should have those fossil horses removed from the Museum, so that the lesson they are designed to convey may no longer mislead the public.

Aside from this little trifle that must perforce puzzle the well-informed reader a bit, both have prepared volumes that are both interesting and useful, though both are marred by typographical errors in the names of both horses and owners that ought not to mar such volumes. For these the careless proofreader rather than the author is of course to blame.

Mr. Trevathan treats of the horse as an aristocrat; Prof. Roberts deals with him as a commoner. The first finds him as the animal who "has ever been the companion and the faithful servant of man," and revels in the Social Register of horsedom. Prof. Roberts looks on him as the burden bearer, the helper, and only incidentally as a means for furnishing amusement and recreation for mankind. He has made a book for the breeder of the useful, and has certainly managed to crowd a host of hints as to breeding and information as to what and how to choose and how to care for the product that can be of great value to the breeder, even though the successive chapters have a flavor of lectures prepared for the students in a course of "Horse Breeding Taught by Mail."

Virginia's place in history is certainly forever assured, for, as Mr. Trevathan points out, she was the mother of race horses and races as well as of mere Presidents. It was to her soil that the first thoroughbred of which there is any record—Bulle Rock—was imported from England. It was to her soil that the great Diomed, an English Derby winner, was imported after he had won fame as a sire in England, and it was on a Virginia farm that his even greater son, Sir Archy, was foaled. There is hardly an American race horse of quality, a true top-notcher, but has the blood of these great racers flowing in his veins. Sir Archy's blood it was that founded the thoroughbred stock of Kentucky, and of that Mr. Trevathan says: "No other product of the State, not even her whisky, has yielded to the old Commonwealth such an enormous annual income." And to-day there are "more thoroughbreds within her boundaries than exist in all the other States of the Union."

And for these reasons it has come about, according to Mr. Trevathan's theory, that wherever the gentlemanly blood of England went there, too, went the thoroughbred, and with them went horse racing. It took much delving of musty records to secure the succinct history of racing in Virginia, Maryland, the Carolinas, and other States that he has compiled and tells in narrative form. With the names of the famous horses go coupled the names of their owners—Washington, Pinckney, Wilson, Alston, Rutledge, Hampton, Taylor, Johnson, Andrew Jackson, Ferguson, Randolph, Selden, Lee, Lightfoot, Carter, Fairfax, Custis. "All these, themselves gentlemen of the very best breeding and of private accomplishments, the rival F. F. Va.-ers were the breeders and racing men of the time." And when in course of time the sport in which they indulged with passionate fondness found a foothold in New Jersey and New York it enlisted the sympathies and fortunes of families that bore such illustrious names as Stevens, Delancey, Hunter, Livingston, Van Ranst, Morris, Gibbons, Jay, Purdy, and others of equal social standing. The ownership of the thoroughbred and the racing of it has ever since been a "fancy" of the gentlemen. Even now, when commercialism dominates racing, and its features as a sport, pure and simple, is lost sight of except at the country clubs and hunt clubs, the gentle bred looks upon racing as his sport, and the "climber" and social aspirant looks upon it as a means to the opening of portals that even his golden keys will not otherwise open. But it is to the horse show rather than the race track that such most naturally drift. The former gives a better chance for personal display and does not necessarily require the same love for the horse.

It is upon this social side of thoroughbred ownership that Mr. Trevathan lays more stress than upon horse breeding. He is not at all technical. He recites the stories of the glorious performances of Sir Archy, "the first horse of grandeur"; of Blank, American Eclipse, Sir Henry, Black Maria, Boston, Fashion, Wagner, Grey Eagle, Peytona, and a score of others of the days between the Revolution and the civil war. Those were the days when horses ran races of three and four mile heats, and in one of the races he tells how Black Maria had to run twenty miles before she won the race in which she started—five four-mile heats.

Boston, Mr. Trevathan concludes, after a thorough study of the matter, was "the greatest horse that ever lived this side of the Atlantic." He was so far superior to all other horses as a four-miler that his owner was obliged to keep him in the stable in order to prevent the breaking up of race meetings, as for years no other animal could be found who could even make him extend himself. On his behalf the owner of the animal made a challenge that has never been equaled for its audacity, and yet it was not accepted. That challenge was to run Boston against any two animals in the world, taking them singly, in four-mile heats, for a purse of $45,000 a side. And yet it was but a few weeks after the challenge that Boston was defeated in straight heats by the mare Fashion in a race for a small purse. That led to the great race, "The North vs. The South," for $20,000 a side, in which Fashion beat Boston, winning the first heat in 7:32¾, the fastest heat ever run up to that time by several seconds. And yet, says the chronicler, "though beaten, it was conceded by the judges that Boston had acquired a more vast renown by this splendid performance than by his thirty-five previous victories combined."

To get to the practical horse. In 1900 there were 21,216,888 horses in this country, one for every 3.6 inhabitants. The 18,250,000 horses and 2,000,000 mules on the farms of the country do work equivalent to the labors of 95,000,000 hand laborers, estimates the author of "The Horse," and at one-twentieth of the cost of human muscular energy, which is ample proof of their economic value. That is the text on which Prof. Roberts bases his continuous plea to farmers to breed always the best and thus gradually eliminate the badly formed, badly tempered, spavined and unsound from American farms, highways, and race tracks. The better the blood the better the offspring is his constantly reiterated lesson. He lays great stress on the imperative necessity of the exercise of intelligence in the selection of sire and dam according to their natural excellences. Pedigrees which are not charged with the blood of the best families should not be depended on blindly, as individuality is better than a mere mass of names that do not carry with them strong inheritances. He impresses, constantly, the necessity of proper climatic influences and suitably balanced foods for the successful breeding of a horse, whether draught animal, roadster, general purpose horse, pony, hunter, or thoroughbred racer. He proves that there is more profit in horse breeding when intelligently conducted than in any other agricultural enterprise, and shows in simple language how success may be assured.

While some horse lovers may not agree with some of his estimates as to the relative values of families or breeds of horses, all will certainly commend his theories as to breeding, for they are based on the soundest of common sense and devoid of hobby riding in favor of anything but a sound and handsome animal, whatever the breed. So, too, will horsemen generally agree with his estimate of the three-quarter-bred hunter—that he is the "best all-around horse in the world," and that while "the Englishmen have the best hunters, the American breeds the best saddle horse in the world." That saddle horse is, of course, the Kentucky or Tennessee type, and not "the Eastern horse with his high-school gait—a perversion of taste," that, fortunately, finds a habitat only in and about the New York riding schools and horse shows—never about the home of the man who knows what a good horse and an easy saddler really is, an animal of the Denmark or Black Squirrel type.

There is so much of hard-headed horse sense in this volume of Prof. Roberts's, when he confines himself to the writing of breeding, selection, feeding, training, and driving horses, that it seems a pity that it cannot be placed in the hands of every young farmer and farmer's son in the country. Compliance with the instructions it contains would mean better horses generally, and his theories carefully followed would add millions to the wealth of the country. What he has to say about the driving or riding of horses should be committed to memory by every man or woman who has the handling of horses, for he very truly holds in that chapter that "hands" are something that the average American knows nothing whatever of, and that of all fundamentals that is the most necessary to the proper manipulation of man's best friend.

THE HORSE. By Isaac Phillips Roberts, Emeritus Professor of Agriculture of Cornell University. Cloth, 16mo. Pp. xi.-401. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.25.

HINTS ON HORSES.

In this book Capt. C. M. Gonne, R. A., tells how to judge horses, how to buy them, ride them, drive them, and doctor them. He attempts to answer in simple language, and with the aid of pictures, such questions as What are the points of a horse? What are the things to look for and what are the things to avoid? How am I to tell a good horse when I see one? &c. As he points out in his brief introduction, the book makes no pretense to deal with the subject exhaustively. It is the result of many years of personal intimacy with the horse and of careful observation of his proportions, his movements, and his habits.

The volume deals with the measurements of the horse, the head, knees, legs, hoofs, mane, mouth, eyes, tail, thigh, fetlock, movements, amble, &c.; there are hints on docking, trimming, breaking, and in conclusion Capt. Gonne has added a few notes on riding, driving, and harness. The volume is issued by E. P. Dutton & Co. The illustrations consist of photographic reproductions and fac similes of pencil drawings by the author.

Stephen's Plain Speaking.

ESSAYS ON FREE THINKING AND PLAIN SPEAKING. By Leslie Stephen. With Introductory Essays on Leslie Stephen and His Works by James Bryce and Herbert Paul. 12mo. Pp. 410. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons, The Knickerbocker Press. $1.50.

Published originally in 1873, these essays of the late Sir Leslie Stephen have a modernness and a freshness which will commend them to the many who have not read them before. They are introduced here by two papers (both originally printed in The Quarterly Review)—one biographical, written by James Bryce; the other critically appreciative, written by that other historian, Herbert W. Paul. However, it is safe to say that more will be learned of Stephen by reading his own essays than can be gathered from these rather dry lucubrations of his admirers. The reader will get a positive sense of exhilaration as he passes from the last sentence of Mr. Paul's paper on Stephen to the first sentence of Stephen's paper on "The Broad Church." It is a quick change from dead words to living words.

Most people know that Sir Leslie Stephen began by being a Scotsman and a clergyman at Cambridge, and that he presently gave up his holy orders to become what is called a "free thinker." The virile articles here bound together are those in which the free thinker, with singular fairness and vigor, applies plain speech to the peculiar situation in which the Christian religion finds itself in the present age. He discusses the so-called "Broad Church" in England, particularly the range of unbelief in the literal meaning of the formal articles of the Church which is allowable in a clergyman, the real nature of the "Broad Church" attitude toward the sundry scientific methods and doctrines of the time—especially Darwinism—the difficulties, in short, which are involved in "the fruitless endeavor to force new truth into the old mold." To Stephen's mind the whole business is as if one should say he believed in witches, only straightway to explain that witchcraft was not a diabolic power, but a diseased mania. That, of course, is merely a roundabout way of asserting a disbelief in witches in any real sense.

In "Religion As a Fine Art" Stephen, with the play at Ober-Ammergau as a text, has an exceedingly able reduction to plain speech again of what to his thinking is the tendency and essence of the modern forms of religion which withdraw themselves from the region of practice to that of aesthetics. If you put religion in the realm of art, he says, there's no need to reconcile it with science. The Pope, (for instance,) by this arrangement, is "not a judge of controversies, but a master of ceremonies." So further in the same line in "Darwinism and Divinity," in which essay is much pleasing matter upon men and animals and the question of where reason and the soul begin, and why immortality should be "refused to well-conducted cats or to that admirable and fortunately asthetic dog which watched for ten years upon its master's grave." Another essay in the striking row which take the question, "Are We Christians?" and provides material for an answer not quite affirmative, while still further papers discuss Shaftesbury's "Characteristics," Bernard de Mandeville's "Fable of the Bees," and Bishop Warburton. Sir Leslie was a great mountain climber, and one essay (with theologico-philosophical application) is called "A Bad Five Minutes in the Alps." The last of all is his "Apology for Plain Speaking."

Thus much may be said of what so many know so well because the book has been out of print for several years, and there are numbers to whom the essays are not known, to whom the reading of them will furnish pleasure and something more than mere pleasure.

Mr. Rogers's "Benton."

THOMAS H. BENTON. By Joseph M. Rogers, author of "The True Henry Clay," &c. 12mo. Pp. 361. Philadelphia: George W. Jacobs & Company. $1.25.

It seems necessary to say at the outset that Mr. Rogers in this account of Thomas H. Benton has assumed more than properly belongs to the biographer—he sits in judgment upon matters not only of fact but of wisdom and right, which the most eminent writers of the lives of great men have agreed to consider out of their jurisdiction. Naturally some of these deliverances of Mr. Rogers, especially some of his strictures upon the courses of men like Monroe, Clay, Webster, and Calhoun, strike the reader as superfluous. Yet the story of so interesting a man as Thomas H. Benton (with his own "Thirty Years' View" to draw upon,) cannot be made uninteresting, or any account of the period of his life dull, if the reader has any sort of knowledge of American history. Mr. Rogers's estimate of Benton is as follows:

He sat for thirty consecutive years in the United States Senate—a record never reached before the civil war, and since then seldom surpassed. Much of this time he was a commanding figure, some times dominant and always useful. Over all his contemporaries he had the advantage of a clearer view of the great problems of the age, because unvexed by ambition; in uprightness and purity of character he was excelled by none. The names of Clay, Webster, and Calhoun are household words, and their careers are well known. Benton served longer than any one of them, is responsible for more sound legislation than all of them put together, yet only the student of history knows anything about him.

The author's account is especially informing in regard to the great Missourian's part as Jackson's lieutenant, in the fight against the National Bank, concluding with the dramatic incident of expunging from the record the Senatorial censure of the President. Mr. Rogers counts Benton the bulwark of the Union in those times, apologizing for him (on the ground of "gullelessness") when he was led into what seemed support of Calhoun's policies. He has a lively account of the nullification business, and the Webster-Hayne debate. He declares, too, that "slavery was not in its outward aspects the horrible institution that it seems to us now or that it seemed to the Northern people at the time," and relates what may be called the "original Booker Washington episode" when in 1828 all the plans of Benton and others for gradual emancipation in Missouri were knocked into a cocked hat by the news that "Arthur Tappan, the merchant prince and philanthropist of New York, had entertained colored people at his private table."

The Musical Highwayman.

STINGAREE. By E. W. Hornung, author of "Raffles," &c. With illustrations by George W. Lambert. 12mo. Pp. 385. New York. Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.50.

If a man is an outlaw, yet loves music, he may well hunger and thirst for it in the wilderness; therefore if he holds up a concert of amateurs in a convenient town and calls for a song at the point of two enormous pistols, who shall blame him? Especially if he spares the concert-goers' pockets and makes the occasion serve to introduce to the notice of an eminent composer a girl with a wonderful voice. That is exactly the performance of Mr. Hornung's "Stingaree," who is not a gentleman burglar, but belongs to an older nobility of crime—the gentry of the road.

"Stingaree" operates with excellent manners, gentlemanly feeling, a monocle and high theatric effect in Australia. He "sticks up" (that's Australian for hold up) not only concerts of amateurs but mail coaches, banks—even officers of the Victorian police. When he "sticks up" the mail the first thing he does when he reaches a quiet, safe place is to pick Punch out of the ruck and read it. For he has been a London clubman and the jests of the old town are dear to him. When he is caught it is, of course, when he is upon an errand of mercy, but jails cannot hold him. He does not pass out of this series of ingenious tales before he has heard the girl of his first musical adventures sing again. In point of fact, he steps (with only time for a bath and getting into evening clothes) straight from the prison to the town hall, where the lady, bloomed into a prima donna, is charming all the good provincials. It may be added that Mr. Hornung has left a perfectly feasible opening for further "Stickings Up of Stingarees."

PARLIAMENT.

A History of the Origin and Development of the English Legislature.*

IN the latest volume of the "Story of the Nations" series Mr. L. Cecil Jane undertakes to describe the origin and growth of the British Parliament. He calls his book "The Coming of Parliament," though its sub-title, "England from 1350 to 1660," is really more descriptive. Of course in tracing the development of Parliament English history must be studied, but Mr. Jane, in spite of his assertion that he has laid "special stress" on Parliamentary growth, has really made that almost incidental to his account of England during the period named.

Four chief causes served to develop Parliament from its beginning in 1265. The first of these was the extinction of feudalism, and the rise in the importance of the foot soldier. The influence of the baronage and knights on the Government had been due to their value in war. So long as their help was needed in battle they were important in peace; conversely, if war could be waged without them it was no longer necessary for the King to conciliate them. And Crecy and Poitiers were won for Edward III. by his archers—the common people. Mr. Jane therefore seems justified in saying that the Hundred Years' War marks the first step in the transfer of the power of the kingdom from the nobility to the Parliament, more especially the Commons.

With this improvement in the position of the common people it was not strange that the Parliaments of Edward III. showed independence of spirit at times. The Commons decided to meet apart from the nobles, and then insisted that money given by them should be spent for the purpose for which it was voted—a long step toward the modern idea of a representative body. In this reign, too, began the practice of impeachment, and in the Parliamentary conflict between the followers of the Black Prince and those of John of Gaunt Mr. Jane notes the first political parties.

In 1399 the Commons impeached and deposed Richard II. and placed Henry of Lancaster on the throne. He was dependent on Parliament for his position and for his ability to maintain it; and for this reason he and his successors (Henry V. and Henry VI.) ruled constitutionally, while Parliament strengthened its position as master of the purse string and gained an influence which it did not reach again for two centuries. But the Wars of the Roses, lasting from 1455-40 485, demolished the Parliamentary structure almost wholly. The King's Council assumed the functions of the people's representatives, and Parliament became simply an advisory body, convened to give a show of legality to the measures of the rival leaders of the war.

The baronage perished in the Wars of the Roses, and a restricted franchise, brought about by Henry VI.—the famous "forty-shilling freehold," though Mr. Jane does not say so—made it easy to pack Parliament in the Crown's interest. It was a packed Parliament which gave to Edward IV. for life the proceeds of various taxes and imposts, thus enriching him so that he could get along without further Parliamentary aid. Henry VII. reduced the assembly to its lowest state; he had seized many estates of the adherents of Edward IV. and Richard III., so that he was rich; he further devised the plan of fining heavily the wealthy persons who broke his sumptuary laws, and thus he, too, was freed from the necessity of a Parliament.

Henry VIII.'s break with the Church offered another chance for Parliament to gain power, though it made little immediate use of it. Then, too, the introduction of firearms brought about the need of trained soldiers—a standing army, in fact; even Henry's wealth did not support one, and he had to turn to Parliament, which, however, gave him only half of what he wanted. Practically, during all of the sixteenth century Parliament, though it existed, had little vitality, only occasionally showing signs of active life. The Tudors were strong rulers. Elizabeth compelled Parliament to confine its attention to ordinary business; she roundly rebuked it for daring to ask her to marry, and told the Commons that they talked too much, and that freedom of speech meant the right to say yes or no. It was not until 1601 that Parliament prevailed on Elizabeth to cease granting monopolies. "The Commons," says Mr. Jane, "had placed their power, as it were, in commission; but they reserved to themselves the right to resume it as soon as they deemed it advisable to do so, and to take again the same position they had occupied in Lancastrian times, when their power was at its highest."

That time came when the Stewarts succeeded to the English throne, and in the first session of the new reign the Commons asserted their privileges as matters of right, not of favor. James resisted, and, except for the Addled Parliament, which he dismissed before it had passed a single act, ruled without a Parliament from 1603 to 1620. The body that met in the latter year impeached Bacon and other men, and made a strong protest against the encroachment of the King. Charles I. was in opposition to Parliament from the beginning, and dissolved the first three assemblies of his reign in anger because they refused to give him what he wished. He was not wealthy, like Henry VII. and Henry VIII., and to raise money attempted to impose taxes without consent of the people. This, as every one knows, brought about the great civil war, which resulted in the King's death and the establishment of an English republic. There is no doubt that the Long Parliament's methods were as unconstitutional as those of the King, but Parliament aimed to preserve the liberties of the people, while Charles sought merely to aggrandize the Crown. The disease was desperate, and so were the remedies.

At Cromwell's death his system collapsed, and a new Parliament promptly recalled the Stewarts to the throne. All the events of the Rebellion had served to exalt the Commons and to lower the Lords. The former had managed the war against the King, had directed the affairs of the country for a time, and attained recognition both at home and abroad as the actual source of authority. They revealed their power in recalling Charles II., and by doing so they had "arrived," as the slang of the day has it—Parliament, in Mr. Jane's phrase, had "come." The end of feudalism was the first step in its progress; the fall of the baronage another; the creation of a local feeling under the Tudors, and the expulsion of the Church from the political field a third; the last was the successful fight against the absolutism of the Stewarts.

Mr. Jane's book is interesting reading, even if he sometimes tangles the thread of his story of Parliament.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

Kosmo Wilkinson explains in his introductory chapter to "The Personal Story of the Upper House" of the British Parliament the scope of the volume:

How the peers of England, from being an estate of the realm, grew into an independent parliamentary assembly; how, and by what personal agencies, the hereditary Chamber became in a sense the parent of the elective; on what issues, by what degrees, it co-operated with other agencies to establish the House of Commons; how then, from seeing in that Chamber its natural ally, if not its political offspring, the upper house gradually discovered in the lower a rival and a foe. Such will be among the earliest points to be touched upon in an inquiry to be conducted, less in the spirit of constitutional histories than from the point of view most likely to find acceptance with those who read to be interested as well as to be informed. Descending in contemporary direction, I shall show how differences of opinion between the two chambers, arising out of the great issues raised in the seventeenth century, gradually became a parliamentary tradition and periodically reappeared in varying degrees of intensity.

Riches and a Wife.

THE MONKS' TREASURE. By George Horton. With illustrated frontispiece. Pp. 291. 12mo. Cloth. Indianapolis: The Bobbs-Merrill Company.

If this story illustrates any phase of life more than another it is the ease by which a wife and riches may be gained. The young hero, Walter Lythgoe, is sent to the Greek islands of the Mediterranean to obtain for his uncle, the head of a prosperous baking powder concern, all the crude cream of tartar he can find. A letter of introduction to an American missionary on one of the small islands admits him as a welcome guest. From this point to the end of the volume his business is a mere incidental. He falls desperately in love with the beautiful Greek servant girl employed in the missionary's family. Visitations with a Scotch student to an old monastery on the island reveal the mystery of the girl's life. She turns out to be an Italian Duchess, descended from an ancient family of Dukes and nobles whose fortune was confiscated by the monks years before when one of the old Dukes fled to the monastery for safety with his gold and jewels when his land was devastated by war.

Needless to say, the young American baking powder agent and his Scotch friend discover everything, the suspicious death of the Italian noble, and the presence of his treasure in the cells of the monastery. The recovery of the wealth against the cunning machinations of the monks supplies a number of exciting and tragic events to sustain interest in a story which otherwise is rather lightly worked out. The Greek servant girl, who has learned to love the American visitor, remains true to him when greeted with the information that she is a Duchess, and, more satisfactory still, an heiress in the bargain. It is useless to say that they are married and everything ends in a blaze of happiness, and we hear nothing more of Walter Lythgoe's search for crude cream of tartar.

A GREAT NOVEL

"As popular as Dickens; as profound as Tolstoy"

JÖRN UHL

By GUSTAV FRENSSEN

Authorized Version. Translated for the first time into English by F. S. Delmar.

This powerful story of modern life in Germany is the literary sensation of Europe. Over 200,000 copies of the German edition were sold within eighteen months of issue—a record never before equalled by any novel in Germany, and successful editions have been published in the leading European languages.

Continental critics are already ranking Frenssen with Goethe, and his epoch-making story is regarded as a classic. Many high authorities have called "Jörn Uhl" "the greatest German novel."

The plot is of engrossing interest, and the characters almost turn into flesh and blood before our eyes, they are drawn with such tremendous realism. The story touches upon many of the social and ethical problems of the day. All Booksellers, $1.50

IR KLONDIKE.

ional Account of the British and American Goldfields in the Northwest.*

EW authors have had such an exceptional opportunity for gathering material for a book as that accorded to John Scudder McLain, editor of The Minneapolis Journal, who accompanied the committee of the United States Senate on its visit to Alaska and the British goldfields of the Klondike in 1903. As a result Mr. McLain has written an exceedingly interesting book of travel, which not only justifies the claims of the publishers that it has practically the accuracy and trustworthiness of a public document, but is valuable, too, for its clear and well-told presentation of the conditions, needs, and possibilities of the Territory. Mr. McLain has made his book thoroughly up to date by compiling statistical information as late as 1904.

Mr. McLain's observation has convinced him that the country is rich in minerals, timber, agricultural possibilities, and fisheries. Indeed, the author points out that for years the fisheries have been more important than the gold mines. It is surprising to find any one enthusiastic about the agricultural possibilities of a land that always has been regarded as one of ice and snow. Alaska and the Klondike and gold have been practically synonymous terms, yet in the Copper River region there are vast and rich deposits of copper still to be exploited, and there are in this region also petroleum wells in active operation.

Throughout the trip, which lasted for ten weeks from [illegible]5, the people of Alaska showed every disposition to help the committee in its investigations and were not at all backward in presenting their grievances and disclosing their resources. In it all the fact stands forth boldly that the United States has been decidedly niggardly in helping along the development of its rich possession. Its commercial development is hampered by nothing so much as the lack of transportation facilities.

In striking contrast to this position of the United States is that of the Canadian Government. The Klondike has better mining laws, and Canada has spent large amounts of money in providing good wagon roads, which have reduced freight charges and greatly lowered the cost of living around Dawson by rendering possible the introduction of labor-saving machinery. It does not seem possible that the United States could remain unmindful of the fact that the territory for which Secretary Seward in 1867 paid Russia $7,200,000 has even under adverse conditions showed remarkable returns. The commerce of Alaska for the year ending June 30, 1903, amounted to over $21,000,000, not including the gold output, which would add nearly $7,000,000 more. It is officially stated that since Alaska became American territory it has exported gold, fish, and furs in about equal values to the amount of about $150,000,000, while, without counting the large sums employed in furnishing transportation to Alaska, the investments of American capital there have reached $25,000,000. The aggregate shipments of merchandise to Alaska from the United States in the same period have reached $100,000,000. When Seward bought the territory the anti-expansionists set up a howl and said the United States had bought nothing but a few seals and a vast expanse of icebergs. It takes more than seals and icebergs to develop a commerce of such dimensions, says Mr. McLain, and he adds that this is only a small beginning of what is to follow in the not far distant future. It staggers the imagination to think of what the country might do if it was helped to develop its resources to the full.

The author gives a glowing description of the sail from Seattle to Metlakahtla, Father Duncan's wonderful community in the Territory, which was the first landing made. Here the author makes what must be a valuable suggestion to those continually in search of vacation novelties, particularly if they have the wherewithal to gratify their cravings for the unusual. He says:

> The inside passage is said to resemble very much the waters along the west coast of Norway, whose fiords have begun to attract tourists from our own country by their rugged and wild grandeur, and it seems to me that when their attractions become known for what they are the ocean stretches of the archipelago between Puget Sound and the Lynn Canal are destined to constitute one of the most frequented Summer playgrounds of the world, as they certainly are the most charming. What a delightful place for a holiday cruise in yacht or launch, where quiet coves or landlocked harbors may be found for every night's anchorage, where game abounds on the islands and the waters teem with life of every kind, from the trout of the mountain streams to the sociable porpoise or the spouting whale. And not only is there the charm of scenery, such as our continent nowhere else affords, and the opportunity for sport with rod and gun, but the hospitable and friendly native Indians, in their picturesque villages, are a source of unfailing interest.

It this is startling news, imagine picking out Alaska as a Winter resort. At Ketchikan, a short distance above Father Duncan's village, the thermometer rarely reaches zero, and the mean temperature is about that of Washington, D. C. The Japan current keeps all the harbors on its course open in Winter as well as in Summer, which led ex-Gov. Swineford, who is a resident of Ketchikan, to say that if he were a resident of any State east of the mountains he would come here to spend his Winters in preference to Florida. While on the subject of climate, it might be well to note that Mr. McLain found at Selkirk, not far from Dawson, the most successful farms in the British Yukon. One farmer there was reported to have cleared $3,000 during 1902 on his crops of hay and potatoes, for which he found a ready market in Dawson. Away up at Eagle, which Mr. McLain dilates upon as "the city with a future," were found the best demonstrations of the agricultural possibilities of Alaska, and the gardens nearest the pole where important results were obtained. They produced large quantities of potatoes, cabbage, cauliflower, lettuce, turnips, and radishes, so that the possibility of raising such products successfully on the sixty-fifth degree of north latitude has been demonstrated.

The restrictions on claim locating in the British Yukon guard against one man or a few monopolizing the whole of the rich mining district, while the Dominion laws are liberal to aliens, in that citizenship or first steps to naturalization are not necessary in order to take up a claim. On the Alaska side only citizens or those who have declared an intention to become citizens may locate mining claims. On the American side, too, the tendency to grab everything in sight is apparently not curbed. Mr. McLain says that, thanks to our defective mining laws, it is possible for the dog in the manger to play his part in Alaska to the limit, and he is doing it. There is nothing to prevent a single prospector from staking as much ground as he pleases, and where the indications are good he pleases to stake everything in sight. Under the same defective laws he can hold his claims indefinitely without doing any work on them, and in nine cases out of ten is waiting in the hope that some one, thinking they have been abandoned, will file on them. Then if they prove valuable he is prepared to pounce on the one who has spent his money to prove the value of the property, and, aided by a lot of others of the same breed, compel the new-comer to pay a large sum for quit-claim or divide the output, or vacate altogether. Mr. McLain says that the Senatorial Committee took stenographic reports at all places of the recommendations of miners, merchants, and lawyers, and he says they will undoubtedly endeavor to change the laws. It appears, however, that Mr. McLain has been too sanguine on that score.

What Alaska needs more than any other thing at this time is transportation facilities, and Mr. McLain shows what the treasure is that is waiting to be wrested from the land. In his chapter on transportation he shows the difference in the cost of living in the Klondike camps, where the Dominion Government has built roads, and on the Alaska side, where there are none. What these differences mean in the development of the country, he says, can be scarcely overestimated, as the road building has cut down the price of products in the Klondike one-fourth in five years. In the Spring of 1902, when flour was $7 a hundred in Dawson it was $22 a hundred on Chicken Creek, and so it was with bacon, potatoes, condensed milk, beef, and eggs. The trade of the entire Forty-mile District, says Mr. McLain, should be handled from Eagle, on the American side, but is practically monopolized from Dawson by the aid of a wagon road built from Dawson west to the boundary line. In Copper Centre conditions are even worse at this day, and Mr. McLain says that a Minneapolis man who recently visited that section reported hay at $600 a ton, oats and flour 35 cents a pound, butter $1 a pound, canned beef $1.25 a pound, oil $3.50 a gallon, a wash tub $8, and a joint of stove pipe $1.

The author does not venture to estimate how much gold there is in Alaska. There is a saying there that "the gold is where you find it." How much truth there is in this is proved by the find recently at Fairbanks. Fairbanks is 250 miles from Dawson and 500 miles from Nome, while the great Treadwell Mines are 700 miles from both these places. From his investigations, however, of the mineral wealth of the country Mr. McLain believes, and gives reasons for the belief, that "the business of taking gold out of Alaska has scarcely commenced; that it will become a permanent industry—as permanent as coal mining in Pennsylvania—and that it will take generations to exhaust the mineral wealth of those marvelously rich and marvelously extensive gold fields."

An extremely interesting chapter in the book is the description of the reindeer-breeding industry conducted by the Eskimos. As we have thus helped the Eskimos, Mr. McLain thinks we should also help the Indians, whose means of livelihood have been taken from them by our inequitable game laws, and whose morals have suffered from our lack of effort to educate them to compete mentally and materially with their changed conditions.

The Political Beat.

THE PLUM TREE. By David Graham Phillips. One volume. Pp. 388. Illustrated by H. M. Eaton. Indianapolis: The Bobbs-Merrill Company. $1.50

The work of Mr. David Graham Phillips has so steadily increased in power and improved in style since the two stipples of newspaper life—crude, strong, and withal a shade repulsive—with which he started his career as a novelist, that each successive story from his pen has advanced his standing in a manner quite unusual in a day when first novels are more than apt to be last ones, so far as excellence is concerned. In the three years between his "A Woman Ventures" and "The Plum Tree," Mr. Phillips has taken big strides in almost every requisite for the making of a deservedly successful story writer, a mode of procedure that, persevered in some time longer would seem likely to land him finally in the higher ranks of his profession. As for that matter, "The Plum Tree" itself will hardly fail to raise him out of the crowd for good and all.

Mr. Phillips's stories have always been of the kind that depend for their value on their author's evident gift for the analysis of the social conditions and social types with which all are familiar and for the more difficult setting forth of both with a power and vitality that make one of his stories nothing less than a glimpse into the realities of human motives and the pleasant and unpleasant phases of modern life. "The Plum Tree" is even less of a romance and a closer study in the character development of one or two persons than any of his former books have been, but in not one of them have the vigor of plot and action, and that precious sense of the humanness of it all, kept his reader's interest at a higher pitch.

The question in which one is at once absorbed is not whether Harvey Sayler will marry the object of his youthful love, but to what sort of culmination he will carry his youthful ambitions—how he will reconcile his honest intentions and manly aims with the conditions prevailing in the world of business and politics in which every man must make his way. "The Plum Tree" is an appallingly frank exposure of the methods of the cleverly organized brigands who so often manipulate the Governmental machinery in city, State, and Nation on this side the Atlantic, and Harvey Sayler is Mr. Phillips's type of the more than ordinarily well-bred and well-intentioned young man who is easily attracted from the difficulties and hardships incident to a start in any one of the more honorable professions to the alluring opportunities for speedy advancement open to those who can establish any sort of claim upon the dispenser of political favors, or, in other words, get under the political plum tree. All the other types are those with which the newspapers have made us familiar—the vulgar city boss with his hecklers and rivals; his somewhat more presentable counterparts at the State and National capitals, the powerful band of plutocrats whom the politicians alternately fleece and favor, and the various puppets and figureheads who are put up and down to please the blind and stupid public while politicians and plutocrats fatten at its expense.

Sayler himself, starting as a poverty-stricken young lawyer, attains the enviable position of supreme boss, not the King, but the maker of Kings, and it is with a masterly understanding of the devious workings of the human conscience, especially the conscience of the practical politician, that Mr. Phillips has developed Senator Sayler from the shrinking candidate who first presented himself for favors at the hands of Boss Dominick of Pulaski. The chronicle of the developing process is not inspiring, except as its exposure of the pitiable waste of good material in such a career may inspire some future attempt toward the betterment of present political methods, but that fact has, of course, nothing to do with the power and skill with which Mr. Phillips has set out his analysis of the inner construction of an American National boss who wished to be and thought he was a benefactor to his country; who blandly promised himself beside his mother's grave to climb up by book or crook to an eminent place in the world and then to use his ill-gotten power for great and good ends. It certainly forms an impressive and timely commentary on a subject that should be of supreme interest to every good citizen of the United States, and it can but set one to thinking to some purpose along the line indicated.

Two Little Cliff Dwellers.

As a companion to their previous story of "Lodrix, the Lake Dwellers," the Misses Belle Wiley and Grace W. Edick have produced "Children of the Cliff," (New York: D. Appleton & Co. 30 cents.) This tale intended for very little ones tells of the adventures of two little children, Teni and Mavo, who dwelt with their father and mother among the cliffs. One day they saw a rabbit and chased it—chased it so far that they quite lost themselves, and met with several very interesting adventures before they found another cliff dweller who kindly took them back to their parents. The book is filled with pictures of Teni, Mavo, the rabbit, and any number of other interesting things.

The Tyrol.

THE FAIR LAND TYROL. By W. D. McCracken, author of "Romance and Teutonic Switzerland," "The Rise of the Swiss Republic," &c. With illustrations. One volume. Pp. 288. Svo. Cloth. Boston: L. C. Page & Co. $1.60.

Mr. W. D. McCracken, who has made himself somewhat of an expert in matters Swiss, has turned his attention to the Tyrol, and essays in the volume now before us to combine the instruction of a guide book with the amusement of a book of travels. He brings, as he says in his "foreword" "appreciation and affection" to his task, and the result is simple and not wholly unpleasing. It would seem, however, that Mr. McCracken's volumes on Romance and Teutonic Switzerland must have qualities to commend them that we have not found in "The Fair Land Tyrol," for otherwise they could hardly have gained such a wide acceptance as they have.

Mr. McCracken's "foreword" declares that it is not his purpose to attempt any profound analysis of things Tyrolean; that it is his province "to praise, to repay in a measure the friendly reception which was everywhere accorded to the writer, to wish good speed and long life to all the dwellers in that greatly blessed and beautiful country, as well as to help the foreign wayfarer to a true understanding and full enjoyment of that happy land Tyrol." This certainly is a kindly purpose, so far as the Tyroleans are concerned, but it does not argue much for the exactness of the descriptions afforded in the book. Everything is perfect in the Tyrol, so far as Mr. McCracken lets us know; the country is idyllic, its people invariably courteous. The foreword contains about as much description as any chapter in the book.

In the Tyrol men, women, and children display a great fondness for greens of all shades, from yellow to grass and brown greens. While the men of Meran wear broad green suspenders, at Lienz even green woolen trousers may be seen. The moment you enter the country you will also notice feathers on the hats—generally the short, curly ones of the blackcock, or straight, defiant eagle's quills, but often ordinary, every-day feathers dropped by the barnyard fowl. " " " The Tyrolese commonly harness one horse to a carriage made for two.

In "Tartarin on the Alps," Daudet describes how the Alps are maintained by a great company, which keeps the mountains clean, provides feather beds in the ravines for tourists and guides to land on if they should fall into the crevasses, supplies chamois to lend color to the view; in every way commercializes the country. Despite Daudet's humorous exaggeration, there was a basis of truth in his description.

In the same way—with a basis of truth underlying the statement—it is fair to say that the Tyrol is made up for the Summer boarder, and Mr. McCracken hints at the fact. It pays—and the guileless Tyrolean sees that it pays—to give the tourist what he wants. So he does. He puts on the "costume of the district," sticks a rooster's feather in his cap, and poses; and when the season is ended he takes off his costume, dons a more comfortable suit of clothes, and chinks the money that his theatrical Summer's work has brought to him. Mr. McCracken himself suggests that this is so in his chapter on the Zillerthal, the "Valley of Song and Dance." Out of the Zillerthal came the Tyrolean jodeler and the "famous Tyrolean folksongs," as the usual programme hath it. Joseph Rainer, a cattle dealer of Fugen, saw that there was money in singing to those who liked to be sung to, so he got his brothers and sister, wrote the "folksongs"—and started the jodel around the world, as Mr. McCracken says. He continues: "It is alleged now that some so-called Tyrolese quartets are made up of artists who have never been in the Tyrol at all, but come from neighboring highlands."

There is a fairly good account of Andreas Hofer—a chapter where Mr. McCracken has let the subject get away with him to some extent, where he tells the story with some effect: he might have been reading Stephenson's account of "Spirit" Seguier in his "Rambles in the Cévennes" before he sat down to tell of Hofer and his grand failure. And there are other places where Mr. McCracken has dropped temporarily the sweet simplicity of Mr. Gilbert's Archibald Grosvenor, and used language fitting to his subject. But as a whole his book is disappointing, childishly enthusiastic, and not at all convincing as either guide book or account of travel in the Tyrol.

It is full, however, and one will not go astray in following Mr. McCracken as a guide. He takes you everywhere, and tells you very simply and very pleasantly just what you will see, or should see, and how nice the people of the Tyrol are; and then he tells you this again. There is a fairly good index, and on the inside of each cover is a blur of green and red that is supposed to be a map of the country. It is not so simple as the rest of the book, for the red lettering is hard to make out.

After Hans Andersen.

BEYOND CHANCE OF CHANGE. By Sara Andrew Shafer, Author of "The Day Before Yesterday." 12mo. New York: The Macmillan Company. $1.50.

Hans Christian Andersen is the inspiration and the model of this little book which looks upon American children much as he looked upon the young folk of his own Denmark. Yet it is not imitation. You feel that the spirit of Andersen's stories got into the author's blood when she was young and finding itself a home there, grew to be in a real sense her own. It is only the spirit which is Andersen's, the children are American, delightfully American, and the backgrounds though sentimentalized (after the Andersen manner) are American, too, and Puritan. To be sure, the girls are best. Like Andersen himself, this author, when it comes to boys, prefers the abnormally good and high-minded. The fact is that such boys don't usually turn out well, but the theory and sentiment are quite otherwise. Certainly the little girls are charming, especially little Rachel, who had a Puritan conscience combined with a perfectly pagan flow of high spirits. Naturally Rachel was always doing forbidden things except when she was repenting of past transgressions. The mysterious line between deeds one must not do and other deeds appeared plain only in the light of subsequent tearful reflection. There are elders equally charming in the same tenderly reminiscent angle of view—the nurse, grandpapa, and certain old maids.

In the Reign of Tiberius.

PSYCHE. By Walter S. Cramp. Illustrated by T. [illegible] Illus. Pp. 326. Boston: Little, Brown & Co. $1.50.

This is a romance of the reign of Tiberius and deals with the period when the Emperor lived virtually a prisoner on the Island of Capri while his enemies worked against his throne in Rome.

The love interest surrounds Psyche, a beautiful Greek dancing girl who is in love with a charioteer named Gyges. Psyche has a brother, Gannon, who is employed as a secretary and messenger to Sejanus, a treacherous adviser of Tiberius. Gannon incurs the displeasure of Livilla, who is in love with Sejanus. Gannon carries a letter which is unsealed either by accident or with intent to compromise the boy. In a weak moment the boy reads the letter and discovers the commission to kill Drusus, Livilla's husband. When Sejanus discovers the treachery of [illegible] from S. to L. about Lygydus," a eunuch, who later poisons Drusus. Gannon is murdered. His parents take the body. Sejanus, learning of the message which Gannon has sewn in his tunic, causes the arrest and imprisonment of the parents and later of Psyche herself. Gyges is sought, but escapes. It is through Gyges that the treachery of Sejanus is brought to the notice of Tiberius, who deposes Sejanus. The latter is later killed by an infuriated Roman mob.

The story is a simple one and the pen pictures of Rome and the Romans and the atmosphere of intrigue are convincing. But "Quo Vadis" haunts the reader of "Psyche" with rather a dazzling effect upon the latter story.

A New Economics Text Book.

TRUSTS, POOLS, AND CORPORATIONS. Edited with an Introduction by William Z. Ripley, Ph. D., Professor of Economics, Harvard University. One volume. Pp. xxx-677. 12mo. New York: Ginn & Co. 12mo. Cloth.

A new book from so eminent an economist as Prof. Ripley of Harvard would command attention at any time. This volume, however, has an unusual interest, for the reason that it differs radically from the many economics textbooks that have preceded it. It is a compilation of special articles, mainly by other well-known legal writers, on the great cases which have arisen relative to the status of corporate bodies. These cases extend over a period of thirty-five years, from the Michigan Salt Association, a type of the earliest form of pool, in 1888, to the recent Northern Securities Company and the United States Shipbuilding Company.

The introduction is a clear and unbiased discussion of the trust problem and of the allied economic questions of wage rates, the effect on prices of industrial combination, and kindred topics.

An Emperor's Woolng.

THE FLOWER OF DESTINY. An Episode of the Second Empire. By William Dana Orcutt. Illustrated by Charlotte Weber. 8vo. Chicago: A. C. McClurg & Co. $1.25.

Louis Napoleon and Eugénie de Montijo are the central figures in this new romance by Mr. William Dana Orcutt. Napoleon III. had just escaped from Ham disguised as a workman, and made his way to England, there to claim the assistance of his good friend the Count d'Orsay. At the famous gambling house of Crockford's Napoleon first makes his appearance in the story, and here, strangely it would seem, Mr. Orcutt permits his heroine to be discussed by the men over the wine cups and the gaming table. Here Napoleon learns of the charms of Eugénie, her daring, her beauty, her marvelous costumes, her adventures and her conquests. After that the story follows through their courtship, with the latter always playing a conspicuous part as the flower of Eugénie's destiny. For, as he tells Napoleon, "On the day following my birth, he [her father] came to my cradle with a bunch of violets, for which he had sent a shepherd to the heights of the Sierra Nevada, and as he strewed them over me, my mother heard him say, with grief in his voice, 'My daughter, you can never wear these for our great Napoleon; his colossal labors are at an end. But let these blossoms, your birth flowers, be an emblem to you that the name will live, and that his descendants will again sit on the throne of France.'"

And in the end, Mr. Orcutt presents a pretty picture of Eugénie with a crown of fresh violets on her bright head standing beside the Emperor. "Accept these flowers of destiny, my Empress," he said—"wear this crown which I place upon your head until France shall present you with another."

A KING NOVEL

Rub-a-dub-dub, rub-a-dub-dub, r-r-r-r-r-r, boom! General Charles King's novels ought to be announced with a drumbeat. His latest, "The Medal of Honor," opens with a commander's salute and ends with a soldier's kiss, running the whole gamut of arms and embraces, amativeness and ambition, martial engagements, and Cupid's light artillery keeping up a constant battle against the thunderous guns of Mars.

SOME FRENCH STUDIES.

"The things of the mind" excite a curiously active interest in Paris, to which no other capital affords a full parallel. Explain it how we will—by the intellectual centralization of France, by the power of Paris to drain the provinces of their talents, by the influence of the Academy and the Institute, with the great teaching bodies—the fact remains that a writer in Paris who discusses letters, and morals as reflected in letters, falls naturally into a tone of confidence in the interest of his readers that no American writer and no English writer, for that matter, seems to be able to adopt.

One result is that French critics are more numerous, that the work of each of them is apt to be more varied and more interesting than is the case with us. Within the last generation consider the range and quality and the reputation of such a group as that which included Sainte-Beuve, Ferdinand Brunetière, Taine, Scherer, and, more recently, Jules Lemaitre and Georges Pellissier. With the exception of Taine, all these able and prolific writers have been engaged in almost continuous comment on current literary product, including, as occasion offered, the product of the great Frenchmen as it has been republished. And M. Taine was an exception only in the relative sparseness of his contributions, many of which were of the same general character. And there have arisen among the critics schools with aims and methods of their own, the "exploitation" of which has given to the public considerable collections of volumes that evidently are read and paid for. No English-speaking community can present the record of such an experience. Apparently in no English-speaking community is there the active, what the economists would call the "effective," demand for discussion of books. Without that demand we cannot have what the French unquestionably have, a body of respectable and telling criticism. Like St. Cecilia's cherubs, "Nous n'avons pas de quoi."

This reflection occurs to us afresh, as, we think, it will occur to many who may happen on the book, in reading the "Etudes de Littérature et de Morale Contemporaines" of M. Georges Pellissier, a writer to whom we have already called the attention of our readers. It is an extremely interesting little volume not only because the writer is ingenious, candid, temperate, informed, and informing, but because it reflects the interest of which we have spoken, and gives us a charming and engaging series of glimpses into the workings of the French mind. It will be noted that the studies are not of literature alone but of contemporaneous morals, and in this is the source of much of their attractiveness and value. M. Pellissier, though he has a pretty gift of sarcasm and irony of his own, is essentially a serious man. He has ideas worked out with patience, held with enthusiasm, and advocated with intense earnestness not only as to literary standards, but as to human duties and responsibilities and the attitude of thinking men toward the movement of the time and the race. He has ideas of great definiteness as to the forces shaping the destiny of France and the French people, and if he is rather a cosmopolitan than a patriot it is because he recognizes that humanity is greater than any one mass of beings, and that what is sound and wholesome and just and helpful for the Frenchmen of to-day is determined by the nature of all men and by the ideals which, more or less blindly, all men pursue.

It is, indeed, as a revelation of the moral earnestness of what must be a very considerable part of the intellectual class in France that M. Pellissier's volume best repays study. But it is extremely profitable on the more purely literary side. The study of "Sainte-Beuve and Taine and Contemporary Criticism," the one of the "Academy of the Goncourts," and especially that on "The Peasant in Our Modern Literature," are sound and well-developed examinations of important phases of literary life in France, with direct and indirect bearings of the greatest interest on all literary life. Incidentally the polemic the author wages with M. Brunetière, though it has in it some suggestions of partisan heat quite unusual with him, throws much light on the intellectual movement of the day.

SCHILLER.

The May magazines are pullulating with Schiller articles, including abstruse disquisitions, for the most part by Germans, concerning the purport of Schiller's message to mankind. Tuesday, May 9, is the one hundredth anniversary of his death. Schiller remains the favorite German poet, that one whom his countrymen love best, even though they may be prouder of the world-wide fame of Goethe. Doubtless Goethe is the German world-poet, that one whom his countrymen would choose to represent them in a competition embracing all countries and times. But doubtless also Schiller is the German German poet, all the more precious because his work will less well bear transportation, by which we do not mean, or do not alone mean, translation. Carlyle, in the "Life of Schiller," which began his own literary career, likens the vogue of Schiller in Germany to that of Burns in Scotland. And everybody who has experienced a Burns dinner, or a Scotch public dinner of any kind, knows that Scotchmen rather resent the admiration of Burns by non-Scotchmen, assuring these latter that they cannot appreciate so Scottish a poet, and that they had better confine their admiration to Walter Scott.

It is not quite so with Schiller. With regard to language it is not at all so, for, though Schiller is said never to have got over his Swabian [illegible] in speech, his writing is accepted as a model of unprovincial German, the more remarkable and admirable because he cannot be said to have had models in his turn. Klopstock and Lessing, who were his principal predecessors, by no means imposed the German language even on their own countrymen as a literary vehicle. The contempt which Frederick the Great, for example, had for his mother-tongue cannot be called an ignorant contempt. It would have been inexcusable, and even impossible, if Goethe and Schiller had been accessible to him as they were to the generation after him. It is hardly too much to say that these two created German as a literary language embodying a literature with which it not only behooved all Germans to be acquainted, but which also imposed itself as a "compulsory requirement" upon all foreigners who aspired to be European scholars.

It is strange that a writer who never overcame his own provincialism should be the pioneer in the overthrow of German literary provincialism and in the creation of a literature that could be called national. This is the great achievement of the poet, dramatist, historian, and essayist, and for this his countrymen do well to honor him as they always delight to do, not alone at home but in every land to which they are led or driven. Schiller's idealism was a most wholesome corrective for that quality and tendency which his great compeer described as "what hampers us all, the common," and what a later critic finds to be peculiarly a German defect. There is nothing "common" about Schiller.

But it remains true that the great service which he rendered to his countrymen was in helping to create a national literature, to foster the sentiment of nationality. The Germany of petty principalities into which he was born was the Germany in which he died. But his life and work are great factors in the evolution which has since taken place and which is still visibly in progress, the merging of all these principalities and provincialisms into a great national entity. To the next step in that evolution, the step which has not yet been taken, to the growth of individual freedom along with national power up to the standard of the peoples politically the most advanced, he also pointed the way. But long before the political unity of Germany was definitely conceived or regarded by practical statesmen as other than a wild dream, Schiller was cultivating the sentiment which was to bear fruit after three-quarters of the century which has elapsed since his death. It is the greatest achievement which a popular writer can perform as the spokesman of his people. The relation of Schiller to the unification of Germany recalls the eloquent words of Carlyle, spoken thirty years before the complete and final achievement of a United Italy:

> Yes, truly, it is a great thing for a Nation that it gets an articulate voice; that it produce a man who will speak forth melodiously what the heart of it means! Italy, for example, poor Italy, lies dismembered, scattered asunder, not appearing in any protocol or treaty as a unity at all; yet the noble Italy is actually one; Italy produced its Dante; Italy can speak! The Czar of all the Russias, he is strong, with so many bayonets, Cossacks, and cannons; and does a great feat in keeping such a tract of earth politically together; but he cannot yet speak. Something great in him, but it is a dumb greatness. He has had no voice of genius to be heard of all men and times. He must learn to speak. He is a great dumb monster hitherto. His cannons and Cossacks will all have rusted into nonentity, while that Dante's voice is still audible. The nation that has a Dante is bound together as no dumb Russia can be.

Imaginary Royalties.

In the name of the income tax collector, Mr. Clement Shorter, in The London Sphere, contradicts certain attractive statements in the English edition of The World's Work concerning the large earnings of contemporary authors. Mr. Shorter denies that Mr. Hall Caine made $500,000 with "The Christian," as novel and play, and that the books of Mr. Meredith and Mr. Hardy pay nearly so well as the writer in The World's Work says. He also catches that writer of rose-colored views in an error about Charlotte Brontë, who never received $25,000 for any of her novels, but was paid for the three novels published in her lifetime only $7,500. Mr. Shorter is an authority on all matters pertaining to the Brontës.

Drayton's Poems.

"The Poems of Michael Drayton" is a new tiny volume in Newnes's Pocket Classics. (New York: Imported by Charles Scribner's Sons, $1.25.) The volume contains, of course, only the shorter pieces of the Elizabethan poet, including the odes and lyrics, "Nymphidia," and "The Muses' Elysium." Of course, the "Ballad of Agincourt," the meter of which was adopted by Tennyson for his "Charge of the Light Brigade," has first place. A bibliographical note and glossary will be found useful. There are no textual notes.

English Caricature.

A new volume of the Langham Series of Art Monographs is "The Eighteenth Century in English Caricature," by Selwyn Brinton, M. A., the editor of the series. (New York: Imported by Charles Scribner's Sons, $1.) The illustrations are from plates by Hogarth, Bunbury, Rowlandson, and James Gillray. Mr. Brinton's essay is full of accurate information, and is written in a most agreeable style.

An Appeal for Peace.

Katrina Trask (Mrs. Spencer Trask) will contribute to the June Arena a paper entitled "Rise, Mighty Anglo-Saxons!" in which she appeals to the English-speaking races to unite in the effort to secure lasting peace.

GROVE'S DICTIONARY.

WHEN Grove's "Dictionary of Music and Musicians" first began to appear in parts, in 1879, it was to be "in two volumes"; when the second volume was issued it bore the inscription "in three volumes," and the three had grown to four at the appearance of the third volume, four years after the first was issued. With the completion of the fourth, in 1889, came an appendix, then a few pages of final additions and at last a supplementary index volume. This tale of adventure supplies some of the reason, at least, why Grove's Dictionary, though by far the best work of its kind in English, and in some respects superior at the time of its issue to any other musical dictionary, was ill-balanced and carried out with unequal degrees of excellence. The plan of the work grew with a rapidity that threw its perspective out of true. Furthermore, its extremely English point of view dwelt unduly upon minor Englishmen and upon the records of music in England. A new edition is now publishing by the Macmillan Company, under the editorship of Mr. J. A. Fuller Maitland, a well-known English critic and student, formerly critic of The London Times and one of the contributors to the first edition. The first volume has appeared, extending from A to E, and the work is to be completed in five instead of the original four volumes.

An attempt has been made, says the editor in his preface, to restore the balance between the earlier and later letters of the alphabet that was disturbed by the extension of the scale of the work as it proceeded. Of course additions have been made to represent the changes that have come over the aspect of the musical world since the volumes of the first edition appeared. Many hundreds of names have reached an eminence in the last quarter of a century that made their inclusion necessary, and many new reputations have been made among both creative and executive artists. Standards of archæological research have changed, and investigations have led to new views on many subjects relating to musical history.

All this is in evidence in the new Grove. It is not, the editor avows, a new book. The old arrangement has been kept. A new distribution of space, in juster proportions, has been attempted. Less need, for instance, is felt by the editor for an exhaustive treatment in regard to English musicians since the appearance of more detailed biographical works of reference, in which full justice is done to lesser men. The notable articles by Sir George Grove on Beethoven, Mendelssohn, and Schubert that were the glory of the old edition are retained, with only such corrections and additions as he himself would have made. In general, nothing has been lost of the recognised excellences of the first edition.

But the book, it is clear from the first volume, is still an English book, and the point of view is English; English musicians and the record of music in England still have a place that may seem undue to many outside of England. The revision, in certain cases, does not seem to have been brought down to date so thoroughly as it might have been in the record of deaths and the enumeration of published works. That an encyclopaedic work of this kind, dealing with facts and details of enormous variety and intricacy, extending over centuries, should be free from errors cannot be expected. The procuring of authentic data and the latest facts about musicians of the present time is often beset with singular difficulties. That absolute control should be exercised over the production of scores of different contributors—the first volume is the work of no fewer than 108—is impossible. It would not be difficult to go through the new volume of Grove and make a list of errors and omissions. It is more gratifying to note the excellences that make it unquestionably the most valuable work of the kind in English, and at present superior to any other in any language, considering its encyclopaedic character and the substantial quality of its most important articles.

The list of contributors is still a notable one. Many of those who wrote for the first edition are dead, but their work in general is retained, and corrected and extended as indicated by the use of brackets for the new matter, and often with the initials of the corrector. The list of those who are dead, headed by Sir George Grove himself, includes William Chappell, James W. Davison, Ferdinand Hiller,

A. J. Hipkins, Francis Hueffer, C. F. Pohl, E. F. Rimbault, Dr. Spitta, Sir Arthur Sullivan, A. W. Thayer, and W. S. Rockstro. It will grieve some to observe that this last-named fine old British scholar's use of capital letters, quite as delightful and as incomprehensible as FitzGerald's, has been leveled down to the ordinary practice of the modern printing office.

There was much to do to remedy insufficient treatment of great men in the first edition. The article on Bach has been extended by matter added in the appendix by Dr. Philipp Spitta, the chief authority on the subject. Mr. Macsewski wrote the original article, and it is hardly adequate, even in its present form. Bach ought to have had as well considered a critical discussion as Sir George's own of Beethoven and Schubert—or perhaps even of Mendelssohn. The additional data as to the extension of Bach's music in England do not meet the necessity for a more thoroughgoing treatment. The meagre three columns originally given to Chopin have grown to eleven, both being the work of Edward Dannreuther, recently added to the list of deceased contributors. The inadequate paragraph on Bizet has given place to a more comprehensive notice, though even that does not do entire justice to the genius of the man. Berlioz receives more circumstantial treatment from Mr. W. H. Hadow, whose sympathy with the French pioneer is well known; his essay, critical in spirit and skilful in literary expression, has three times the space of the article it supersedes. A new article on Brahms, by the editor, Mr. Fuller Maitland, was much needed, and does justice to the composer, whose position has gained a more commanding preeminence in the perspective of twenty-five years and is destined to gain still more. Dvorak only succeeded in getting into a footnote in the first edition. Now, of course, his place is worthily recognized, and again by Mr. Fuller Maitland. On the other hand, that colorless English replica of Mendelssohn, Sir William Sterndale Bennett, still has nine columns, though his music, even in England, has practically passed into the limbo of oblivion.

Of the new reputations that are recognized by entirely new entries, the most important is that of Elgar. The Russian school has emerged beyond the boundaries of Russia to such prominence as calls for discussion of Balakhieff, Borodin, Dargomijski. Cui had already gained a mention in the appendix. The younger Frenchmen, too, claim a place—Bruneau perhaps rather a disproportionate one in his four columns, and beside him Charpentier, Chausson, Chévillard, Duparc, and Debussy. No doubt the reserve with which these men, especially Debussy, are treated will displease their ardent admirers, but they have not yet proved that they have made a lasting impression on the art, and it is no part of the function of a dictionary to make propaganda. The mysterious prophecies about Botto's operas, "Nerone" and "Orestiade," that appeared in the appendix are repeated in the new volume—it is still intimated that they may be "among the greatest musical dramas of the day," and Signor Mazzucato announces that "Nerone" is beyond question "a magnificent literary work," but the public has not yet been given any reason to believe that they even exist.

Several technical subjects receive treatment that was omitted before, as "Acoustics" and "Automatic Appliances." An intelligent discussion of counterpoint from a modern point of view is substituted for the mere definitions that came under that heading previously. A similar enlargement might profitably have been made of the article on "Chamber Music," which touches an extremely important and interesting phase of musical history never yet, apparently, adequately developed by any musical writer in accordance with its importance.

One of the features of the revision is the greater attention paid to American music and musicians. The names of a number of American composers appear with a discussion of their works, and there is a fuller account of some of the most important concert institutions with their records. A feature of the American edition of the dictionary is the inclusion of a number of full-page portraits. The choice of subjects is appropriate, but it cannot be said that the portraits themselves are always successful as works of art.

New Edition of "R. L. S."

Charles Scribner's Sons are publishing this week the first three volumes of the new biographical edition of the works of Robert Louis Stevenson, each volume with a biographical note by Mrs. Stevenson. They are: "Kidnapped," "David Balfour," and "The New Arabian Nights."

"Kidnapped," Mrs. Stevenson writes in the preface, "was suggested after her husband stopped collaborating with W. E. Henley in writing plays. Stevenson and his wife were looking over some old records of trials in the Old Bailey during 1700. Among the papers was one describing the trial of James Stewart for the murder of a man, which Stevenson "read with avidity." He used much of the story in the record for "Kidnapped," besides taking out the character of Alan Breck.

"David Balfour," the sequel to "Kidnapped," was written in very "distracting circumstances." Mrs. Stevenson says:

> With the natives on the verge of war, and amid the most kaleidoscopic political changes, uncertain as to what moment his personal liberty might be restrained, his every action misconstrued and resented by the white inhabitants of the island, the excitement and fatigue of my husband's daily life might have seemed enough for any one man to endure without the additional strain of literary work.

The stories in "New Arabian Nights," we are told, first appeared in a journal called "London," edited by W. E. Henley, which had been launched by Robert Glasgow Brown at the time when Stevenson and his cousin, Robert Alan Stevenson, "a genius so unusual," as Mrs. Stevenson calls him, had formed the plots of "The Suicide Club," "The Rajah's Diamond," "The Hansom Cab," "The Dynamiter," and "Prince Otto." The tales appeared in the London magazine, together with various pieces of verse by Henley and Stevenson, but the journal was doomed to failure. "The New Arabian Nights," writes Mrs. Stevenson, for some five or six years "lay hidden between the covers of the defunct journal. Mr. Keegan Paul advised against their republication, thinking the tales too fantastic, and likely to injure the reputation of their author. There was not a single story, poem, article, or novel written by my husband that was not similarly condemned by some one of his friends and literary advisers."

Fairy Tales for Children.

The fairy tale belongs to the child and ought always to be within his reach, not only because it is his special literary form and his nature craves it, but because it is one of the most vital of the earliest [illegible] of the imagination, none of these books is really comprehensible.

It is thus that Hamilton Wright Mabie writes in the introduction to "Fairy Tales Every Child Should Know," which Doubleday, Page & Co. are bringing out.

"A Fisher of Men."

Under this title Edwin S. Gorham is publishing an interpretation, by the Rev. Hamilton Schuyler of Princeton, N. J., of the life and labors of Churchill Satterlee, priest and missionary. The author writes in his opening chapter:

> There are, broadly speaking, three types of men whose lives may be said to be worth recording. First, those whose superior mental endowments have won for them an unique place in the popular imagination; second, those who, while lacking this distinction, have played important parts upon a wide stage of human affairs; third, those who, while neither eminent intellectually nor conspicuous because of their connection with great events, have yet possessed personalities which have fascinated and inspired others solely by their intrinsic beauty and worth. To this last class belongs the man with whom this book is concerned.

Satterlee was the only son of the first Bishop of Washington, Henry Yates Satterlee. He was born in New Hamburg, on the east bank of the Hudson. He worked among the mountain folk of North Carolina, Tennessee, and Virginia, and, according to the present writer, his personality was felt everywhere—the illiterate folk regularly attended his services, listened to his advice, and did what they could to gain praise from him. Mr. Satterlee died of heart disease, his death having been hastened by an attack of the grip. The end came on the morning of Feb. 16, 1903, in Augusta, Ga., where he and his family had gone for rest. The final chapter in the book contains letters expressing opinions and impressions of Satterlee's work and influence.

The Training of a Boy.

Eustace Miles's new book, "A Boy's Control of Self-Expression," aims to "get the boy to realize his responsibilities, not morbidly, but sensibly."

> Let us compare his body and mind, as Shakespeare does, to a garden. In that garden a boy can plant at will good plants or bad weeds. The weeds will almost seem to plant themselves. The plants he alone can plant, at least after he has reached a certain age. * * * In other words, let him turn his mind away from the weeds of thought and to attractive and useful occupations.

The "ideal" which the author tries to describe is "purity"—purity in thought. It has been his plan to keep in sight of a single idea, and that is:

> Fairly considering all that I know now, what training of body and mind should I choose if I were allowed to become a boy again, and if I wanted to prevent the most serious mistakes as easily as possible and with as little attention to them as possible, so as to avoid morbidness or crankiness or priggishness?

The introductory chapters are written chiefly for those who have the care of boys, and give some hints and suggestions for the guardian. These are followed by chapters on "Physical and External Helps" toward self-control, mental helps; and the book closes with some general remarks, the "opinion of a mother," a letter to a boy, "A Defense of Latin—Rightly Taught," and "A Theory About Excessive Blood Pressure." The volume has illustrations and diagrams. It bears the imprint of E. P. Dutton & Co.

Selections from Henry van Dyke.

This little volume containing selections from the writings of Dr. van Dyke (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons: The Van Dyke Book, 50 cents) includes extracts from Dr. van Dyke's most popular works. Besides an appreciative biographical sketch by his daughter and an introduction by Mr. Edwin Mims there are, under a grouping called "Memories and Pictures," extracts from his essays on "Little Rivers," "The Open Fire," &c. Here one wanders with him, rod in hand, along the trout streams, or, before the camp fire, stretches full length to listen to the Doctor's genial words. Part II., including "Songs Out-of-Doors," has a title suggestive enough of its contents. Part III. contains five characteristic stories, "A Friend of Justice," "The Thrilling Moment," "The Keeper of the Light," "A Handful of Clay," and "The First Christmas Tree," and Part IV., under "Bits of Blue Sky Philosophy," pleads in prose and verse for a truer and better life.

Esther and Lucia Chamberlain.

The authors of "Mrs. Essington," the romance of a house party, which the Century Company will publish May 18, are natives of California, dividing their time between their early home and New York City. In 1900 Esther Chamberlain opened a studio in this city, where she provided illustrative advertising matter. Miss Lucia has frequently been contributing short stories and verse to the magazines. "The Blue Moon," a novelette, was the first joint work of the sisters. "Mrs. Essington" was written during the winter of 1903 and 1904, while the authors were traveling in the West. It was begun in California and finished in Arizona in a Moqui Indian village. The scenes are laid at Monterey, a coast resort near San Francisco. Henry Hutt has made half a dozen full-page illustrations.

THE PUBLISHER'S POINT OF VIEW.

This week we publish a labor novel that is really interesting; it is called The Walking Delegate and is by Mr. Leroy Scott. If you are interested in the workingman's side you will be especially glad to read this book. Illustrated, $1.50.

Andrew Carnegie has been working for nearly a year on The Life of James Watt; it is now complete, and published to-day. A most interesting and original work, that has much of Mr. Carnegie's personality interwoven in the story of this great engineer, whom he so greatly admires. $1.40 net. (Postage 14 cents.)

Also, this week we issue Part II of The Dog Book, which has already proven to be the most successful serial book we have ever issued. The two parts now ready—eight parts in all—will be sent for $2.20.

In England, books published in parts are most successful. The scheme has many advantages. The reader can have and enjoy the book as it appears, and pay in small sums. The publication of The Poultry Book in this way was successful, and we hope much from the increasing popularity of the plan.

Erroneous Statements in Capt. Battine's "Crisis of the Confederacy."

New York Times Book Review:

THE recent review of Capt. Cecil Battine's book, "The Crisis of the Confederacy," was most interesting. While the book in question may be entertaining and successful as a literary venture, it can scarcely be of any value to the "military student," owing to some of the glaringly erroneous statements which it contains. The author not only lacks much correct information, but also the cold-blooded impartiality of the true historian, as his decided leaning toward the Confederate cause abundantly proves.

Capt. Battine of the King's Hussars says that Gen. Grant "from the start commanded troops superior in number, resources, and morale, and except at Shiloh, (where he was defeated,) was opposed to Generals of moderate capacity." Southern apologists never fail to underestimate the Southern forces and to exaggerate those of the North. While the Federal Army was probably one-third greater in actual numbers, its fighting strength was about equal to that of the Confederate Army. From the beginning to the end of the war the Federal commanders were handicapped by the fact that they were operating in a strange and hostile part of the country, and were obliged to detail whole brigades to guard their lines of supplies, which reduced their fighting strength by many thousands. It also appears that the Confederates had a peculiar method of counting their men. Only those bearing arms and serving the artillery were included. In the Federal Army every man was counted. On Pages 290 and 291, Volume II., "Personal Memoirs of U. S. Grant," I find the following statement:

"In estimating our strength every enlisted man and every commissioned officer present is included, no matter how employed; in bands, sick in field hospitals, hospital attendants, company cooks, and all. Operating in an enemy's country, and being supplied always from a distant base, large detachments had at all times to be sent from the front, not only to guard the base of supplies and the roads to it, but all the roads leading to our flanks and rear. * * * The manner of estimating numbers in the two armies differs materially. In the Confederate Army often only bayonets are taken into account, never, I believe, do they estimate more than are handling the guns of the artillery and armed with muskets or carbines. * * * Officers and details of enlisted men are not included. In the Northern armies the estimate is most liberal, taking in all connected with the army and drawing pay. He [Lee] was on the defensive. * * * The citizens were all friendly to him and his cause, and could and did furnish him with accurate reports of our every move. Rear guards were not necessary for him, and having always a railroad at his back large wagon trains were not required. All circumstances considered, we did not have any advantage in numbers."

According to the foregoing statement, the Confederates must have had thousands of men who were not counted, which accounts in a measure for the apparent difference in numerical strength between the two armies. I don't believe that the "morale" of the Federal Army was superior to that of the Confederate Army, as claimed by Capt. Battine, especially in the early part of the war. In speaking of the Federal troops at Shiloh, Gen. Grant says:

"Three of the five divisions were entirely raw, and many of the men had only received their arms on the way from their States to the field. Many of them had arrived but a day or two before and were hardly able to load their muskets according to the manual. Their officers were equally ignorant of their duties. Under these circumstances it is not astonishing that many of the regiments broke at the first fire. * * * Better troops never went upon a battlefield than many of these officers and men afterward proved themselves to be, who fled panic-stricken at the first whistle of bullets and shell at Shiloh."

Capt. Battine is the first man I have ever heard say that the Federals were "defeated" at Shiloh. On that memorable Sunday morning, the 6th of April, 1862, when 40,000 Confederates suddenly burst upon the Federals, 33,000 strong, and drove them from their encampment back toward the Tennessee River, it was only a temporary success. They were checked at nightfall, and had failed to crush their enemy, as they confidently expected. Again I refer to the "Personal Memoirs of U. S. Grant," in which he says: "There was in fact no hour during the day when I doubted the eventual defeat of the enemy. * * * It was a case of Southern dash against Northern pluck and endurance. * * * So confident was I before firing had ceased or the 6th that the next day would bring victory to our arms, if we could only take the initiative, that I visited each division commander in person before any reinforcements reached the field." After speaking of the position of his troops on the following morning, Gen. Grant continues: "In a very short time the battle became general all along the line. This day everything was favorable to the Union side. We had now become the attacking party. The enemy was driven back all day, as we had been the day before, until finally he made a [illegible] * * * The result was a Union victory that gave the men who achieved it great confidence in themselves ever after."

According to James Grant Wilson, "The ground remained in the hands of Grant, and the object of the attack was attained." U. K. Adams, in his article "Confederate States," speaks of the Confederates being in "full retreat" at Shiloh. William Cullen Bryant says: "At last Beauregard ordered a retreat. 'Don't let this be converted into a rout,' he said to Breckinridge, who commanded the rear guard." Gen. Robert Edward Lee was not at Shiloh, and is evidently classed with the Generals of "moderate capacity" by Capt. Battine. Gen. Lee was not only the idol of the South, but much admired at the North for his genius as a General. He possessed all the qualities for success as a soldier, and easily won the enthusiasm of his troops. His presence on the field of battle was equal to a reinforcement of thousands of men to his army. Equally great in tactics and strategy, he was a complete master of the art of war. It strikes me that before attempting to write American history, a foreigner should correctly inform himself as to all the historical facts connected with his theme; otherwise his work will have no value.

Mulatto and Its Meaning.

New York Times Book Review:

1. Hence the word "mulatto," when referred to the non-Caucasian or non-Indian races in America, is rather a descriptive word. It implies the idea associated with the complexion or color of an individual's skin, or a collection of such individuals. By no stretch of the imagination or process of reasoning, when the word "mulatto" is used by the ethnologists, do they mean the offspring of a black person and a white person. It is rather descriptive of a portion of the ten million inhabitants of the United States, and it includes but a very small proportion of our American negroes.

2. The same may be said of the word "blacks," which is a descriptive appellation, the same as the word "white," neither of which, as a rule, is ever capitalized. The evident conception in the mind of the author is a race of people who are non-Caucasians, living in America, presumably negroes, and it is an imposition upon the English language to use the word in a sense other than what it properly signifies, namely, the darkest of all color. While the historian Froude and a few other writers have used the word to designate a black-skinned person, it does not accurately express the idea which it is intended to comprehend, namely, the non-Caucasian English-speaking people of America, some of whom are mulattoes, quadroons, and octoroons, who are regarded as non-Caucasian, and are not comprehended in the term "blacks."

3. The word "colored," when used to imply or include the negro race in the United States or British colonies, is also open to objection. Modern ethnologists do not use the word to designate a race of people. Grant that the word does mean a non-Caucasian or a dark-skinned race, it may include the Hindustanis of India, Turks, Japanese, Chinese, as well as the ten million of non-Caucasian English-speaking peoples of this hemisphere who may be "wholly or in part of African descent." The Malay of the Philippine Islands is as much colored as the "colored man" in America, yet the thousands of Japanese, Chinese, and other dark-skinned colored people are not comprehended in the term colored. The word, while it is a convenient term to use, and expresses certain ideas, is nevertheless scientifically inaccurate because it is not a definite ethnological term expressive of definite racial characteristics and affinities.

4. Another word which has been largely used to express ideas identified with the "colored people in America," which has been used to include in its meaning the non-Anglo-Saxon element of the American population, not including the aboriginal inhabitants, is the word "African." As an ethnological term this word has not retained its original significance, which, according to its generally accepted meaning, signifies a native or inhabitant of Africa, a black man, a negro. Archbishop Trench in his little book "On the Study of Words" tells us that there is a good deal of knowledge conveyed by the history of words, and that the meaning of words, like the fashions of society, are constantly undergoing changes. So also with this word "African." In the Cape of Good Hope, the erstwhile Orange Free State, and the South African Republic are thousands and thousands of white people who were born, reared, and educated, and who reside in those places. They are inhabitants of Africa. The late Paul Kruger, ex-President Steyn, and Gen. Croaje are native inhabitants of Africa. They were [illegible] of other white people, who therefore beside Africans. So that a white African [illegible] is not an [illegible] citizen.

5. A "Negroid" is another term which, according to the Standard Dictionary, is defined as "resembling negroes," but the term does not include in its interpretation the negroes of the United States of America. A resemblance to is not identical with a race. When the word was first used by Prof. Huxley, and later by our own Dr. Brinton and other Americans, they referred to certain ethnic groups inhabiting the Polynesian and Philippine Islands, and the word is therefore meant to include the dark-skinned Aryans of the United States.

6. Prof. Smith also uses the term "Afro-American" to designate the non-Caucasian element of this country. It means, according to the Standard Dictionary, an American of African descent. This term is ambiguous because there are thousands and colonies of white people in America, who are settling in America, from the Boer republics. They are just as much Afro-American as the "colored people" among whom they are now settling. Again we have the anomaly of a "white African" living in America.

The only term, then, which the ethnologist and linguist may use, having a clear and definite racial meaning, implying prognathous maxillaries, a prominent zygomatic arch, a dolichocephalic skull, and all the other distinguishing characteristics of the race, which include all shades, all grades of racial affinities and racial singularities, a word which differentiates itself from all other words, which is not indefinite or ambiguous in its terminology, a word that will include all the non-Caucasians in America and the world, is the one simple, little word "negro." Literary Tears.

New York Times Book Review:

Surely, confessions of the quiet tears we have shed in our solitude over books would be most searching psychological testimony, did we but tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth on the subject. But, as might be expected, so far the correspondents have all agreed on almost the same books and scenes, and those have all been too obviously meant for tears. I imagine I have something new to say on the subject, and would like above all to hear if any one else can add to my experience, and perhaps explain it. Be it noted at the outset that, although my sympathy is warmly with Russia in the present war, that conflict did not, consciously at least, enter my mind in connection with the following:

The last thing in a book that made my eyes fill with tears was a description of a cavalry parade on the Field of Mars in St. Petersburg, in Alexander Veretschagin's "At Home and in War." No author could aim less at sensational effects; no author could tell his tale more simply, even dryly. He was then in a military school, and it was the lines of those fresh youths, in gay uniforms, but on rather indifferent chargers, that he particularly mentioned. It was just at the words "waving white plumes" that my heart swelled so that I was compelled to stop my reading for a long time. I think that was the effect, not so much of what I read as of the association of ideas it called forth. In the space of a second I saw those lines charging in battle, saw them rushing on, with fierce, set faces, before so rosy, young, and smiling; saw them clashing against the enemy with horrid, barbaric yells, or deadly, cruel silence, more terrible still; and the next moment, with horrid clash and din, crushed, bloody, torn, tumbled; and then stark and dead.

The picture in the book had exactly the same effect on me as the strains of Sousa's march, "Under the Double Eagle"; that depicts the Field of Mars in every note, the festal array of a cavalry parade, sunshine, and youth. But by both is also suggested to me that fine scene in Tolstoy's "War and Peace," where Nikolai Rostof, on staff duty at Austerlitz, is crossing a field between the lines of the enemy and his own army, and the heavy Cavalier Guards come charging on, to cross his path, he barely escaping being crushed with his small horse under their onward rush toward the enemy; and seeing them afterward all but annihilated. They suggest the one animated line in Von Moltke's "Franco-German War," where he describes the Hanoverian Uhlans, at Mars-la-Tour, being unexpectedly supported by a squadron of the Dragoon Guards, who "on their return from a reconnaissance, plunging over fences and ditches, fell upon" the French lancers in the flank. Also the terrible cavalry mêlées going on there during those four days.

But above all, they both suggest what seems to me the saddest thing in all the world: The beaten soldier, in hiding, alone, after the fierce conflict, his own fierce excitement dead, his cause lost, his comrades lost, his faith lost, for the time at least, in himself and in everything else, in heaven and on earth. Could ever a man more wish himself dead on the battlefield with the others! I can remember or imagine nothing more stirring in literature than the extremely simple account of such a soldier, a tall, fierce French cuirassier, one of the few survivors of Bonnemain's division after the battle of Woerth, in Erckmann-Chatrian's "Plebiscite."

I am haunted by a vague remembrance of a scene very similar, in even simpler and fewer words, in Grote's "History of Greece," almost quoted, I believe, after Thucydides. It mentions a last, lost foot soldier, hiding in a small wood after one of the battles in the Peloponnesian wars, I believe. No historian can well be more unimaginative [illegible] let us say, [illegible] especially when [illegible] Everything [illegible] bound well be more spare of words. But assuredly no history has had more of my literary care. I remember, particularly a graphic description of the battle in the harbor of Syracuse, where the power of the Greeks in Italy was first broken. It wrung my heart. That must be because each author's heart true writing in, though an word expresses such grief. [illegible] suffered for lost Hellas, and an old Greek.

Von Moltke has two more emotional moments for me in his dry book. One where he says, about the surrender at Sedan, "that sorrowful duty was imposed on Gen. von Wimpffen." One supplies the harrowing details leading up to it for the old fire-eater, who had rushed blithely, all the way from Africa—for that! The other is where the author recounts among the trophies taken there "6,000 horses fit for service." One sees vividly those "not fit." And with all my fierce contempt for Napoleon III., I can never read about him at Sedan without intense compassion.

The point I wish to make is that I very seldom respond to efforts on the part of the author to produce tears; but sometimes the very bravest scenes will have that effect, perhaps by way of contrast, but usually by some far-fetched suggestion.

The Demand for Light Fiction.

New York Times Book Review:

In Mr. Allen's letter on fiction of the present day he seems to have waved aside the fact that the trend of modern reading is necessarily influenced by the life and needs of the present-day civilization. He seems to lose sight entirely of the fact that the great mass of the reading public reads to be amused, not instructed. They do not read for study, they have not the time for that, nor the incination, and for that reason we hear of books which are merely light and amusing, without any pretense of style or finish, outselling everything else.

At first glance this is apt to jar one with an appreciative taste for literature, yet, when we give thought to the subject, look at it in the broadest way possible, you cannot fail to see that the public is not to be wholly blamed. They want to be amused, they want to laugh, seldom do they want to cry; they want to pass a few hours that will afterward give them a sense of self-satisfaction, an afterglow of pleasant thought.

There is no objection to this. Why should not the man, weary with the routine of office work, want to be amused in his few hours of leisure after dinner? So, for example, he picks up "Beverly of Graustark." Why? Because he wants something pleasant, something that will hold the interest of a tired brain without any effort. He doesn't want to think at all. He is not a student of literature, and he does not realise that when he closes the book he will have derived no lasting benefit from it whatsoever. But this he has gotten: a few minutes' relief from strenuous thinking, a faint remembrance afterward of pretty pictures and agreeable nothingness. It is an effortless impression, and eminently satisfactory. Of course you must remember that I am speaking of the mass of readers, the omnivorous readers. With this fact staring the novelists of our country in the face, it is rather discouraging to those who are conscientiously trying to do good, lasting work. Yet, if they will meet this difficulty and grapple with it, they can bring something at least out of chaos.

There is one thing particularly that the good writers must soon become aware of, the realization that the modern story must be treated in a sufficiently light way to be acceptable to the mass of readers. This statement proves itself in every list of the best-selling books. Now, if our good writers, those who know how to make their work beautiful, both in a literary and artistic way, will accept this evident fact, the effect will be that gradually the reading public will be brought back to the paths of good literature.

For instance, let Mr. Allen write a story about a young journalist who meets a Princess who is traveling incognito. Let the young man follow her to her chateau on the Loire and finally save her from some horrible plot and marry her in the end, of course. Cannot you at once get the effect of Mr. Allen's beautiful descriptions of the chateau, his delicate drawing of the Princess, the poetic and varying shades of the passing scenes? Then any one reading these other royalty stories would be able to see the difference at once, but until then their eyes are going to remain tightly closed. The cry of the world to-day is for color and picturesqueness. They must have it, and if it cannot be gotten in good literature, they will take in cheap stuff. People do not want to see a reflection of themselves—they want something prettier. Why not give it to them? And give it to them in such a manner that gradually they will come to the stage of opening their eyes and becoming discerning.

We cannot blame the publishers for getting up exquisite little books of tommyrot. They are in demand. They sell. People will have them. So it is up to the modern novelist, the sincere, serious, hard-working novelist, to do dainty, frothy, yet beneath all, literary work, and by meeting this demand stop the present tendency.

"Nothing Doing."

New York Times Book Review:

It is permissible, is it not, to use a slang expression, if it is dignified by age? In the "Creevy Papers," edited by Sir Herbert Maxwell, there is a letter written to Thomas Creevy by a Dr. Currie, dated May 1, 1805. He is referring to Napoleon: "We are all [illegible] about the spun-out [illegible] Everything [illegible] war, because it is just the most absurd thing in creation." Now, if that other dignified and classic and convenient expression, "It's up to you," has been said by some one over a hundred years ago, I shall be overjoyed to hear of it.

Obscure Literary Allusions.

New York Times Book Review:

In THE REVIEW of April 29 a correspondent makes some comments on my letter concerning obscure literary allusions. He says he wonders if I ever read "Paradise Lost." That is precisely my case with regard to him.

The story about the derivation of the name of Antwerp he gives is such a well-known one that it is to be found even in Baedeker's Guide. I read it in Belgium twenty years ago. It is not the "ludicrous" one that Lowell had in mind when he wrote. And as to Gano, in the "Song of Roland," he is always Ganelon. What, then, was the object of applying an unusual form of his name to a Massachusetts Yankee except it was to mystify the reader?

The same may be said about his allusion to the wight that was tarred and feathered. The Roman's question "Quid ad Mercuriam?" can well be asked here.

Isaac D'Israeli has a chapter on "Professors of Obscurity" that is worth the reading, and Lowell himself said that there was "nothing so simple but that Uncial letters and the style of Diphilus the Labyrinth could obscure."

In closing what I have to say for good and all I would not like to appear as one who underestimates Mr. Lowell. There is no more dignified figure than he in our literature; and as for the man I can say of him what he said of Edmund Spenser: "He was so nobly pure; so far removed in every way from our common ancestor who swung by his tail from the limb of a tree"; but he belonged, as the editor of THE BOOK REVIEW says, to a race of authors to whom recondite allusions were the very breath of literary life.

Guy Wetmore Carryl's Poems.

New York Times Book Review:

The editors of "The Garden of Years and Other Poems," a small volume of verse by the late Guy Wetmore Carryl, published about six months after his death, have just been informed that it contains, under the title of "A Fragment," on Page 125, part of a poem called "Abba Father," by William Canton, published by Stone & Kimball in 1896, in a collection of verse called "W. V.—Her Book."

Before attempting to conjecture how this mortifying blunder occurred, it seems only fair to the editors to state that the book was made up under the most extraordinary difficulties. The only real guide as to what the author intended it to contain was an uncompleted table of contents, the manuscripts having been mutilated, scattered, and in some instances entirely destroyed, by the fire which occurred at his Swampscott house a few days before the development of his fatal illness. It was with infinite difficulty and pains that, by putting together scattered fragments and searching through files of magazines for several years back, the poems named in the rough draft of the table of contents were got together; and the material seeming insufficient in quantity, some four or five additional poems were chosen from the confused collection saved from the fire, consisting of unpublished poems and cuttings pregerved in scrapbooks. Among these was the copy of the lines referred to, dated, but unsigned, and without a title. The only explanation of its presence there is that it was probably a "note" of lines to be quoted, made in the earlier days of his reviewing work for the magazines.

The editors, in thus endeavoring to do justice to the young writer who has passed away, beg to apologize for their blunder to the author of the lines, to his publishers, and to the reading public.

Anne Hyde's Marriage.

New York Times Book Review:

Emma Carlton's comments on "Serendipity" in THE REVIEW for April 29 are vivacious and interesting reading, but her closing sentence, graceful and suggestive to the fancy as it is, has yet its ineffective point.

Would she have classed among "inadvertent trivialities" the detection of the "unpublished marriage" instanced in the quotation from Walpole if she had remembered that this was the secret marriage of the then heir presumptive to the throne, afterward James II., to Anne Hyde, called "Mrs." Hyde by the courtesy custom of the day, the daughter of a subject whose already paramount influence in the newly established royal Cabinet would be greatly increased by this connection?

Certainly it was with no care-free mind and with no mere recreative interest that Lord Shaftesbury observed the mother's deference and inferred therefrom the marriage that might be so pregnant with results to the whole nation.

About the Oregon Forests.

Mary Hamilton O'Connor, whose interesting story of pluck and adventure in the forests of Oregon, "The 'Vanishing Swede,'" which Robert Grier Cooke is publishing, writes from intimate acquaintance with the scenes she describes. The book is timely on account of the forthcoming Lewis and Clark Exposition in Portland, Oregon.

The story has to do with the discovery of a long-lost silver mine, the "Vanishing Swede," the finding of which was preceded by many adventures, hair-breadth escapes from death by the wild beasts of the forests, and leads up to the happiness of the young brother and sister, who are the principal characters in the story, and of another young couple. The mysterious character is the Leather Hermit, who turns out to be the man who had discovered the silver mine.

A Woman's Revenge.

CONSTANCE TRESCOT. A novel by S. Weir Mitchell. Pp. 384. 12mo. cloth. Century Company. New York.

Every new book of Dr. Mitchell's is eagerly awaited by a large and appreciative circle of his old readers and enthusiastically welcomed by them when it finally appears. Not only does he always have a good story to tell, but he tells it in a way to delight the lovers of a beautiful style. Famous for his characterdrawing, he has a rich store of medical experience from which to choose odd and unusual people. "Constance Trescot" is not a candidate for the fame of the Great American Novel, as many claimed for "Hugh Wynne," but it is a worthy successor of "Characteristics." It will be the more welcome that it never appeared in a serial form.

Constance Trescot has the title rôle and the principal part, but one feels a little as though she had usurped both from her sister, Susan Hood, who, it is easy to see, is the author's favorite character.

Her face had * * * great power of expressing both kindliness and mirth. She was slight, but of admirable figure, and possessed the mysterious gift of grace. For the rest, she was unselfish, seriously religious, and perplexed at times by the comic aspect of things, hardly realising the fact that a ready sense of humor had often been as useful in helping her to endure the lesser trials of existence as the religious faith which she held to with the simple trust of a child. Life presented itself to her in a relentless simplicity, and consisted of things right and things wrong, with oversensitive self-reproach when either seemed too amusing. She was, socially speaking, fearless, and occasionally outspoken to a degree which embarrassed others, but never Susan Hood.

"There are no better judges of men than old maids and sisters-in-law," she tells Major Trescot; "they look down from a heaven of neutrality where there is no giving in marriage." "To the very humorous love comes with difficulty," says Dr. Mitchell. But it is her saving sense of humor that prevents her from sinking under the dull platitudes of her childishly obstinate old uncle, Rufus Hood, who claims that the right of States to secede was based on the undoubted right of individuals to secede from States. It is her solid common sense that rescues her from the incubus of her unreasonably selfish sister Constance.

The book falls naturally into two parts; the first shows us Constance, the wife who loves her husband with a single-minded intensity almost terrifying to witness. She is one of those women, "happily rare," who desires to absorb, so to speak, all of the thoughts and feelings of the one man, and who, as time goes on, becomes jealous of his friends, and even of his work, and, at last, of every hour not given to her.

The second part is a most absorbing psychologic study of Constance, the widow, whose every faculty is bent on making life a hell on earth for the murderer of her husband. Her ingenuity in devising fresh methods of torture for her victim, her strictly rational and cold-blooded avoidance of the dangers of monomania, betray the physician in the author. Another delicate study of the travail and growth of a human soul is the unfortunate villain, Greyhurst, a lovable character at bottom, but forced by the logic of events into a hateful, and finally a villainous and tragic situation.

Mohammed.

G. P. Putnam's Sons will publish the volume by Prof. D. S. Margoliouth, "Mohammed: The Rise of Islam," in the Heroes of the Nations Series, late in June. The author writes in his preface:

The standpoint from which this book is written is suggested by the title of the series. I regard Mohammed as a great man, who solved a political problem of appalling difficulty—the construction of a State and an empire out of the Arab tribes. I have endeavored, in recounting the mode in which he accomplished this, to do justice to his intellectual ability and to observe toward him the respectful attitude which his greatness deserves; but otherwise this book does not aim at being either an apology or an indictment. Indeed, neither sort of work is now required.

Prof. Margoliouth gives, in the course of this preface, a list of some of the best works on the subject, including Sir Walter Raleigh's "Life and Death of Mahomet," Gibbon's work, the books of Wellhausen, G. Weil, Sir William Muir, and others; he has also provided a bibliography and many illustrations and footnotes, both reference and explanatory. To bring his narrative within the proper limits of the series he has eliminated much, and "such incidents as are of little consequence either in themselves or for the development of the story."

Human Character.

"The correlation of physical structure and psychical function postulated by science" is an "assumption," according to Charles J. Whitby, B. A., M. D., Cantab., underlying his "essay" on "The Logic of Human Character," which the Macmillan Company is about to publish. There are chapters on "Psychological Elements"—sensation, emotion, disposition, volition, &c.; "The Logic of Custom"—pride, admiration, habit, awe, respect, &c.; "The Logic of Duty"—observation, desire, conscience, &c.; "The Logic of Action"—energy, courage, tenacity, interest, ability, &c.; "The Logic of Piety"—affection, liberality, self-respect, reverence, prudence, &c.; "The Logic of Freedom"—principle, culture, equity, distinction, &c.; "The Logic of Creation"—impulse, detachment, aspiration, love, wisdom, genius, &c.; with final discussions of "the integration of character" "moral progress and educational methods," "the ideal of volition," and "the power of character." Dr. Whitby, in conclusion, sums up "character" as follows:

Character is the antithesis of dissipation, an economy in life; it is the one and only guarantee that the immense yet subtle forces which constitute individuality shall not be frittered away into lower forms of energy, but permanently assimilated into the living web of progressive human experience.

The Struggle of Life.

Mrs. Ellen H. Richards has added another R to the three which go to form an elementary education. It is Right, and stands for "The Art of Right Living," about which she has written a small volume with that title. (Whitcomb & Barrows, Boston. 50 cents.) It is a book of fifty pages, and treats of the limitations of food, need of exercise, amusement, and work with the effect of will power.

Another small book, also of the essay order, is "The Woman Who Spends: a Study of Her Economic Function," by Bertha June Richardson, with an introduction by Mrs. Richards. (The same publishers. $1.) It is a book of 147 pages, divided into subject chapters, "Sight and Vision," "Vital Needs," "Choice," "Satisfaction," "Responsibility," &c.

It is the shop which chooses what a woman shall buy when she herself does not use wise judgment, and take the best on all occasions in place of the cheap, poorly made, inartistic, and bad-wearing articles. Choice does not depend upon the size of the income, and when women know from a study of life and its demands, both physical and moral, that the poor food, the cheap imitations of all sorts, only make their own struggle for life, as well as the struggle of others, harder, the quality of the goods offered them will be better.

The Church, A. D. 98—461.

The second volume in the Church Universal series, edited by the Rev. W. H. Hutton, is about to be sent out by the Macmillan Company. It deals with "The Church of the Fathers," and is an outline of the history of the Church from A. D. 98 to A. D. 461, by the Rev. Leighton Pullan, M. A. It begins with the death of the last apostle, St. John, and ends with the labors of St. Leo and St. Patrick, who both exercised so profound an influence on Western Christendom.

This is the first volume to appear in the series. Vol. I., on "The Church of the Apostles," is by the Rev. Lonsdale Ragg, and is in active preparation. There will be eight volumes in all, each to be complete in itself. "The Church and the Barbarians" is to be the subject of the editor of the series; Prof. D. J. Medley is writing the book on "The Church and the Empire," Herbert Bruce "The Age of Schism," the Rev. J. P. Whitney "The Reformation," the Rev. W. H. Hutton "The Age of Revolution," and Mr. Pullan "The Church of Modern Days." The aim of the series is to tell, "clearly and accurately, the story of the Church as a divine institution with a continuous life."

Forest and Stream Books.

The Forest and Stream Publishing Company has on its Spring list a volume on "Hunting Without a Gun," by Rowland E. Robinson, the well-known author of the New England dialect stories, "Uncle Lisha's Shop" and "Sam Lovel's Camp." In his new book the blind writer tells of the pleasures of the nature-lover who looks for wild creatures without any harmful intentions.

Some Whittaker Books.

Thomas Whittaker is publishing a small edition of Ugo Bassi's "Sermon in the Hospital," and a revised edition of Dr. James Agar Beet's "Commentary on Romans," and had in active preparation the Bohlen Lectures from 1903, entitled "The Atonement And the Personality of God."

The Tyranny of the Dark

In this powerful novel Hamlin Garland has entered a new and fascinating field—that of the occult. The heroine is a girl—Western, delightful, lovable. The romance of her life, involving her lover, who finally rescues her from this "Tyranny of the Dark" makes this book stand out, a striking departure in modern fiction. It is a strong story in a strange and wonderful setting. Who has not felt this tyranny of the dark and longed for rescue through the force of affection?

The Accomplice

The story of a hotly-contested murder trial, following upon a most mysterious crime. The narrative is told in the words of the foreman of the jury, who chances upon outside evidence during the trial which greatly complicates the situation and eventually precipitates a tremendous climax. The story is a maze of mystery to the very end, and is not without a pretty love tale in its lighter moments.

The Marriage of William Ashe

It is a fine thing to be in at the creation of a great book—to be able to tell your children how Pickwick Papers first came out in green covers, and to recall all the talk when Robert Elsmere was born.

And now here is a new title on a book—a name which your children's sons and daughters will know as they know the every-day things of life. A year ago and it did not exist. Now it belongs—as one critic has put it—"to the books that do not die." Perhaps this is putting it with a little over-emphasis; but if the judgment of critics and reviewers, and the great ones means anything, it means that in The Marriage of William Ashe Mrs. Humphry Ward has written a story that will endure. There is a breadth of sympathy, a delicacy of touch in the great moments of abandonment, a realness which makes the book not so much a picture of life as Life itself.

Fond Adventures

There is more than a bookful in this wonderful new volume of sensuous impressions by Maurice Hewlett. ...ere are four glowing love tales out of the heart of the Middle Ages, each alone long enough for a little book. Since the publication of The Forest Lovers Mr. Hewlett has written nothing so palpitating with the full and splendid life of that virile day.

Sanna

The island of Nantuchet forms an ideal background for romance. Miss Waller, author of The Wood-carver of 'Lympus has employed this charming setting for her new tale. Every one will agree that Sanna is altogether bewitching in her girlish coquetry and charm.

JOHN OF GAUNT.

Mr. Armitage-Smith's Biography of Edward III.'s Fourth Son.*

THERE are probably few names in history which are so familiar but about which less is generally known than that of the subject of the present work. To most persons he is known principally, if not solely, as "Old John of Gaunt, time-honored Lancaster," the character in Shakespeare's "Richard II." The student of English literature may recall that he was Chaucer's Maecenas, the student of church history knows that he defended John Wyclif, and the student of political history remembers vaguely that he attacked the Speaker of the "Good Parliament" and was, in general, hostile to reforms in government. But few people know the really great place that he occupies in the history of the later Middle Ages. The fourth son of Edward III., unquestionably the greatest subject in England and for years its virtual King, titular King of Castile and Leon, progenitor of the Houses of Lancaster and Tudor and ancestor of monarchs in Portugal and Castile, John of Gaunt has had to wait 500 years for the honor of a biography.

John Plantagenet was born in the town of Ghent among his father's aides in 1340, just as the Hundred Years' War was really beginning. In spite of all his territorial titles, posterity was to know him best from the name of his birthplace, and John of "Ghent" in English became John of "Gaunt." At the age of nineteen he married Blanche of Lancaster, a relative of the famous Earl Thomas of the days of Edward II. In 1362 all the Lancastrian estates passed to Blanche, and in her right to Gaunt, who created Second Duke of Lancaster. For the next forty years Gaunt is never long out of public view.

Mr. Armitage-Smith shows that Gaunt's active interest in foreign politics and especially in the politics of the Iberian Peninsula is of earlier date than is commonly supposed. It really began with his participation in the invasion of Castile by his brother, the Black Prince, in 1367. The purpose of this invasion was to drive out the illegitimate and usurping house of Trastamare, which was aided by the King of France, and restore legitimacy in the person of Don Pedro, better known as the "Cruel." Gaunt won some distinction as a divisional commander, but the success of the Black Prince in restoring Pedro was ephemeral, and when he withdrew across the Pyremees to his principality of Aquitaine, the Bastard, Enrique the Magnificent, easily regained the throne of Castile. The natural result of the Prince's alliance with Pedro was to unite Castile under the house of Trastamare more closely with Charles V. of France, who was now to be assisted in the struggle with England by the fleets of Castile. Therefore, when the Hundred Years' War reopened in 1369 England lost the mastery of the seas. The expulsion of Gaunt of the corse of Pedro was perhaps the most important event in his whole career.

It explains his second marriage in 1371 with Constance, the daughter of Pedro and heiress of Castile, the representative of legitimacy, by which he became titular King of Castile and Leon. His first marriage had made him the greatest feudatory in England. His second was the result of his desire to wear a continental crown. Mr. Armitage-Smith believes that as early as 1373, when he led an army to invade France, his ultimate purpose was to turn south and drive the usurpers from Castile. In the invasion of France, Gaunt showed himself to be no strategist, and wore out his army in a futile military promenade. The French persistently refused battle, and Gaunt became convinced of the folly of the whole undertaking, but he did not abandon his Castilian projects.

The military failures increased the dissatisfaction felt in England toward the Government, and Gaunt as an unsuccessful General came in for a large share of it. The work of the Opposition culminated in the "Good Parliament" of 1376. Its work was entirely undone, however, and Gaunt dominated the last Parliament of the reign of Edward III., which was packed in his interest. This Parliament's expression of loyalty to the young Prince Richard shows that Gaunt had no sinister designs on the succession as had been hinted. He always remained true to the principle of legitimism. Still his unpopularity at home continued to grow. His defense of Wyclif in 1377 brought him into conflict with the Bishop of London and with the city, which stood by its Bishop against Gaunt, however much it might sympathize with Wyclif. In 1378 Gaunt tried without success to bring the French and Castilian fleets in the Channel to battle.

The popular hatred of the Duke reached

*JOHN OF GAUNT, King of Castile and Leon, Duke of Aquitaine and Lancaster, Earl of Derby, Lincoln, and Leicester, Seneschal of England. By Sydney Armitage-Smith. New York: Imported by Charles Scribner's Sons. London: Archibald Constable & Co., Limited. 1906. $3.40 net.

Revolt, in 1381, when his Savoy Palace, in London, was wrecked. The mob was intensely loyal to the young King, but heartily detested his uncle. Later on, in the reign of Richard II., hatred of the Court favorites somewhat lessened popular animosity toward the Duke, but from about 1385 on, Lancaster ceases to play a great part in English history and turns again to Castile.

Don Juan, the son of Enrique, had been reigning there since 1379. The house of Trastamara was too firmly established for Gaunt to succeed in winning the crown for himself. The Lancastrian claim to Castile, like the Plantagenet claim to France, failed to take account of the force of awakened nationality and the impossibility of forcing an alien dynasty upon a proud people. The invasion of Castile ended in 1388, when John of Gaunt and his wife, Constance, renounced their claims, and it was agreed that Katharine of Lancaster, their daughter, should marry Enrique, the son of Juan I. By this union the lines of Pedro and of Trastamara were united, and Gaunt's descendants one day ruled over Castile. Another of his daughters had married the King of Portugal.

The last important event in Gaunt's career was his third marriage with Katharine Swynford and the legitimation of their previous offspring, the Beauforts, through whom Henry VII. later traced his origin to the House of Lancaster. In 1399 the Duke died, at the age of fifty-nine, and his estates passed to his eldest son, Henry, who was shortly, as the result of a revolution, to become King of England. The volume concludes with a short sketch of Lancaster's character.

Mr. Armitage-Smith has evidently done a great deal of work and gone through much dreary and uninviting material. He has turned out a book that is at once scholarly and eminently readable. Moreover, his work scarcely runs the risk of being superseded. His will probably long remain the authoritative life of John of Gaunt, and at present it is the only one.

Another Historical Romance.

A PRINCE OF LOVERS. By Sir William Magnay, Author of "The Red Chancellor," &c. Illustrated. Pp. 326. 12mo. Cloth. Boston: Little, Brown & Co. $1.50.

Both statesmen and novel writers have reason to give thanks for the many petty States into which Germany was for so long divided. When a royal Protestant alliance is de rigueur, it seems always possible to draw from these obscure little Courts some Princeling or Princess who is "just the thing," while the romancer is equally fortunate in foraging among them for imaginary royalties to play their parts upon his mimic stage of life. It would be too daring to invent members of those royal families whom we know by heart, but we are so comfortably ignorant of all these tiny "kingdoms, principalities, bishoprics, duchies, landgraviates, and what not" that we are always amazed when the Almanach de alliances "puts in his thumb and pulls out a plum" in the shape of a Battenberg, a Wied, or Mecklenburg-Strelitz, while as for the teller of tales, our geography and history are at his mercy. This particular Prince of lovers hails from Beroldstein, and the recalcitrant party of the other part from Waldavia—States of such a realistic sound that we are grateful to the author for owning his fiction of nomenclature and sparing us geographical research.

With these provinces as a setting, Sir William Magnay has told a spirited story of much intrigue and adventure. True, one sometimes hears the creaking of the machinery, for it is not new. As soon as Ludovic von Bertheim appears upon the scene we recognize an ancient situation, often followed through prose and poem, and we do not need to turn to the last page for him to discover himself.

The route, however, is sufficiently original to make one forgive the familiar features of its start and finish. "The Prince of Lovers" is full of exciting incident and of well-marked characters. It will give much entertainment to those who enjoy a story of adventure, perilous and stirring, interwoven with a pretty romance of a good, old-fashioned kind—all ending just as it ought.

Events of the Past.

Under the title "Bygones Worth Remembering," E. P. Dutton & Co. have in press a two-volume work by George Jacob Holyoke, which is a sort of autobiography, since it deals with certain events in the author's life, people he knew, and other past happenings during his career. He writes in his preface:

> The writer has no interest, no taste, no trust, save in definite, veritable ideas. His aim has been to keep clear of the sin of pretension, which consists in declaring or assuming to be true that which the writer or speaker does not know to be true. What errors negligence of this rule has bred! What misdirection it has perpetuated! Into how many labyrinths, where truth was not to be found, has it led men! What can be more useful or holier than inciting the reader to beware of pretension in speech, in morals, in politics, and in piety? To keep as clear as possible of this universal sin may serve many and mislead none. * * *

cleverly describes the spirit of this book: "Let us try to tolerate each other instead of trying to convert each other."

There are a number of illustrations in the book, including portraits of the writer, Dr. Joseph Parker, Cobden, Cardinal Newman, Mazzini, Garibaldi, Mill, Lewes, Gladstone, Disraeli, Spencer, Cowen, Neale, Collet, Francis W. Newman, Harriet Martineau, Jesse M. W. Marie, and Emilie A. Venturi. Mr. Holyoke is a well-known English journalist, lecturer, and author. Among his publications are "A New Defense of the Ballot," "Sixty Years of an Agitator's Life," "Nature and Origin of Secularism," "Ten Letters, Being the Case Stated Between Co-operators and Private Traders," &c. He was editor of The Reasoner for twenty years.

A Self-Made Man's Wife's Letters.

A SELF-MADE MAN'S WIFE. Her Letters to Her Son. By Charles Eustace Merriman. Illustrated. 12mo. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons.

The self-made man's family still continues to write letters, and the latest output is a collection of those addressed by his wife to their son on his honeymoon. The lady proves herself a match for her husband in admonition and advice, and also matches his sharp wit with no mean one of her own. In her letters she indulges in reminiscences and conjecture, and if they are not as entertaining as those of her husband it is only perhaps because the reader has already consumed two volumes of his epistolary love and is perhaps a trifle satiated. In her letters the mother advises her son on the treatment of his wife, on the retention of his ideals, on the writing of books and the reading of them, on quarreling and making up, on the fallacy and folly of aphorisms, adages, and other epigrammatic usages, on economy in households, and a number of other living topics, and aptly illustrates her points by instances taken from her own domestic experiences or observations of the experiences of her neighbors.

She grows pleasingly garrulous at times and tells little stories apropos of certain questions under discussion, and displays an excellent understanding of the shrewd business sense of her husband. This shrewdness she illustrates as follows:

> I remember, some thirty years ago in the little Missouri town where we began our career, that your father had started a little sausage factory in a region where the people were generally set in their ways and ate their pork products salted. Naturally, the business did not flourish as it has since the American public has grown more careless as to what it eats, and things began to look dismal. One afternoon your father came rushing home very early, all out of breath and with a strange look in his eye.
> "Do you know what day this is, dear?" he asked, trying to conceal his emotion. I thought very hard for a moment, and then it all dawned upon me. I flushed with pleasure.
> "Why—why, it's my birthday!" I exclaimed. "How lovely of you to think of it"—he hadn't for several years—"and to come way home just to tell me so!"
> "Yes," he replied in a queer little tone that I took to be emotion, "and I'm going to give you the house for your very own. See, here is the deed already filled and requiring only your signature. Better get pen and ink as quick as you can, for I've got to hurry back to the shop."
> Full of delight, I did as he wanted, and was just kissing him for a dear, generous husband, when a violent knock sounded at the front door, and then, without ceremony, in walked Sheriff Farmer with a paper in his hand.
> "Sorry, neighbor," he said, with a sickly grin, "but I've jest got to clap an attachment on your house. Don't like to, but duty is duty, and the law is supreme."
> "I'm sorry," returned your father jovially, "but you see, Sam, the house is the property of my wife. Just gave it to her as a little birthday remembrance. Guess you'll have to take your attachment away with you and make pipe lighters of it. Come in again, Sam."
> That day the sausage factory failed, and on the following day the Methodist minister, who was one of the creditors for pork supplied to the business, preached on the text, "Houses and riches are the inheritance of fathers, and a prudent wife is from the Lord."

The Regeneration of Cherry Street.

MISS BILLY. A Neighborhood Story. By Edith Keeler Stokely and Mirian Kent Boyd. Illustrated. 12mo. Boston: Lothrop Publishing Company. $1.50.

This is an ideal story for young girls—sprightly and full of fun, it teaches, nevertheless, a wholesome lesson in the matters of neighborly love and the overcoming of false pride. Miss Billy's father, a minister, lost most of his money in an unfortunate investment. The family was compelled to move out of its comfortable and luxurious home to a rather mean-looking one on Cherry Street, where the neighbors were hard-working but unpolished, and the Street Cleaning Department was unheard of. Miss Billy's sister Beatrice was inclined to grumble about the change, but Miss Billy (her real name was Wilhelmina) and her brother Ted, the irrepressible, took a more hopeful view of their misfortune.

Miss Billy's adventures in cleaning up not only their own dilapidated quarters, but those of the Canarys and the Hennesys on either side, to say nothing of Mr. Schultzsky's, the landlord, which was the dirtiest of all, are told in a cheery, breezy manner. There were really many extenuating reasons why John Thomas Hennesy should have fallen hopelessly in love with her. His first visit to the Lees' house was one of unusual excitement for usually conducted him through the house. Theodora's room especially was the object of his astonished admiration.

"My, it's great! Right in the middle of the room there's a punchin' bag strung—an' he's got dumbbells and boxing gloves, an' there's a case of all kinds of money, some big name she called it, but it means, anyway, collectin' coins. He uses two hair brushes at a time, without any handles to 'em, an' there's a brush for his teeth, an' a brush for his hands, an' one for his nails, an' a thing to polish his nails, an' two brushes for his shoes, an' one for his hat, an' another for his coat!"

Mr. Hennesy's jaw had dropped lower and lower during this recital. Now he closed his mouth with an effort and looked fixedly at his son.

"John Thomas," he said, warningly, "you kape away from that loonytick. Moind me, they're thryin' to take up his moind wid brushes an' punchin' bags, but this kind is cunnin' as foxes an' there'll be mischief in the end. Moind, now, what I say. * * * Wid a brush for his hands, an' a brush for his nails, an' another for his teeth, an' two widout handles for his hair, an' wan for his clo'es, an' two for his shoes, an' another for his hat! Av coorse he is, an' they're takin' up his moind wid brushes. Moind what I say."

Miss Billy works marvels in Cherry Street. She organizes the Street Improvement Club among the youthful Cherryites, she sets the fashion of washing among the children, she softens the heart of the flinty Schultzsky to such an extent that he puts in new drainage all for her—she makes all the girls of her old exclusive set green with envy, and finally she takes typhoid fever and safely passes the crisis to find herself the idol of Cherry Street.

IN JAPAN.

FOLLOWING THE SUN FLAG. A Vain Pursuit Through Manchuria. By John Fox, Jr. 12mo. Pp. 183. New York: Charles Scribner's Sons. $1.25.

Like the rest of the returned correspondents, Mr. John Fox, Jr., famous for his "Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," taken it very hard that the Japanese did not let him see their little war in Manchuria. He is particularly resentful because the Emperor's officers, instead of saying, "No" to the correspondents at once, were Orientally evasive and illusive—let the hope of seeing real war dance ever in front like a will o' the wisp, instead of nipping it in the bud. He complains that quite superfluous lies were told to himself and to Mr. Richard Harding Davis and the rest, and forbidding bayonets actually stuck under their noses. Further, he thinks the Manchurians much more human than the Japanese.

Really, Mr. Fox appears to have had a rough, unprofitable time of it upon the trail of Gen. Oku's army. Certainly he saw no carnage—such as "O" describes in his book. Nevertheless, Mr. Fox has made some very pretty copy out of his four months' stay in Tokio, as readers of Scribner's Magazine know already. It is not copy, to be sure, has anything but the martial blare; it deals at its best, and very daintily, with those darlings of the globe-trotting gallery gods, the Japanese women. Thus, when the author was first shown to his room in a Japanese house:

> I had read of feminine service, and, Saxonlike, (Saxon to Mr. Fox means what white man means to Mr. Kipling.) I was fearsome. * * * Straightway one little maid came in to build a fire, while another swiftly unpacked my bag, laid out evening clothes, and played the part of a blind, automatic valet. Embarrassment, even consciousness, fled like a flash, as it must flee with any man who is not a blackguard or a fool, and I am thinking how foreigners have lied about the women of Japan.

One of the same little maids brought the man whose glorious destination was "the front" his breakfast. She looked upon him with interested eyes and said she wanted to go to Korea, too—"to fight," she explained, with a face that flashed heroic fire.

Mr. Fox speaks prettily and appreciatively, of fine Japanese manners, and makes Dolly dialogues with one he calls the Maid of Miyanoshita. The Maid helped the correspondent learn Japanese from a phrase book—most charming tuition it must have been. Of course, words set down in phrase books are not always the most approved in polite circles.

"That word!" asks Mr. Fox, pointing to one. "Would you use that word to your—well, your mother?"

"No," says the Maid, "I—don't—think—you—would use that word to—your mother."

Then Mr. Fox tells this story about the hot baths, called Big Hell, where bathing is very informal, and a thoroughfare passes close by. He quotes an Englishman:

> "Most extraordinary!" he said. "Do you know, they never minded us at all—not at all. A chap had a camera, and one dear old lady actually stood upright when he was taking a picture. They asked me to come in, and I really think I would, but—gad, you know, there wasn't any room."

There is also a quaint story of Kamura-san, aged 13, who was enslaved to a tea house, and whom Mr. Fox thought to buy and send to school—but the little maid really wanted a husband—and there is a rather valuable pen picture of Gen. Oku. In addition you read anecdotes of a hard-mouthed brute of a horse, of a delightful Manchurian small boy, and of horrid Japanese oaths, extortions, regulations, restrictions, indirections, and deviations from the standard of truth which is (according to Mr. Fox) the Saxon's standard.

BOSTON NOTES.

Reprints of the Works of Gustave Frenssen—A Few Other New Books.

THE novels of Gustav Frenssen, a German author not well known in his own Holstein until 1902, are to be reprinted by Messrs. Dana Estes & Co., and the most important, "Jörn Uhl," is now ready. The first two, "Die Sandgräfin" and "Die Drei Getreuen," made very little stir; but "Jörn Uhl" contains an account of the battle of Gravelotte and also some heterodoxy, and the combination of the two was as irresistible in Germany as it always is in English-speaking countries. In consequence the author's parsonage in Hemme was besieged by visitors and bombarded by letters, and its occupant found himself so severely blamed for certain of his printed utterances that he withdrew from the ministry and returned to his native village of Barlt. His family, although humble, was one of the oldest in the place, and he was well qualified to define the position of such a stock in a remote village preserving its ancient traditions, and much of the interest of "Jörn Uhl" turns upon the relations of two families, one rich and the other poor, living for centuries side by side. The hero is sacrificed to family pride and does not see real happiness until the book nears its close.

The publishers of "Broke of Covenden," Messrs. Herbert B. Turner & Co., are leaving their present quarters on Summer Street and betaking themselves to the Essex Building, opposite the South Station, ascending to a height at which they can have perfect quiet and a wide view of the bay. Their next novel, Mr. George H. Picard's "The Bishop's Niece," will be published Saturday, and, although the comic element is the last that one expects in a story of "mixed marriages," that is to say of matrimonial alliances between Catholic and Protestant, it is really very droll, thanks to the demure eccentricity of his pacific Lordship, the Bishop of Isle Madame, and the contrasted orthodoxy of his brother, a domineering layman. The book neither proposes nor solves problems, but it is a neat piece of literary workmanship.

Mr. Alexander Jessup's "The Charm of Youth," a volume of verses, will appear at the same time.

"The Grapple," Messrs. L. C. Page & Co.'s anonymous novel, will be followed by Mr. Theodore Roberts's "Brothers of Peril," but that can hope for no such good fortune as comes to the former novel, in the coincidence of the Chicago strike with its appearance, for it is a story of old Newfoundland. The illustrations are by Mr. H. C. Edwards and are to be printed in tint. The firm has just received the Tokio edition of a Japanese novel, of which they have secured the copyright, intending to reproduce its various quaintness of decoration, but this book will probably not appear until Autumn.

The Bureau of Equipment has added the name of Dr. Gardner W. Allen's "Our Navy and the Barbary Corsairs," published by Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., to the list approved for the crews' libraries of naval vessels, and the work has been especially commended by Capt. A. T. Mahan because of its fullness of detail in the history of the years immediately preliminary to the war.

The June Atlantic will contain a paper on "The Cause of South American Revolutions," by Mr. G. A. Chamberlain, and a most curious and entertaining article it should be, if at all adequate. Mr. Alvan F. Sanborn will contribute the annual "Letter from Paris," and Mr. W. M. Cavot will define "The Spirit of Japanese Art." Domestic subjects will be treated by Mr. George W. Alger, writing of "Generosity and Corruption," and by Mr. Ray Morris, discoursing on "Federal Rate Regulations," and Mr. W. Garrott Brown's "The Tenth Decade" will be continued. "Village Improvement," by Mr. Frederick Law Olmsted, and Mr. John Burroughs's "Dull Plumage and Gay" will appeal to the beauty lovers.

Considering the vigorous condition of the myth of the Connecticut Blue Laws, in spite of the repeated exposure of its falsity, this gem from "A General History of Connecticut," written by the original Blue Law manufacturer, the Rev. Samuel Peters, is really valuable. It is quoted in Mr. Goodspeed's May catalogue, from Page 110 of the history, and is part of the veracious author's description of the Connecticut River:

"Two hundred miles from the Sound in a narrow of five yards only, formed by two shelving mountains of solid rock, whose base intersect the shoals. Through this strait are forced all the rocks to such a degree of induration that an iron crow floats smoothly down its current—here iron, lead, and cork have one common weight; here, steady as time and harder than marble, the stream passes, irresistible if not swift as lightning."

New Edition of Ranke.

HISTORY OF THE REFORMATION IN GERMANY. By Leopold von Ranke. Translated by Sarah Austin. Cheaper edition, edited by Robert A. Johnson, M. A. 8vo, pp. xvii.-702. Paper label. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co. $1.50 net.

Mrs. Austin's excellent translation of this monumental work only covers the first six volumes, up to the general political situation of 1535. The present edition is very cheap and exceedingly well printed. As a popular narrative it is a splendid stimulus for the study of German on the part of the reader who would peruse the narrative to its very end. As history it stands in the front rank on account of its exhaustiveness and freedom from prejudice, and the edition in which it now appears makes it easily accessible as supplementary reading for the student whose purse is most meagre.

Although Ranke's work is unprejudiced, yet the reader can hardly peruse many pages before realising that it is a Lutheran who writes. In the author's "History of the Popes," which preceded the "History of the Reformation," the same noble impartiality is noted, although the atmosphere is not otherwise than Protestant. His narrative proper is fortified with the citation of innumerable authorities, many of which in the original impart their information in obsolete and provincial forms. On this point it is worth while to note a paragraph from the translator's preface:

"To secure the reader, therefore, against any errors I may have fallen into, and in order that, if important, they may be pointed out, I have placed the original within reach. I hope the translations may give some idea of the light these notes throw on individual as well as national character. We find in them one source of the vigor and animation of the portraits, and the dramatic vivacity of the scenes, with which this history abounds. We see that the author has lived with his heroes, and listened to their own homely and expressive language.

Dr. Rolfe's Shakespeare.

It is now many years since William J. Rolfe, then master of the High School in Cambridge, Mass., tentatively put forth an edition of "The Merchant of Venice," attractively printed and illustrated, and accompanied by an unusually large collection of informing and discriminating notes. It was published in a neat, brick-red volume bearing the imprint of Harper & Brothers. The success of the little book called forth other plays of Shakespeare presented in a similar manner.

At that time the Rolfe Shakespeare was practically alone in its field, which covered both high schools and colleges. Before long, however, imitators appeared. By some his Shakespeare was deemed hardly elementary enough for high school pupils; by others it was thought to be, with its expurgations and always moral notes, hardly sufficiently strong and stimulating meat for college students. Still the Rolfe Shakespeare held its own very well. It was promptly amplified in college classes and curtailed by high school teachers. Naturally, it was easier to amplify than it was to curtail. Dr. Rolfe realized this and determined to give his aid. The revised edition of Rolfe's Shakespeare (forty volumes, square 16mo. New York: American Book Company. 56c. each) is the result.

The more important and popular plays have already appeared in the revised edition, and were noticed in these columns about eight months ago. We now have before us, "Antony and Cleopatra," "Twelfth Night," "Henry VIII.," "Comedy of Errors," "King John," "The Taming of the Shrew," "Much Ado About Nothing," "Richard II.," and "Henry IV.," Parts I. and II. Dr. Rolfe has been constantly in touch with the progress of Shakespearean literature during the last thirty years, and his revised edition not only presents the elementary phases of the latest approved scholarship, but also certain editorial and educational features in form or material which the earlier edition did not possess.

Jamaica in 1905.

The 1905 edition of "The Handbook of Jamaica," (8vo, pp. 572, cloth, marbled interleaves. Kingston: Island of Jamaica: Government Printing Office,) which is the twenty-fifth issue of this annual, edited by Joseph C. Ford and A. A. C. Finlay of the Jamaica Civil Service, has an addition in the shape of an alphabetical list of persons in the public service of the island. Like the editions for several years back, the present one includes some curtailed accounts, because of the limited space, as the editors explain.

The book has a calendar for 1905, astronomical and meteorological notes, [illegible] the royal family, of court since its settlement, descriptions of the Government, the Civil Service, public departments, judicial and legal institutions, Jamaica finances, education in the island, ecclesiastical and religious status, parochial information, maritime notes, public companies, clubs, societies, museums, &c., means of travel and communication, the navy and army, and miscellaneous information on such matters as passports, land surveyors, birds and fish protection, weights and measures, newspapers, rainfall over the island, &c. In an appendix are brief descriptions of the dependencies on Jamaica, a résumé of the year 1904, and a list of appointments and promotions which occurred while the book was being prepared for publication. There are also an exhaustive index to the work and a map of Jamaica.

While the volume has been compiled from official and other authentic records, it is not an official publication. Altogether it is an exhaustive work giving all the information required of the island—historical, statistical, and general.

Books That Sell Well.

Doubleday, Page & Co. are publishing a second edition of Charles L. Goodrich's "First Book of Farming," a week after its appearance, and H. B. Marriott Watson's "Tgrricane Island" in a third edition. This book bears the following inscription: "To Richard Marriott Watson, my keen yet appreciative critic, who pleaded on behalf of the villain, this tale of adventure by sea is dedicated, with love by its author and his."

Henry Holt & Co. have sent to press for the second time "The House of the Black Ring."

Dodd, Mead & Co.'s "Pam," by Baroness Bettina von Hutten, is reported in its fourth edition, and "The Van Suyden Sapphires," by Charles Carey, in the second edition.

QUERIES.

To secure attention in this department every communication must be signed with the full name and address of the inquirer, which will not be published unless the inquirer so desires. Trivial questions will not be heeded. Queries will be answered in the order of their receipt, and as the number received weekly is very large and the pressure upon our columns is always very great, inquirers must always be prepared to await their turn.

E. S. HADLEY, 109 Broadway, New York: "'S. G. W.' asks for a poem of Sam Walter Foss, 'The House by the Side of the Road.' If 'S. G. W.' will send me his (or her) address he will receive a typewritten copy."

R. L. C. WHITE, Nashville, Tenn.: "The poem asked for by Mrs. C. E. Means Agett, 32 beginning 'On Christmas Day in Seventy-six' is the anonymous ballad entitled 'The Battle of Trenton.' It may be found in Eggleston's collection of 'American War Ballads and Lyrics,' Vol. 1, Page 66."

GERTRUDE W. ORVIS, Washington, D. C.: "In Query column this morning Herbert Marx, Portland, Ore., asks for two stanzas which appeared anonymously some years ago. I have them in my scrap book, and send a copy of them herewith."

The verses have been forwarded to our correspondent.

A. D. HIXEN, Victoria Mines, Ontario, Canada: "Please tell me the name of the work of Humboldt's containing descriptions of Mexico, and where a translation can be bought. Also please give me some information about a work called 'Native Races of America,' by Hubert Howe Bancroft, I believe. If that is the correct title, what volumes deal with Mexico, and where can they be bought?"

(1) Humboldt's "Travels in America," in three volumes. It is published in Bohn's libraries, and may be obtained from or through any bookseller. (2) "The History of the Pacific States of North America," is a work in many volumes, compiled by H. H. Bancroft and published by A. L. Bancroft & Co., San Francisco. Volumes 4 to 12 deal with the Mexicans.

R. OSETIN, 183 Beach Avenue, Bronx: "Have any of the short stories by Orzeszkowa, (Orzeszko,) the Polish writer, been translated into English? Above all, has the story, 'A Riddle,' (Zagadka,) been translated?"

Orzeszko's stories have not been translated into English. The New York Public Library has only four or five in circulation, three in Polish, two in German.

Miss Y. B. SMITH, Vineyard Haven, Mass.: "The poem about which 'E. M.,' 476 West One Hundred and Twenty-fourth Street, New York City, inquires is by Nathaniel Cotton and is entitled 'To-morrow.' It may be found in the National Fourth Reader, by Parker & Watson. If 'E. M.' does not obtain the poem elsewhere and will send me his full address I will send him a copy."

WILLIAM H. BURGES, El Paso, Texas: "In your issue of April 1 of the department of Appeals to Readers Frederick J. Sheppard, 17 Pearl Street, Buffalo, N. Y., asks for some one to identify the quotation, 'And it came and faded like a wreath of mist at even,' &c. The lines are incorrectly quoted, but they may be found in a poem by George D. Prentice, formerly of The Louisville Courier-Journal, entitled 'The Closing Year.'"

H. M. WALL, Brooklyn, N. Y.: "Can any reader inform me as to when and where Sir Walter Raleigh's 'History of the World' was first printed? I have an old one printed in the year 1676. Any information would be gratefully accepted."

It was published in London on March 29, 1614. There were two editions in that year, and others followed in 1617, 1621, 1624, 1628, 1634, 1652, (two editions,) 1666, 1671, 1677, 1678, and 1687. It has been reprinted several times since then.

VIVIAN M. HART, Forest Hill, N. J.: "I appeal again to the kindness of your readers for the following: (1) Oscar Wilde's 'Ballad of Reading Gaol'; (2) a poem beginning:

"'We meet 'neath the sounding rafters
And the walls around us are bare.'

"There are a couple of lines in this:

"'The world is a world of lies,
Quaff a cup to the dead already,
And hurrah! for the next who dies.'

"(3) a hymn called 'The Ninety and Nine.' I think this latter is a Methodist hymn, but am not sure."

(1) "The Ballad of Reading Gaol," by Oscar Wilde, may be obtained from or through any bookseller. (2) This is Bartholomew Dowling's "Revelry in India."; it is in Stedman's Victorian Anthology. (3) This is by Miss Elizabeth C. Clephane, and was written about 1868. It first attracted attention during the Moody and Sankey revival of some thirty years ago. It is in many hymn books, especially in those for Sunday schools.

"W. J. D.," Boston, Mass.: "Is it too much to ask for some information about James Nack, who wrote the verses, 'Here She Goes and There She Goes.' He was born in 1807. He is not known to Mr. Stedman, Miss Carolyn Wells, or Bryant's 'Library of Poetry and Song.' Where were the verses published, Knickerbocker's?"

James Nack was born in this city in 1807, and became deaf and dumb while a child. He published "The Legend of the Rock and Other Poems" in 1827, "Earl Rupert and Other Poems," (with a memoir by Prosper M. Wetmore,) in 1839; "The Immortal, a Dramatic Romance, and Other Poems," in 1850; "Poems," 1852. He also translated poems from the Dutch, French, and German; and died in 1879. The poem in question, "The Old Clock," appeared in the second of his publications.

C. A. CROFUTT, 113 Park Street, East Orange, N. J.: "Can you tell me where I can find the selection of prose entitled 'The Emancipation of Man'? I do not know the author."

ELLIS PARKER BUTLER, Pinching, N. Y.: "Replying to your correspondent, W. H. Hayley, I have a copy of 'The Paddleford Papers, or Rumors of the West.' It was written by H. H. Riley and published by Derby & Jackson, New York, 1859. There are original illustrations, but there are none in the volume I possess, nor any vestige of there having been any."

WILLARD H. ALGER, Milford, N. Y.: "'G.' of Smith Falls, Ontario, Canada, will find 'Sow a thought and reap an act,' &c., from the pen of Charles Dana Bowman, D. D., and 'A Friend' will find the words of the old school song 'Rise, Sun, Rise,' in School Songs, published by Bigelow & Main, New York."

"M. C. L.," Plainfield, N. J.: "In reply to 'G.' of Smith's Falls, Canada, I give the following from my notebook. Quoted from David Christie Murray. A very frequent line is to be found in the pages of Charles Reade: 'Sow an act and you reap a habit. Sow a habit and you reap a character. Sow a character and you reap a destiny.' Also from one of Frederick Robertson's sermons: 'Sow an act; reap a habit.'"

EMMA LISCENT CLARK, Bonn, Germany: "'In Tune with the Infinite' ('In Harmonie mit der Unendlichen') is much read and frequently discussed here in Germany at present. Having now and then been asked, as an American, to give some facts about the author's life and previous writings, I appeal to you in my lack of knowledge on the subject."

The author, Ralph Waldo Trine, was born in Illinois in 1866; educated at Knox College, Galesburg, Ill., graduating in 1891, and, as a graduate student, at Johns Hopkins University. He lives at Croton Landing, N. Y., and has written "The Life Books," "What All the World's a-Seeking," "In Tune with the Infinite," and a third volume in preparation, "The Greatest Thing Ever Known," "Every Living Creature," "Character Building," &c. He is much interested in social problems.

M. C. B. HART, 1,476 Madison Avenue, New York City: "Can you give me any information regarding the possible value of a little book I have entitled 'The Affair at Queenstown in the War of 1812,' by Samuel Van Rensselaer, New York, 1826? I think this a scarce piece of Americana. Also the value of O. W. Holmes's 'Boyhood,' Boston, 1878?"

1. This seems to have no particular value. 2. You refer, evidently, to Holmes's "Schoolboy," published in Boston in 1878. A copy was sold two years ago for $4.75, but it contained an autograph letter signed by Dr. Holmes.

Mrs. FELDMAN, 248 East Sixty-first Street, New York City: "I shall be extremely obliged to you for an answer to the following queries: (a) What is the best brief life of Dean Swift? (b) Could you advise me of an English translation of the poems of Alfred de Musset, also those of Theophile Gautier? (c) Would you kindly name a few of the best stories of E. T. W. Hoffman?"

(a.) A good one is in the English Men of Letters Series; Sir Henry Craik's "Life," in two volumes, is longer and better. (b.) There seem to be no complete translations. (c.) These are in a volume of the Knickerbocker Nuggets, entitled "Weird Tales."

S. B. FIELD, Brooklyn, N. Y.: "Is any value attached, and if so how much, to a volume of The New York Magazine or Literary Repository, Vol. 5, 1794, which includes the month of January to December of that year? It is in a good state of preservation."

Three years ago a copy of the "Literary Repository" for 1794 was sold at auction in this city for $36.50. A volume for 1792 brought only $3.25 in 1903.

RAY S. BALL, Huron, Ohio: "What would be the value of a book printed in 1686 entitled 'The Apology of the Church of England and an Epistle to Our Seignior Scipio, a Venetian Gentleman, Concerning the Council of Trent,' printed by T. H. for Richard Chilwell at the Rose and Crown, in St. Paul's Churchyard, 1686?"

This book has no especial value.

HERBERT MARX, Portland, Oregon: "Has any encyclopaedia taken the place of the ninth edition of Britannica?"

1. No encyclopaedia in English published since the completion of the ninth edition of the Britannica has taken its place by reason of the importance of its contributors, and there seems no immediate prospect of a tenth edition of the Britannica. There are various cyclopaedias less important than that, however, which are excellent in their way.

"D.," Nashville, Tenn.: "The line concerning which 'Traveler' inquires in Appeals to Readers of April 15 occurs in a poem entitled 'Mrs. Malaprop,' by Dr. R. L. C. White of this city, which was published in The New York Critic of Sept. 25, 1897, and was afterward included in his privately printed volume of poems, 'Vagous Verse.'"

"D. M.," Post Office Drawer 135 Philadelphia, Penn.: "The correct version of these lines is as follows:

"There is no much bad in the best of us,
And so much good in the worst of us
That it hardly behooves any of us
To talk about the rest of us."

These were written by Gov. Hoch of Kansas and first printed in The Marion (Kan.) Record, of which he was editor. Hoch, it will be remembered, is the great crusader against the Standard Oil Company in Kansas. Curiously enough, some months ago John D. Rockefeller used these lines as a text to a little talk to his Bible class in Cleveland. He stated that he had found them in a New York paper, and was pleased with their humanity.

"K. M.," New York City: "Who published a book with hints to amateur authors, reviewed in your paper about two months ago, price, I think, 25 cents?"

The Macmillan Company, 66 Fifth Avenue. The book, a small pamphlet, is called "Notes for the Guidance of Authors."

M. L. B. WELLS, Portland, Me.: "John R. Livermore, Katonah, N. Y., asks for the authorship of the lines:

"'I fought against the stream, but all in vain.
Let the great river take me to the Main.'

"They are from a poem by Alfred Tennyson, beginning:

"'Ask me no more: the moon may draw the sea.'

"And may be found in any edition of the works by the poet."

Younge Haswell, Jr., places the lines in question as in the last verse of the sixth part of "The Princess."

H. O. JONES, Columbus, O.: "Morris Talbot, Englewood, N. J. (1) The quotation is extraordinary. This is evidently a parody of Byron's 'I had a dream,' &c. The complete verses will be found in Hutchinson's 'Fugitive Poetry,' they being by an anonymous writer.

of FAMOUS PERSONS

(4) Ecce Signum. Does not this originate from the story of Constantine seeing the cross in the sky?"

F. A. PHILBIN, Archbald, Penn.: "In answer to the query of 'F. L. S.' I give three versions in English of the prayer of Mary Queen of Scots. The first is from Swinburne's tragedy, 'Mary Stuart,' and runs as follows:

"'O Lord, my God,
I have trusted in Thee;
O Jesu, my dearest One,
Now set me free.
In prison's oppression,
In sorrow's obsession,
I weary for Thee.
With sighing and crying,
Bowed down in dying,
I adore Thee, I implore Thee, set me free.'

"The following has been attributed to Denis Florence McCarthy, an Irish poet:

"'Lord God, all my hope is
In Thee, only Thee!
O Jesu, my Saviour,
Now liberate me!
In chains that have bound me,
In pains that surround me,
Still longing for Thee;
Here kneeling, appealing,
My misery feeling,
Adoring, imploring,
Oh, liberate me!'

"The third version appeared in The Scottish-American newspaper a few years ago, but the name of the translator is not given. This version is:

"'O Lord! O my God! I have trusted in Thee;
O Jesus! Beloved! deliver Thou me.
A prisoner friendless,
In misery endless,
I weary for Thee.
In sighing, in crying, before Thy throne lying,
Adoring, imploring—deliver Thou me!'"

MRS. A. F. CONANT, Hartford, Conn.: "The name of the author wished by 'M. B. S.,' 45 Cedar Street, New York City, is Thomas Whytehead. The quotation given, which is nearly correct, is the fourth verse of a poem of six verses. I should be very happy to give it entire if desired."

"F. M. B.," New York City: "Your correspondent 'Suburb,' Pelham Manor, N. Y., will find his quotation in Tennyson's 'The Gardener's Daughter' or 'The Pictures.':

"'Not wholly in the busy world, nor quite Beyond it, blooms the garden that I love.'"

X.: "Marion J. Manley, Junction City, Kan., will find the story 'The Fullness of Life' in Scribner's Magazine for December, 1893. It is by Edith Wharton."

MISS EDITH HICKLEY, New York City: "In answer to Wallace H. Hemmiston, New Haven, Conn., the verses beginning:

"'I have a friend so precious,
So very dear to me,' were written by Mrs. Shorey and put to music by George C. Stebbins. See 'Northfield Hymnal,' used during Summer Conference of 1902 at East Northfield, Mass."

Appeals to Readers.

MARTIN S. MEARA, Rochester, N. Y.: "Is it known who wrote this verse found in an old volume belonging to some college:

"'This book Belinda's is, and she
Herein hath shown her love for me.
May no rude, wresting hand, I pray,
Steal book, or her dear love, away.'"

"POUGHKEEPSIE," 244 Church Street, Poughkeepsie, N. Y.: "In which one of Charles Reade's books does the following statement occur: 'To accept, without an adequate solution, an undeniable fact is credulity in one of its worst forms'?"

C. C. FURGUSON, 229 East Twenty-first Street, New York City: "Can any one tell me where I can secure copies of any old songs regarding old New York; that is, songs published seventy-five or one hundred years ago with local color?"

VIVIAN M. HART, Forest Hill, N. J.: "Where can I find a poem on evolution beginning:

"'Twas and I in shadowland ten thousand years ago'?"

Promising Stories.

THE TROLL GARDEN. By Willa Sibert Cather. 12mo. New York: McClure, Phillips & Co.

Miss Cather takes the title of her book from Charles Kingsley: "A fairy palace with a fairy garden; . . . inside the trolls dwell, . . . working at their magic forges, making and making always things rare and strange."

In this collection of seven stories the author has shown a great deal of deep feeling and real ability, but many of the stories are too ambitious, and seem to be more the work of promise than of fulfillment. One wishes, while reading them, that Miss Cather would eschew the complex psychological attitude which she so frequently displays, and would stick to the simpler and more sincere.

"Flavia and Her Artists," looking up to ridicule that senseless tendency to genius which obliterates entirely any appreciation for real worth which has not already been accepted by the world, is perhaps the best story in the collection, although the simple pathos of "The Sculptor's Funeral" gives emphasis to the belief that Miss Cather would show wisest judgment in choice of simple subjects. There is something about "The Garden Lodge" which rings shallow, in spite of the pathos in which it is enveloped, and the same might be said of "A Death in the Desert." Nevertheless, the little book contains some excellent work between its covers, and is well worth while if only as an olive branch of promise.

The June World's Work.

Perceval Gibbon will have another article about Russia in this number, dealing with the religion in the land of the Czar, entitled "The Church's Plight in Russia," in which this well-known English writer will show how tight is the hold of the priests on the superstitious folk. There will also be a paper on "Modern Cloning of the Greek Drama," by A. Gordon Smith, English, with "Japan's Cloning of the Russian Drama," by Sakae Shimada, Japanese, as companion piece. Ray Stannard Baker will have the second paper on "The Railroads on Trial," dealing with the Chicago & Alton case, and Frederic C. Howe will have a paper on the municipal ownership movement in Cleveland, which will be followed by a paper by Mayor Dunne of Chicago, will have a statement of his aims and methods in establishing municipal ownership. The articles will be illustrated.

Scotch Reformation Hero.

John Knox, by universal acknowledgment, is the hero of the Scottish Reformation. In the final revolt of Scotland against Rome, as well as in the establishment, organization, and consolidation of the Reformed Church, his influence was paramount and his service unique. Not only, however, does an important share in the accomplishment of the work belong to his immediate predecessors, as well as coadjutors, in the sixteenth century, but the way was prepared by a series of events and a chain of influences extending over many generations.

The foregoing paragraph opens the volume by Henry Cowan, D. D., on "John Knox, the Hero of the Scottish Reformation 1505-1572," which G. P. Putnam's Sons have in press for issue shortly in the Heroes of the Reformation Series. The introductory chapter gives a survey of the times and influences alienating Scotland from Rome prior to the time of Knox. The first chapter deals with the birth of John Knox, his education, and his early religious environment and ecclesiastical position; the beginnings of discontent in Scotland with the Church of Rome, and Knox's participation in the movement, followed by the subsequent history of the Reformation and Knox's part in the movement.

A Woman Wood Engraver of Insects.

Mrs. Anne Botsford Comstock, author of "How to Keep Bees," which is published by Doubleday, Page & Co., is one of the best-known nature-study authorities in this country. She is Assistant Professor of extension work in Nature Study at Cornell University, and lectures each year at Leland Stanford University. Mrs. Comstock is perhaps the best-known female wood engraver of insects, having exhibited at Paris, Chicago, and Buffalo; at the last place she received a bronze medal. Her husband, John Henry Comstock, holds the professorship of Entomology at Cornell.

The Cheltenham Type.

A sixteen-page brochure is being sent out by The Cheltenham Press, containing an account of the progress from a new basic idea to the finished matrix of Cheltenham Old Style, a body letter originated for the linotype. The type first made its appearance in 1902 from The Cheltenham Press, which was organized in 1897. The design was suggested by Ingalls Kimball, Director of The Cheltenham Press, who supervised the making of the letter. The brochure tells of the difficulties encountered in the work, with an account of how they were overcome. Examples of type, &c., are given.

P. Putnam's Sons. The book will have the original 165 illustrations from nature by the author.

The Sun.
An Admirable Detective Story.

All the requirements for a first-class detective tale are more than met by Mr. Fred M. White's "The Crimson Blind". (R. F. Fenno & Co.). It is by no means a short story, but the reader will read it breathlessly to the end. He is plunged at once into a mystery, as he should be in every well constructed tale of the sort, and is led rapidly out of one complication into another, enough being explained to satisfy his mind for the moment, but more remaining unaccounted for till he has read further.

There is little of preternatural wisdom in the tale; what knowledge is obtained comes naturally enough. The villain has no redeeming trait and is bad enough to satisfy the most exacting. The play between his moves and those of his detectives is kept in suspense skilfully.

THE PUBLISHERS.

Plans of Some of Them—Forthcoming New Books.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS are to publish, in this country "The Life of Lamb," by E. V. Lucas, the well-known Lamb authority. The biography will be in two volumes and will be set up and printed in the United States. Another book by Mr. Lucas is announced by the Macmillan Company for early issue. It is the story of a pilgrimage through Holland, entitled "A Wanderer in Holland." There will be many illustrations in this volume, twenty of which will be colored.

Charles Scribner's Sons are to bring out this month "The Confessions of Lord Byron," which is a collection of personal and literary discussions in Byron's "Letters and Journals." The material was selected and arranged by W. A. Lewis Bettany in chronological order. There are Byron's religious views, judgments of Wordsworth, Keats, Scott, Shelley, Mme. de Staël, Rogers, and others; opinions of himself, and other topics.

Doubleday, Page & Co. have in press for publication Aug. 15 a love story by Eugene P. Lyle, entitled "The Missourian." The tale centres about a French girl, intriguing on behalf of Louis Napoleon at the Court of Maximilian in Mexico, and a Confederate officer. This is the author's first book, but he is well known as a magazine writer.

McClure, Phillips & Co. announce that G. Lowes Dickinson, author of "Religion—A Criticism and a Forecast," has admitted the authorship of the "Letters from a Chinese Official," published by the same firm.

The Macmillan Company will publish the middle of this month "How to Know Wild Fruits: A Guide to Plants When Not in Flower by Means of Fruit and Leaf," by Mrs. Maude Gridley Peterson. The same house is also printing a book on "Norway," text by Beatrix Jungman, and colored pictures by Nico Jungman, author of "Holland," &c., and "Reminiscences of G. F. Watts, R. A.," by Mrs. Russell Barrington, who was an intimate friend of the late painter and sculptor during the last forty-five years of his life. This volume will contain many reproductions of Watts's paintings.

G. P. Putnam's Sons will issue toward the end of the month the second volume of Gabriel Hanotaux's "Contemporary France, 1870-90," translated by J. C. Traver. The book will deal with the period from 1874 to 1878. It will be complete in itself and will be illustrated with photogravure portraits.

E. P. Dutton & Co. have in press for early publication a volume of letters by Count Paul Hatzfeldt, the late German Ambassador to London. The epistles cover the period of the Franco-German war and are written by the Count from the headquarters of the King of Prussia to his wife.

Charles Scribner's Sons will shortly issue in this country a "History of the Royal Academy and Its Members, from 1768 to 1820," by the late J. E. Hodgson and F. A. Eaton. The book will be fully illustrated.

Doubleday, Page & Co. have down for publication June 8 "Our Native Orchids," by William Hamilton Gibson, with nearly 100 drawings from nature by the author, and Ezra Brudno's new story, "The Little Conscript," giving a picture of Russian military and conscript life of the present day.

The Century Magazine will shortly publish an article by Dr. Frank M. Chapman, whose paper in the December Century on flamingoes will be remembered, on his experiences in photographing a colony of pelicans, and a discussion of "The Future of Poland," by David B. Macgowan.

G. P. Putnam's Sons are preparing a new edition, illustrated by G. W. Peters, of Anna Katharine Green's first detective story, "The Leavenworth Case," which, although first published about twenty-five years ago, is still a good seller, and a new edition of "Diagnosis of Organic Nervous Diseases," by C. A. Herter, M. D., revised by L. Pierce Clark, M. D.

As the sub-title of the new magazine, The New York Review, indicates, it is intended to be "a journal of the ancient faith and modern thought." All such topics as theology, Scripture, philosophy, and the cognate sciences will be treated of. Among the contributors will be Wilfrid Ward, Ferdinand Brunetière, J. A. Zahm, C. S. C., Dr. W. E. A. Page, Dr. Gabriel Ouasani, and others. The magazine will appear once every two months, beginning with the June number.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. have down for issue in about a fortnight "How to Tell Stories for Children," by Sara Cone Bryant. The volume has been written for teachers, clubs, &c., and opens with a discussion of the first principles, illustrated with specimen tales, followed by suggestions on how to adapt to the different grades of children's intelligence the different kinds of stories, closing with a presentation of the psychology of the art of telling a story. The author has provided a number of stories suitable for education as well as entertainment, and a list of story books, their prices, and the names of the publishers.

The Macmillan Company will bring out in June Robert Herrick's new novel, "The Memoirs of an American Citizen," which is now appearing in The Saturday Evening Post of Philadelphia.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. are about to publish "Wild Wings: Adventures of a Camera-Hunter Among the Larger Wild Birds of America on Land and Sea," by Herbert K. Job, author of "Among the Water-Fowl," &c., and well known as a lecturer on the subject of wild birds in the United States. President Roosevelt's letter to the author will form the introduction. There will be numerous illustrations by Mr. Job, being reproductions of photographs of birds—auks, murres, puffins, jaegers, gulls, petrels, cormorants, herons, plovers, hawks, owls, &c.

The Forest and Stream Publishing Company will shortly publish "Camp Fires in the Wilderness," by E. W. Burt, who describes places for camping in the forests of the North. There are to be a number of illustrations showing scenes of camp life and of travel in the forests.

Henry Holt & Co. will send out at once "The Venus of Cadiz," (in Kentucky,) being "a comedy of masks."

The Macmillan Company announces for immediate issue "Problems in Manoeuvre Tactics, with Solutions, for Officers of All Arms," translated by Major J. H. V. Crowe from the German of Major Hoppenstedt of the War School of Potsdam. The book has been designed for the assistance of officers in self-instruction in manoeuvre tactics and for the preparation of examinations. The problems dealt with include detachments, collisions, advanced guard actions, reconnaissance, &c.

In his "Millbank Case," which Henry Holt & Co. will issue in a week or two, George Dyre Eldridge has involved the family of an ex-Governor of Maine (who is imaginary) in a murder mystery.

E. J. Clode will publish Louis Tracy's new romance, "The Great Mogul," May 10. The novel portrays life in the East, the background being formed by the Court of the Great Mogul. The story is one of the adventures of two Englishmen who seek their fortune in this hostile country. The illustrations are in color, and the work of J. C. Chase.

The Macmillan Company has in active preparation for early issue "Harvard Lectures on the Revival of Learning," by Prof. John E. Sandys, Fellow and Lecturer of St. John's College, Cambridge, England. The six lectures in the volume were delivered last March and April. They discuss certain aspects of the revival of learning in Italy.

"Gas Engines and Launches," by F. K. Grain, is for the owner of a motorboat and other conveyances run by a gas engine who wishes to manage the boat himself. The author is President of a large engine concern in Connecticut. The book will shortly appear with the imprint of the Forest and Stream Publishing Company.

"The Belted Seas," Mr. Colton's new novel, which Henry Holt & Co. are bringing out, might be supposed to refer to the ridges of foam on a body of water; the name really refers to the belt of the Equator.

Doubleday, Page & Co. have postponed the publication in book form of G. B. Lancaster's new book, "Sons o' Men," the serial rights having been purchased by a magazine.

"The Christian Ministry," the new book by Dr. Lyman Abbott, author of "Christianity and Social Problems," &c., is shortly to appear with the imprint of Houghton, Mifflin & Co. The author furnishes an answer to the question, Why do people go to church? The book is based on two courses of lectures recently given by Dr. Abbott before the Yale and Pacific Theological Seminaries.

The Century Company reports that Mrs. Alice Hegan Rice's new story, "Sandy," is being published in England by Hodder & Stoughton of London, who are said to be doing some odd advertising. Among other novelties imitation visiting cards have been sent out bearing the name "Mrs. Wiggs" and an address of "The Cabbage Patch," with the line, "To introduce her friend Sandy," across the top.

The Outlook Company is about to issue the encyclopaedic index of "The Historians' History of the World." The volume covers the whole field of world-history from 7,000 B. C. down to the Russo-Japanese war and other events of the present day. It defines all historical terms referred to, describes the history, origin, &c., of cities, the careers of men, &c. A separate division has been devoted to authors, in which is given the name of every historical writer of note, from Thucydides to Roosevelt, with the principal facts in his life, his works, &c.

Another Book on Browning.

ROBERT BROWNING. By C. H. Herford, Professor of English Literature in the University of Manchester. 12mo. Pp. 240. New York: Dodd, Mead & Co. $1.

Among so many interpretations of Browning—the end of which is not yet—this of Prof. Herford's has the advantage of the frank admission that it is a contribution only, not in any sense a "last word,"—that mythical "last word" which never is nor can be so long as any subject retains its living interest, but which, nevertheless, so many assume to utter. As a contribution to a study which seems even unusually fertile in contributions Prof. Herford's work is undoubtedly interesting. His treatment of Browning the poet and man shows considerable insight and unusual sanity. There is, however, little in his point of view which is really new. His Robert Browning, except in minor matters, is the Browning upon whom the critics have for some time agreed. Like the rest of the interpreters, of course, he is sometimes too interpretative, and sometimes too little so; but at large he will be found informing, even if the reader is no Browningite—merely a man appreciative of poetry and more or less interested in the processes by which great poetry is evolved out of the poet's life and consciousness.

The volume deals—as such volumes are apt to deal—a bit vaguely and figuratively with the poet's life; it seeks to trace the influence of his marriage and of his ancestry; it enters into controversy (on the heretical side sometimes) as to disputed points of Browningness; it gives a fairly satisfactory analysis of the longer dramatic poems, and is withal very readable. This "Browning" is, by the way, the seventh volume in a "Modern English Writers Series," which includes already a "Stevenson," a "Matthew Arnold," a "Ruskin," a "Tennyson," a "Huxley," and a "Thackeray."

A Widow's Champion.

A ROYAL KNIGHT. A Tale of Nuremberg. By Isabella MacFarlane. 12mo. New York: The G. W. Dillingham Company. $1.25.

In Nuremberg, in the fifteenth century, lived a poor and humble widow with her twin daughters, Barbara and Margarethe Uhler. They were beautiful—these daughters—and as good as they were lovely. Indeed, although they lived humbly and supported themselves and their mother, they were far superior to the peasant classes of Nuremberg of their day. One day Frederick Schonberg, son of one of the highest officials of the city and himself a Count, saw Barbara in the street, saved her from being trod upon by horses, and promptly fell hopelessly in love with her. Frederick, before the opening of the story, was already betrothed to the Lady Alexis, Baroness von Eisenfeld, and because Barbara scorns his dishonorable attentions the infuriated Frederick, thinking to strike the daughter through the mother, has the good Frau Uhler cast into prison as a witch.

After that there is plenty of excitement. The rack and the torture chamber loom into view, there is a quick Sidney Carlton exchange of sisters in a prison cell by night, a wild ride cross country, an interview with the Emperor, the beloved Kaiser Max, more rides, and messengers galloping to and fro, a deadly combat between Frederick, the widow's accuser, and an unknown knight with drooping plume and fiery steed who calls himself the widow's champion. Then follow Frederick's defeat and the knight's magnanimity, then the dissolution of the betrothal between the fair Lady Alexis and Frederick, the reformation of the wicked Frederick, Barbara's smile of forgiveness—and the final curtain rings down on a comfortable picture of the estranged lovers reunited, the poor old widow reinstated, and the champion knight, none other than the good Kaiser Max himself, invoking a benediction.

Dr. Carpenter's Lectures.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. will bring out in a few weeks "The Witness to the Influence of Christ," by the Right Rev. Dr. William Boyd Carpenter, Lord Bishop of Ripon. This is a set of six lectures, the fifth series given at Harvard under the William B. Noble bequest. The author discusses the relation of science to religion, the attempt to treat religion scientifically, the debt of the world to great personalities, summing up his argument with a discussion of the question whether one can reach an assurance of faith which fills the needs of one's character and conduct." Dr. Carpenter is a well-known English writer on religious topics. Among his publications are "History of the Church of England" and "The Religious Spirit in the Poets."

ROOSEVELT QUITS CAMP AND GALLOPS TO TOWN

Party Rides Unannounced to Glenwood Springs Hotel.

TEN BEARS SHOT, HE SAYS

Pack Train Scares Horse and a Doctor Is Hurt—Programme for the Trip Home.

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Col., May 6.—President Roosevelt and his hunting party arrived on horseback this afternoon after a ride of a little less than two hours from New Castle. A special train was offered at New Castle, but the President preferred his horse. Dr. Lambert, P. B. Stewart, and Guides Goff and Borah were in the party.

The President said at New Castle: "We had good luck; we got ten bears."

The hunters as they rode in here were bespattered and their horses were wet. At the head of the party, the President, in his hunting clothes of duck, slouch hat, and bandanna cravat, was as picturesque as the guides. About two miles out of Glenwood Springs the party ran the gantlet of a battery of cameras and moving picture machines.

The party was escorted to the Hotel Colorado. No word of the President's coming had reached the villagers, and he went directly to his apartments to clean up and rest. The hotel was decorated in his honor.

The President was up at 6:30 o'clock this morning in preparation for his ride of thirty miles in the saddle. Several stops were made so that the President might shake hands with families of ranchmen. He arrived at 3:10 o'clock this afternoon. He visited the hot vapor baths and had luncheon in his apartments, made an address to the villagers, had dinner with a few private friends this evening, worked with Secretary Loeb on important letters and matters of state, and retired early to-night.

The President's speech, delivered from the hotel porch, follows:

"Mr. Mayor, and you, my fellow-citizens—my fellow-Americans of Colorado: It is a great pleasure to me to come here and say a word of greeting to you, and, Mr. Mayor, let me take this first chance of thanking the people of Colorado for a three weeks' holiday that I can assure them I have enjoyed to the full. We found the bears all right in quality and in quantity. I have been out with a first-class type of Colorado citizen in Jake Borah and Johnny Goff, and their packs, too.

"I shall not attempt to do more than say a few words of greeting. I believe in your people. I know them. I believe in the future of this great and wonderful State. It is more than a pleasure to me to come here and see you, to pass through the State again. For a number of years I myself lived in the great Western country, and it was partly the knowledge that I then gained which made me desire to push, as one of the cardinal features of my Administration, and one of the things of which I am most proud, the project of Government-aided irrigation for the West.

"I think that the greatest development in the material welfare of the United States during the half century that has opened will come in connection with irrigation. In the country which I have just passed through I have been struck both by what has been done and by the immense amount remaining to be done in it; the use that is being made of irrigating ditches, and the need that there should be irrigation reservoirs to store waters that otherwise go to waste in time of flood, instead of being utilized as they can be and will be when the system becomes fully developed. Much of that work has to be done by individuals and corporations, but there are certain great works which it is absolutely necessary that the Government, and the National Government at that, should undertake.

"I am more pleased than I can say that it should have been under my administration that Uncle Sam took the first step toward seeing that the waters of the Western States were utilized for the full development of this wonderful and great country. I shall not make a long speech. I shall simply thank you, my fellow citizens and fellow voters, men and women of Colorado, for the greeting you have given me."

Two hours behind the President's party came the pack train, consisting of twenty horses, thirty dogs, and the camping outfit. About a mile from the hotel, Dr. A. K. McAlester of New York, who had been living at Colorado Springs for the benefit of his health, was driving a fractious horse, which became unmanageable when it saw the train and dogs. The doctor's vehicle was overturned and he suffered a compound fracture of the left thigh.

Word was sent to the hotel, and Dr. Lambert, the President's physician, responded. He treated the injured man the best he could, and ordered him brought to the hotel, where a local physician took charge of the case.

Mr. Roosevelt says he never felt better in his life, and is looking as well as he says! he feels. His face is bronzed.

The tentative programme for to-morrow includes a short address by the President from the veranda of the hotel. Following is the schedule for the return trip to Washington:

CROOKS REAP A HARVEST.

Twelve Fight Their Way Free When Rounded Up Near Belmont Track.

While Commissioner McAdoo's 5,000 policemen were marching up Broadway yesterday afternoon, each train that left Long Island City for the Belmont race track carried a dozen or more pickpockets. The result was that many men discovered upon reaching the track that the money they intended to wager on their favorite horses was missing.

One man lost $1,000, another $500, one $600, and dozens of others reported losses averaging between $50 and $400.

Others had their watches stolen and some their diamond pins.

News of the outbreak of the pickpockets was telegraphed to Police Headquarters in Brooklyn, and a dozen detectives were sent out to the city line to wait for the return of the crooks, who, it was believed, would go over to the Hempstead Road and return with the crowds taking the trolley through Jamaica. The conjecture was right.

When the last race was over and a part of the throng rushed for the trolleys the detectives saw plenty of pickpockets. When they picked a man out he was lined up with the others against a fence not far from a point where the Long Island Railroad tracks mark the line that separates Queens County from Kings.

When the detectives had corralled eighteen men one of them denounced his arrest as an outrage and said that, even though he was a crook, the Brooklyn police had no jurisdiction over him because he was taken into custody in Queens County. This led to a general protest by the prisoners. One man broke through the police line, and the others tried to follow.

Then followed a battle royal in which the detectives used their clubs and the men under arrest punched and wrestled. A dozen of the prisoners got away. Detective Peter Reidy of the Brooklyn Central Bureau was knocked down during the battle and Detective Herbert Graham was severely bruised.

The six remaining prisoners were hustled into a patrol wagon and taken to the police station at Jamaica.

OLIVER ESTATE $40,000,000.

Fifteen Years Ago Henry W. Oliver Was a Bankrupt.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, May 6.—George T. Oliver, Henry R. Rea, and the Union Trust Company, executors of the estate of Henry W. Oliver, filed to-day a partial accounting which gives rise to the belief that the estate of the late financier will be found to reach the sum of about $40,000,000.

This is astounding to his many friends who knew that fifteen years ago Henry W. Oliver was a bankrupt and penniless. At that time he had nothing but his iron will and never-say-die spirit left, but he tackled the Mesaba iron ore problem in the Northwest and later was enabled to sell his share of that industry to the Carnegie interests for many millions. It was not, however, imagined that Mr. Oliver had anything like the money which his estate now bids fair to total.

The partial accounting filed to-day deals only with his personal property and does not touch his immense holdings in real estate. His personal holdings at the time of death, Feb. 8, 1904, were $18,433,378. Since that time, in straightening up accounts, this has been reduced to $14,238,819.61. He is known to have owned thirty-one different parcels of real estate, most of it in the heart of Pittsburg, and it is calculated that these are worth more than $20,000,000.

The executors' statement of to-day includes one item which has given rise to speculation, in view of the fact that some time ago there was published in New York a story that Mrs. Kingsley-Carpenter of that city had brought suit for something like $500,000 against Mr. Oliver's estate. On the credit side of the account to-day there appears the following item, without explanation or comment:

"Amount paid in settlement of claims against the estate contracted previous to Feb. 8, 1904. Accounts payable, $570,567.29, and sundry claims, $29,084.36—$599,651.51."

Whether this item "contracted previous to Feb. 8, 1904," (date of Mr. Oliver's death) was the Mrs. Carpenter claim is not known.

The principal items in the personal estate of Oliver are on the statement shown to be 21,794 shares Oliver Iron and Steel Company, $5,448,500; 96,290 shares Pittsburg Coal common, $1,209,875; 12,200 shares Pittsburg Coal preferred, $810,000; 19,797 shares Calumet and Arizona Mining Company, $1,137,820; 28,165 shares Calumet and Pittsburg Mining Company, $281,650; 17,250 shares Lake Superior and Pittsburg Mining Company, $127,500; 11,000 Harvey Steel Company, $275,000; leases Chenning Iron Ore, $4,000,000.

Mrs. Margaret L. Kingsley-Carpenter, who was formerly a stenographer at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, now resides at New Rochelle. She came to New York from Syracuse about fifteen years ago, and when she first went to the Fifth Avenue Hotel as a stenographer was known as Margaret Kingsley.

In March last a story was printed in New York papers to the effect that she had borrowed money from certain people on a statement that she had a claim against the estate of Henry W. Oliver for $6,000,000, and that as a compromise a trust fund of $500,000 had been settled upon her and her eighteen-year-old daughter.

At the time of the publication of this story Mrs. Kingsley-Carpenter's counsel, John Delahunty, denied that there was any truth in it, and said that persons to whom Mrs. Kingsley-Carpenter had owed money had sued her, and in two out of three of such suits judgment had been confessed. He explained that they were cases in which she had borrowed money and had not been able to repay the sum as soon as she had expected. He added that the suits thus brought against her had nothing whatever to do with the Oliver estate, and declared that she had no claim whatever upon the estate.

SCHOOLHOUSE BLOWN AWAY.

Teacher and Two Children Probably Mortally Injured.

SOUTH McALESTER, I. T., May 6.—Details of the severe windstorm last night at Owl, I. T., are to the effect that no one was killed, though several persons were injured. The school building, in which there were a teacher and fifteen children, was blown away.

The teacher, John Vincent, and two children were probably mortally injured. At least half the children were seriously injured, some of them sustaining broken legs and arms, while others were injured internally.

2 MEN FATALLY SHOT IN A CHICAGO RIOT

Non-Union Men Attacked in Front of a Hotel.

VITRIOL THROWN BY STRIKERS

Led to Report That Bombs Were Being Used—Dunne Thinks Worst Is Over.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 6.—Two men were fatally shot to-night in a riot in front of the Gainsboro Hotel at 985 and 987 West Madison Street. They are Charles Daly, shot in the right hand and the abdomen, and John Noonan, shot through the body, just above the heart. Both said they were Deputy Sheriffs, and were armed.

The fight started when three non-union men, among whom was Harry F. Ford, a guard employed by the United States Express Company, approached the hotel. They are living at the hotel. Daly and Noonan and a number of others hooted the men, and Ford and his companions were soon surrounded by a mob. They were struck several times, and before they could reach the hotel entrance Daly and Noonan had gained the doorway.

Flourishing revolvers, they ordered the non-union men to stand back. Ford told the men to get out of his way, and when they did so, but threatened him with their weapons, he opened fire. The first bullet struck Daly, and Noonan went down with the second shot. Ford was arrested, but told the police that he had acted in self-defense.

Joseph Johnson, a strike sympathizer, became involved in an altercation with a negro on a Wentworth Avenue car to-night, and the colored man drew a razor six times across Johnson's face, cutting him in a frightful manner. The negro jumped from the car and escaped.

Mayor Dunne last night expressed the belief that the worst of the strike was over, and said that he did not look for much more disturbance in the streets. Sheriff Barrett, who during the day had sworn in as deputies several hundred employes of the firms against which strikes have been declared, indorsed the Mayor's opinion.

It is asserted by members of the Employers' Association that Captains and Lieutenants of Police have been derelict in their duty in the suppression of disorder, and charges will be filed against a number of officers before the Police Trial Board.

Aside from the fight already described, there was not much rioting to-day. A missile filled with vitriol thrown at John Sorner and William Dorn, drivers for the United States Express Company, while they were passing Desplaines and Van Buren Streets this morning, was the cause of a report that strike sympathizers were throwing bombs. The men were not seriously hurt. Sorner was struck on the leg, but was able to walk to the police station.

A blockade of more than 100 wagons caused a suspension of traffic over the Madison Street Bridge in the morning. In the blockade were several coal wagons driven by colored non-union teamsters. The other teams on the bridge stopped and were turned facing the colored drivers, who tried to force their way through the blockade. It took the police almost an hour to untie the tangle.

United States Appraiser J. G. Blair made a laughing remark about one of the colored non-union workmen as he was standing on the platform in the rear of the Custom House, at Sherman and Harrison Streets. The colored man jumped from his wagon and leveled a revolver at Mr. Blair.

"Why, I was only joking," remonstrated Mr. Blair.

"You're just white trash, and I ought to shoot you anyhow," said the negro.

Several men ran to Mr. Blair's assistance and the colored man drove away.

Joseph Patzen, who called Chief O'Neil a "fresh cop" when the Chief arrested him at Clark and Monroe Streets, was fined $25 and costs by Justice Prindiville on a charge of disorderly conduct

The Mayor to-day issued the following proclamation to the citizens of Chicago:

"In the present crisis, arising out of conflict between the Teamsters' Union and the employers, it would seem that to avert further trouble and bitterness the public should have full knowledge of conditions, precedent and existing. Charges have been freely made that certain members of the Teamsters' Union in positions of authority have been guilty of blackmailing employers and drawing contracts. If these charges are proved the guilty men should be held up to the opprobrium of their fellows whom they have betrayed, and the public to whom they are a menace, and should be eliminated from the situation.

"On the other hand it is charged that in times of peril and excitement certain officials of the Employers' Association are seeking to spread the strike by demanding such action of employers as beyond contract relations as is at such a time bound to be provocative of passion. If this be proved it may be stated that it is hard to preserve the peace when war is being sought for.

"If the chosen representatives of either or both parties to the conflict are guilty as charged, the party or parties thus guilty of fomenting discord should no longer be permitted to plot against the peace and the general welfare of Chicago. I have named a commission to investigate the facts in the dispute, and shall make public the findings. In the interest of right judgment, only to be obtained through knowledge of such facts, I request all parties aggrieved to report to this commission such facts as are capable of proof.

"As executive of the city, upon whom rests the heavy responsibility of preserving the peace, I request that both employers and employes be temperate and careful in their dealings the one with the other, and I again warn those who would obstruct traffic in the public streets, or who may be guilty of violence or threats of violence, that I shall use to the utmost all the force available or obtainable that may be needed to maintain the peace that I am sworn to, and shall, preserve."

ASK GOVERNOR TO MEDIATE.

Federation of Labor and Teamsters' Union Appeal to Him.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 6.—Gov. Deneen to-day received a telegram asking his services as mediator to select one labor representative and one representative of the Employers' Association to act with them as a committee to investigate the present strike.

The telegram was signed by President Shea of the Teamsters' Union and by President Dold of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Gov. Deneen replied that the suggestion would receive due consideration.

AUTO KILLS PARDONNER BOY.

Son of Beet Sugar President Run Over in Dyker Meadow Park.

W. S. Pardonner, President of the American Beet Sugar Company, whose offices are at 32 Nassau Street, Manhattan, was overcome yesterday afternoon by the tragic death of his only son, a boy of twelve years, who was run down and killed by an automobile in Dyker Meadow Park, Brooklyn. The boy died while the automobilist accused of running over him was speeding with him in the machine to a doctor's office.

The accident happened on the bridge over the meadow leading into the park from Cropsey Avenue. The boy, Wilson Pardonner, was on the bay side of the bridge and started to cross to the other side just as the big automobile swung in from the avenue. When the chauffeur saw the lad he was almost upon him, but he swerved his machine sharply to the left. It was too late, however, and the big car struck the boy.

The driver of the machine was Andrew Gromel, who is employed by Frank A. Slocum, a real estate operator of Twenty-third Avenue and Eighty-first Street. Gromel stopped his car, and, running to the boy, found him insensible and bleeding at the mouth and nose. Placing the lad in the automobile, Gromel hurried at top speed with him down Cropsey Avenue to the office of Dr. John A. De Mund, on Twenty-second Avenue, a mile or so away. When the lad was carried into the house Dr. De Mund saw that he was dead. Gromel collapsed when the physician told him that the boy was beyond need of his services. The chauffeur was placed under arrest by Detective White of the Fort Hamilton Station.

The body of young Pardonner was removed to the home of his father, at Cropsey and Twenty-first Avenues.

DIED IN WALDORF CAFE.

Virgil P. Humason of Yonkers Stricken with Heart Attack.

Virgil P. Humason dropped into a chair in the Waldorf-Astoria café yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock and died before medical attention could be brought to him. Coroner Scholer and several physicians who reached the hotel after Mr. Humason had died declared that heart disease was the cause of death. The body will be sent to Yonkers this morning.

Mr. Humason lived at 574 Palisade Avenue, Yonkers. It was said at his home last night that he had been ill for several days, but had decided to come to New York yesterday to keep an appointment at his office. As his cab passed the Waldorf he became faint, and he stopped the cab and went into the café. Dropping into a chair, he asked that a physician be sent for, but died almost immediately. He was fifty-seven years old, and is survived by a widow and four children.

He was Vice President and Treasurer of the Humason & Beckley Company, Vice President of the Chapin-Stevens Company of New Britain, Conn., and a representative of many other companies. At one time he was an officer of the William Rogers Silverware Company.

Besides being one of the founders of the Hardware Club he was a member of the Society of Colonial Wars, Sons of the American Revolution, and of several clubs in Manhattan.

SWINDLES THREE DIPLOMATS.

South American Passes Bad Checks on Ministers Who Aided Him.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Señor Dr. Eduardo Acevedo Diaz, the Uruguayan Minister, is the latest victim of a man who has been bunkoing South American diplomats. He contributed $395 to the swindler's support.

A young man called at the Uruguayan Legation last week and said he was a student from Montevideo, who had come here to spend his vacation. He had been robbed in Cincinnati and had just received a message from the Chief of Police of that city saying that he was to go there, as the robber had been apprehended. He did not have money enough to get to Cincinnati and wanted to borrow $25. The Minister gave him $35 and he went away and stayed long enough for a trip to Cincinnati and back, though he did not go there.

On Saturday he appeared at the legation and said his stolen money had been recovered and the Chief of Police had given him a check for $360. As it was after banking hours he would be obliged if the Minister would cash it. Dr. Diaz did so, and the man vanished.

The check was worthless, and the name signed to it was not that of the Cincinnati Chief of Police. The Washington police are looking for the fugitive, and have discovered that he has swindled two other South American Ministers.

NEAR DEATH TO SAVE HORSE.

Mrs. H. S. Cummings Stopped from Grasping Live Wires.

Special to The New York Times.

STAMFORD, Conn., May 6.—Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, daughter of James D. Smith, formerly Commodore of the New York Yacht Club, and wife of the Democratic National Committeeman from this State, came near sacrificing her life here this afternoon to save a favorite horse. She was driving over Atlantic Street, toward the New Haven Station, to meet a guest coming to Linden Lodge. In the trap with her was a young woman friend.

Opposite the City Hall a guy wire supporting the trolley feed wire fell, and the horse stepped on the live wire and went down. Mrs. Cummings tried to pull the horse to his feet, but the animal was paralyzed by the current. She jumped out and was about to seize the live wire in her gloved hands when John Wendle, a real estate broker, stepped out and restrained her. Employes of the electric road extracted the horse, and one of them was badly burned through his rubber glove.

Mrs. Cummings received several shocks through the brass mountings of the harness, and her hands were burned. To-night she said her own injuries were of no account, but seemed very much depressed by the condition of the horse. The animal has won ribbons at horse shows.

A Notable Feature of the Farewell Banquet to Ambassador Choate.

At the banquet given to the Hon. Joseph H. Choate by the Bench and Bar of England upon his recent retirement from the Ambassadorship, G. H. Mumm & Co.'s was the only champagne served. The banquet was one of the most brilliant and notable functions of recent times, and the exclusive use of G. H. Mumm's Champagne shows the unique and distinguished position which that wine occupies among the elite of Great Britain. (Adv.)

MANY PARTIES COMBINE TO STRIKE AT THE CZAR

Revolutionary Organizations Form a Fighting Committee.

GENEVA ITS HEADQUARTERS

Gopon a Leading Spirit—Constituent Assemblies for Russia, Poland, and Finland Demanded.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[Copyright, 1905.]

PARIS, May 6.—The massacres at Warsaw are not likely to go long unavenged.

Information reaches me from a reliable source that arrangements are being made to strike back at the autocratic power responsible for the atrocities in Poland and elsewhere in Russia.

A General Fighting Committee has been formed by the Russian Socialist Revolutionary Party, the Armenian Revolutionary Federation, the Finnish Pary of Active Resistance, the Polish Socialist Party, the Georgian Socialist Federalist Party, the Socialist Union of White Russia, and the Lettish Social Democratic Labor Union. These organizations have combined their respective programmes on the basis on which a revolution in Russia is to be accomplished.

It was on the suggestion of the Russian priest Gopon that the Fighting Committee was formed, and he was present at its first meeting. Its chief demand is for three Constituent Assemblies—one for Russia proper, one for Poland, and one for Finland, each of which shall have the right to pronounce in full sovereignty for the people it represents.

The headquarters of the committee will be in Geneva. Its first proclamation, signed by all the revolutionary groups and declaring a general war against the autocracy, will be published to-morrow.

By The Associated Press.

WARSAW, May 6.—The city was gayly decorated to-day in honor of the name day of the Empress. A number of flags were torn down by roughs, but there were no serious disturbances.

The Polish Socialist Party has issued a manifesto calling on the workmen to return to work, and declaring that, while never in the history of the world has a city witnessed a more impressive manifestation of united workers than did Warsaw on May Day, the time has not yet arrived to start a revolution. Therefore the workmen should prepare themselves for the final struggle for freedom and return to work with the same unity as they struck when ordered to do so.

MOSCOW, May 6.—The second great Zemstvo Congress, which opened here yesterday, resumed its sessions to-day. The following greeting from the St. Petersburg Zemstvo was presented to the assemblage:

"We are on the eve of great reforms as the result of the national misfortunes which have brought home to Russia the realization that the present order of things must end. Equality must be the basis of the future organization, and we hope this principle will prevail with steadfastness throughout the Zemstvos, which during forty years' persecution have labored incessantly for the good of the country and people."

RUSSIAN IN BRITISH JAIL.

Supposed Spy Sentenced to Three Months' Imprisonment.

SINGAPORE, May 6.—Vladimir Antonovitch, the alleged Russian spy, who carried a passport made out in another name and who was arrested on the fortified Island of Brani and arraigned in Singapore on April 25 on the charge of being on Government property without authority, was sentenced to-day to three months' imprisonment for trespassing and was fined $250 for being found in possession of sketching materials in a fortified place.

Antonovitch ha given notice of an appeal.

$1,000 BADGE FOR MASTERSON

Friends Gather in Tom O'Rourke's to Honor New Deputy Marshal.

At a very early hour yesterday morning a select company gathered in the café of the Delevan Hotel, Broadway and Fortieth Street, to do honor to William B. ("Bat") Masterson, recently appointed Deputy United States Marshal. The ceremony took the form of a presentation of a gold badge of his new office. It was of 14-karat gold, studded with four diamonds of good size, and valued, so it was said, at $1,000.

Among those who were present and made brief speeches of appreciation of the valor and intrepidity of Marshal Masterson were Charles Prager of 14 Maiden Lane, Marcus Mayer, nephew of his uncle of the same name, who lives at the Hoffman House; Tom O'Rourke of the Delevan Hotel, and William E. Lewis, to whom fell the honor of presentation.

RAT CAUSES CHURCH PANIC.

Women Try to Climb Out Windows When Rodent Appears.

TRENTON, May 6.—During a mission for women a rat caused a great commotion in St. Mary's Cathedral last night, and what might have resulted in a serious panic was narrowly averted. One of the women saw a large rat darting from an adjoining pew into the one where she was sitting. With a scream of terror she jumped on the seat.

In a second 1,700 women became panic stricken. Several fainted and many jumped upon the pew seats, while others tried to climb up on the broad window ledges. In the rear part of the church there was a great rush, women trying to outdo one another in reaching the doors. Some cool-headed women, after some trouble, restored order, but many disappeared

LEAVES RUSSIA TO SEE HAY.

Secretary Eddy of American Embassy Going to Bad Nauheim.

ST. PETERSBRG, Sunday, May 7.—Spencer Eddy, the Secretary of the American Embassy here, left on the Nord Express last night for Bad Nauheim, where he is going on behalf of Ambassador Meyer for a confidential consultation with Secretary Hay.

The situation in Russia and possible future developments will probably form the subject of the conference.

Mr. Eddy will remain at Bad Nauheim only twenty-four hours.

Special to The New York Times.

Each had a typewritten complaint, setting forth that on May 4 they paid $2 each to get into the park, saw gambling going on, and saw liquor sold without a license being exposed. They wanted the warrants made out for John Doe.

Justice Clowes declined to issue the warrants, and the applicants declared their intention to have him deposed. They gave their names as Harold J. Seigel, attorney, 61 to 63 Park Row, and H. Sterling Goldman, 302 Broadway.

$150,000 FOR RACE HORSE.

LONDON, May 6.—William A. H. Bass (nephew and heir of Lord Burton) has purchased C. D. Rose's stallion Cylene, sire of this year's Derby favorite, Cicero, for $150,000. Bass gave $125,000 for R. S. Siever's Sceptre in 1903.

The horse Cylene is a comparatively young stallion, which last season figured prominently in the list of winning stallions in England, Cylene being fifth of the largest winning sires, with a total of $77,730 to the credit of his progeny, of which Cicero was the most successful. Cylene is by Bona Vista-Arcadia, and the price paid for him rates with the records for high-priced English stallions, among which are Galtee More, Flying Fox, and Ormonde.

LITTLE BOY, WOUNDED, ACCUSES POLICEMAN

Names Patrolman Maloney, But No Action Is Taken.

BULLET AFTER FLEEING LAD

Nine-Year-Old Boy's Injury Not Fatal—Man He Says Shot Him Goes Out on Post.

John Smith, aged nine years, of 240 West Sixtieth Street, was shot last night through the right thigh by a policeman, said by the boy and several witnesses to be Thomas S. Maloney, of the Sixty-eighth Street Station. The boy was at Roosevelt Hospital for several hours before his condition permitted his removal to his home. The police report said that the boy had been shot by an unknown policeman, and, while it was admitted at the station house that Maloney was accused, no steps had been taken to obtain an explanation from him.

According to the story told by the injured boy and the witnesses, George Hiller of 251 West Sixtieth Street, Augustus McIntyre of 247 West Sixtieth Street, and several other boys of the same age as the Smith boy were playing a game they called "cop" in the New York Central yards at Sixtieth Street and West End Avenue. The McIntyre boy was playing the rôle of "Crook-neck," which is the sobriquet by which Policeman Maloney is known in the neighborhood. Johnny Smith was being chased by Gussy McIntyre, and as often as he escaped from him he shouted "Yaw! Yaw! Crook-neck."

Policeman Maloney came along, and, according to the Smith boy's story, heard them shouting "Crook-neck!" and lost his temper. Johnny Smith says that the policeman shouted:

"Get out of there!"

The boys ran toward West End Avenue.

"Just as I reached the electric light post," said the Smith boy, "Crook-neck" was near the pile of logs in the yard. Suddenly as I was running I heard a bang and felt something hurt my legs. I nearly dropped, but kept running until I got to the front of a saloon at West End Avenue and Sixtieth Street. There I dropped down and cried out that I was shot.

"While I was in the hospital two men came in to see me, and, after asking how I was, went away."

The two men who called at the hospital were Detectives Michaels and Donnelly of the Sixty-eighth Street Station. At 8:30 o'clock, about two hours after the shooting, no report had been made at the station house, but at about 9:30 o'clock the following slip was laid upon the desk:

John Smith, 9 years old, of 240 West Sixtieth Street, found in the Roosevelt Hospital, shot in the right leg above the knee at West End Avenue and Sixtieth Street by an unknown policeman.

The report was unsigned, but Sergt. Thompson, who was on the desk, said that it had been made by Detectives Michaels and Donnelly. When asked if it was true that Policeman Maloney had done the shooting, the Sergeant said:

"Well, he is accused of it."

He also said that Maloney had reported at the 8 o'clock roll call, had gone off duty at 8:15, and would go on post again at midnight. Maloney had not reported the shooting, although, whether it was done by him or not, it took place on his post, which extends along West End Avenue from Fifty-ninth Street to Sixty-eighth. He has been in the service for many years, and has several stripes.

The moment the shooting became known around Sixtieth Street, the vicinity was in an uproar of indignation. Alexander Smith, an elder brother of Johnny, was so incensed that he went out to find Maloney. The mother of the injured boy went to the Roosevelt Hospital in hysterics, and was only comforted when told that Johnny had escaped with a deep flesh wound on the thigh and would be able to go home.

ENGINE DODGED CHILDREN.

Driver Escaped Handorgan Crowd—Smashed Drugstore Window.

While going to a fire in East Fourth Street last night Engine 28, whose quarters are in Eleventh Street, crashed into a drug store window. The driver, Frederick Frosse, explained that it was necessary to drive upon the sidewalk to avoid running over a crowd of children who were in the roadway.

The drug store, which is owned by Ignatz Blair, is at the corner of Seventh Street and Avenue C. As the engine was approaching this corner the driver saw the roadway crowded with children. They were gathered about a hand organ. Many of them were dancing. They were not facing the engine, so the driver saw that the only way to escape running them down was to turn his horses to the sidewalk, which was clear at this point. He was compelled to make this decision quickly, and as he swung his team to the sidewalk the pole of the engine crashed through the plate glass window of the drug store.

The head of one of the horses was cut by the glass, but otherwise the team was uninjured. All of the bottles and glassware in the window of the drug store went to pieces in the crash, but when it was seen that no one had been injured Frosse drove up to the fire. The fire was in Solomon Pick's crockery store, at 52 East Fourth Street. The druggist said that his damage amounted to $200.

MISSING FROM BANGOR BOAT.

Despondent Widow Thought to Have Drowned Herself.

BANGOR, Me., May 6.—A woman was missing from the City of Rockland of the Eastern Steamship Company's Bangor-Boston line when the boat arrived here to-day. A card on a stateroom berth bore the address "L. M. P., 139 Worcester Street, Boston," and in one corner "My address." The woman evidently crawled out of the porthole. A pocketbook containing $14 was found.

BOSTON, May 6.—Mrs. Louise M. Pannette, a widow, occupied rooms at 139 Worcester Street. She was fifty-three years old, a daughter of Philip Boyce. She was an invalid, and since the death of her father about three years ago had been very despondent. She was accustomed to spend the Summer at Rockland. Her husband died about twelve years ago.

The landlady accompanied Mrs. Pannette to the boat last night. Mrs. Pannette

WOMAN SUICIDE WROTE AT HOTEL TO BROKER

Miss Gray Left Letter at the Imperial for Stoneham.

NEVER KNEW HER, HE SAYS

Woman Said to Have Had Much Jewelry—Left Some in Her Hotel Room.

Leaving behind a sealed letter addressed to Charles H. Stoneham, a broker of 44 Broadway, and other messages for "Charles, Sweetheart," whom she reproached with having driven her to suicide by his treatment of her, a young woman shot herself at the Hotel Imperial early yesterday morning. She was taken to the New York Hospital, where she died four hours later without regaining consciousness.

The woman, who wore expensive dresses and costly jewelry, and gave persons who met her the impression that she was a woman of means and refinement, went to the hotel on April 20, accompanied by a man about her own age. The couple registered as Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gray of New Orleans, La., and engaged one of the best suites in the hotel. Coroner Scholer, who took charge of the case, said last night that he had succeeded in establishing the young woman's identity from papers found in her possession, and that she was Miss Ollie Gray of New Orleans.

Up to a late hour last night neither the police nor the Coroner had been able to find Mr. Stoneham and get an explanation as to how the woman came to address her last message to him. The man registered as Mr. Gray had not been at the hotel for several days.

The police of the Tenderloin Station, who were called in after the shooting, got their first idea of the circumstances which led up to the woman's act from a disarranged heap of notes which they found on a writing desk in the room. The first missive to come under the eyes of the police was the one sealed and addressed to Mr. Stoneham. On the back of the envelope the woman had written: "I wish that no one would open this but the person to whom it is addressed." Coroner Scholer said last evening that so far the woman's wish had been respected.

There was another sealed message, addressed to the "Standard Storage Warehouse, 1,681 Broadway." The third letter had not been inclosed. It was written on two sheets of paper, one of which had been folded, the other open. From the ink used, the hotel clerk said the folded portion had been written on Friday afternoon, the other on Friday night. This letter read:

"Dear Sweetheart: When I called you up on the telephone you talked so cruelly to me that I went out and bought a revolver, intending to do it then. I was brought up in a convent, and my religion teaches against such things, but I can't stand it any longer."

There was a break in the letter here. The rest had been written with different ink and in a hand that was less steady:

"Again and again you have disappointed me, Charley. What in God's name have I done? If you were anxious to get rid of me that were easy. Why did you have me come to New York again? Why, indeed? If you had said: 'Ollie, I don't want you to return,' I would never have done so. Here I am as your wife. What can I do but wait here like a fool for you to show up? And still you don't. Well, Charley, this is the last. I wish you all the luck in the world. You know I am your chum and pal always. What chums we have been."

BREAK IN LETTER.

Here the woman seemed to have paused again. The rest of the letter was in a hand so shaky that it was hardly legible:

"How I am suffering. I cannot stand it any longer. It is now 4 o'clock, and I had hoped for such a happy time."

The letter was not signed. On the mantel piece were two photographs, one showing the woman herself in an open barouche, the other showing a fine-looking man with a full, smooth face, and apparently under thirty, in a vehicle. The photographs were inscribed on the back: "Charles H. Stoneham, Washington Park, Albany." A bundle of letters was found in the desk. These had been addressed to the woman, some of them at the Imperial, others at the Pinecliff House, Sunapee Lake, N. H.; Mount Hosmer, N. H.; 68 Humboldt Avenue, Boston, and 62 West Sixty-sixth Street, this city. Most of these letters, Coroner Scholer said last night, had been written by Stoneham, some of them on the letterheads of a broker's firm at 44 Broadway.

Later the police came across a fourth and open letter to "Charles, Sweetheart." It read:

"How can you treat me this way? What have I done? I am half crazy at your treatment of me. I went out this morning, walked about until my feet as well as my heart were sore. And the cross way you talked to me over the telephone, and your promises not kept with me!

"I have been reading over your letters to me, and wonder how you could treat me this way. Surely a man could not write such letters to a woman and not care for her. Oh, how I have suffered for the last four days, and how I am suffering now. God forgive me. You, dear heart, always so good and kind, so different from any other man I have known. But I can't think why you should act this way. How could you do it? I love you better than my life. I loved you so much, and now to think that I am going away to leave you!

SPOKE CROSSLY OVER TELEPHONE.

"I hate to die. This morning when I got up I thought I would kill myself the first thing, and then I said I would try once more. But when you spoke to me so crossly over the 'phone, went right out and bought the revolver. I do not know even now how I will have the courage to kill myself, for I was raised in a convent with the dear, good nuns, and my religion says that self-destruction is a mortal sin.

"I made but one mistake, if indeed you could call it a mistake. I cannot go on any longer, my heart is too heavy. I ask of those who will look after me when I am gone, please do not cross my hands. I have a perfect horror of it, and then again let me ask that I be put to rest in the most simple way. What little I have left when my bills are paid I want to be sent to Olivia Parker, 1,923 St. Andrew's Street, New Orleans. Give it to the living and not to the dead. It can do them no good. I wish Ethel, the maid on the floor, to have anything she may desire of mine, she has been so good and kind to me. I have a lot of furniture in the Standard Storage Company, Fifty-third Street and Broadway. Send that to Olivia, too, a colored girl, as I am all alone in the world. My diamonds can be sold to pay my bills. And what money is left should be sent, after every one has been paid who has been kind enough to look after things. I do so wish this would be done for me.

"Mrs. GRAY."

Charles H. Stoneham did not appear yesterday at 44 Broadway, where he is in business with J. J. Bamberger under the firm name of O. F. Jonasson & Co. They are mining brokers. It was said there that Stoneham and Bamberger until a few weeks ago were clerks in the employ of Graham & Co., another firm of mining brokers, which went out of business only recently. Stoneham was described by one of the clerks as twenty-eight years old, of medium height, fair, with florid complexion and smooth face.

Mr. Bamberger said that he knew the woman who had committed suicide.

"I saw her with Mr. Stoneham at an uptown hotel on one occasion," he said. "It would be absurd to think that she could have killed herself on account of losses suffered from speculation carried on through this firm, for we do not take women customers. She might have become despondent on account of losses on the races.

"My partner is a married man. He lives in Clark Street, Jersey City, with his wife and two little children. An older child, a boy of four, was drowned in the Morris Canal on April 25, and was buried a week ago to-day. My partner was very much cast down over his loss. He has been with me for every night for the last two weeks. The woman could not have telephoned here. If she had I would have overheard the conversation."

WIFE SEES PARTNER.

In the forenoon Mrs. Stoneham called on Mr. Bamberger, and was closeted with him for some time. Mr. Bamberger said later that she had read the story of the shooting in the newspapers and come to New York to prevent her husband from going to the hospital. She did not know that Mrs. Gray was dead. When she learned this she became hysterical, and was quieted only with difficulty.

That the woman was in the habit of betting on the horse races, as Mr. Bamberger had intimated, appeared from the fragment of a letter signed "Your loving Charley," which is among those held by the Coroner:

"I did not place your $50 on Sysonby because the odds were too low. We will wait for a better opportunity. Be a good little girl, little brown eyes, and write to me to-morrow."

The jewelry found by the police in the woman's room consisted of a diamond star set with twenty-one stones, a diamond pin set with nine stones, a diamond pin set with twenty-four stones, a châtelaine watch, and a very valuable pearl necklace.

At 62 West Sixty-sixth Street, one of the addresses on letters written to the woman and now in the hands of the Coroner, there lives a Mrs. Minnie G. Sanford. She said last night that she knew the dead woman well. It was learned that last Fall the woman lived there under the name of Mrs. Stoneham and that a man who often saw her was known familiarly to the other lodgers of Mrs. Sandford as "Charley."

"The woman met him early last Fall," said Mrs. Sanford. "A few days ago a little son of his was drowned, and after the son's death he determined to stop visiting Mrs. Gray."

When Mrs. Sanford heard of the jewelry found in the woman's room she said: "Oh, that is not all. She had lots more, and stocks and bonds. She was a very wealthy woman, and had unlimited credit."

The Coroner said that the woman had inherited a small fortune from a brother who died in New Orleans about two years ago, but that there was nothing left now except the woman's jewelry and effects and the furniture stored at the Standard Storage Warehouse.

Mrs. Stoneham said last night at her home, in Jersey City:

"Mr. Stoneham felt so badly about the drowning of his little boy that he did not leave Jersey City at all for the rest of the week, and only went to his office on Monday. Some one in the office told my husband three or four days ago that some other man in the building had been using his name in telephoning."

Mr. Stoneham himself did not get home until 9 o'clock last night. When questioned in regard to the dead woman, he expressed great surprise and said it was the first time he had ever heard her name.

"This is all news to me," said Mr. Stoneham. "I haven't read the evening papers, and this is the first I have heard about a woman committing suicide in the Imperial Hotel. I was not at my place of business to-day, but I would prefer not to say where I was. At any rate, it has nothing to do with the case. I have not been away from my home at night for over a month."

Mr. Stoneham declared he had never heard the woman's name to his knowledge before last night.

NEW ORLEANS, May 6.—Olivia Parker of 1,928 St. Andrew Street says she is "Mrs. Gray's" sister.

The Parker woman says that Mrs. Gray was educated at the Ursuline Convent, in New Orleans—probably the most exclusive white Catholic educational institution in Louisiana or the South, and frequented by the older French families.

Mrs. Gray was well-to-do, having inherited considerable wealth from her husband, who died in Chicago some years ago.

BOSTON, May 6.—The identity of the Hotel Imperial suicide in New York as Mrs. J. W. Gray of Chicago, formerly of New Orleans, was established here to-day by Miss M. P. Stone, a dressmaker, of 68 Humboldt Avenue. Her address was found on a letter in the room occupied by Mrs. Gray.

Mrs. Gray was the widow, Miss Stone said, of J. W. Gray, a wealthy Chicago broker, who died several years ago. Miss Stone said that Mrs. Gray, whose first name, she said, was Olivia, married Mr. Gray when she was about fifteen or sixteen years old, and before she had completed her studies at a convent in New Orleans.

CHICAGO, May 6.—Inquiry at the offices of the Chicago Board of Trade and the Chicago Stock Exchange failed to show any record of J. W. Gray ever having been a member of either body.

PAT CROWE VISITS OMAHA.

Alleged Kidnapper of Young Cudahy Then Disappears Again.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Neb., May 6.—"Pat" Crowe, who is alleged to have kidnapped Edward Cudahy, Jr., in 1900, and for whose arrest rewards aggregating $50,000 have been offered at various times, openly returned to Omaha last night and suddenly disappeared to-day. Crowe turned up at midnight in the office of a newspaper, and when he left the place early this morning, he remarked that he was going to the home of his brother in Council Bluffs, Ia., but he could not be found there to-day.

Crowe is known to have one or two automatic revolvers in his possession, and he has always vowed he would never be taken alive. He is more desperate now than ever, and last night stated that he would rather be dead than forced to live in the future as he has in the past. Chief of Police Donahue to-day declined terms offered by Crowe, who wanted to plead guilty and be paroled from the penitentiary. Instead the Chief says Crowe will be prosecuted and otherwise treated just like any other criminal. He has detailed every available man to assist in the search for him.

Edward Cudahy, father of the kidnapped boy, said to-day:

"No one has any right to promise immunity to Crowe. He should be treated like any other criminal. I will make absolutely no concessions if he is captured. Whether he surrenders to the authorities or is captured by them, no leniency should be shown him, and I will prosecute the case as hard as I can and to the fullest extent of the law."

Crowe's acquaintances now say that Crowe often came to Omaha during the four years following the kidnapping of young Cudahy. T. J. O'Brien, a hotel keeper, who made the appointment by which Crowe met a reporter last night and went to the newspaper office, told of having seen Crowe six months ago in an Omaha Street. He accosted O'Brien as the latter was leaving a horse show at the Auditorium. James Callahan, who was tried and acquitted twice for complicity in the kidnapping of Cudahy, says he tried to arrange a meeting between Crowe and Chief of Police Donahue, but failed because of the absence of the Chief.

CRUISER ST. LOUIS LAUNCHED.

Sister Ship of the Charleston Takes Water at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, May 6.—The protected cruiser St. Louis was launched this afternoon at the Neafie & Levy shipyard, Miss Gladys Bryan Smith of St. Louis acting as sponsor, assisted by Miss Mary S. Wright and Miss Rebecca Reeves Van Lennep, maids of honor.

Miss Smith is a member of the class of 1906 of Mary Institute, St. Louis, and was selected by Mayor Rolla Wells, James E. Smith, her father, was Special Commissioner of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition to Japan. Following the launch the guests were entertained at a banquet. Mayor Wells responded to "The Sentiment in the City of St. Louis."

The St. Louis is a sister ship of the Milwaukee, building at San Francisco, and the Charleston, in course of construction at Newport News, all virtually armored cruisers.

The warship attained a higher state of completion previous to launching than any similar vessel built in an Eastern shipyard. She is 77 per cent. completed. Her contract requires her to make 22 knots an hour for six consecutive hours. She is 424 feet long, 72 feet 6 inches draught, extreme beam, 66 feet, and has a displacement of 9,700 tons. Her main battery will be fourteen six-inch rapid-fire breech-loading rifles, and secondary battery, eighteen three-inch rapid-fire guns, twelve three-pounders, four one-pounder automatics, eight one-pounder rapid-fire guns, and ten of smaller calibre.

A feature will be two hospital wards, one for isolated cases, both capable of accommodating about thirty patients.

RAID BY RUSSIAN SHIPS OFF JAPANESE COAST

Destroyers from Vladivostok Burn a Merchant Vessel.

ST. PETERSBURG HOPEFUL

Belief That Togo Will Not Dare Join Battle with the Combined Russian Squadrons.

TOKIO, May 6.—Four Russian torpedo boat destroyers from Vladivostok appeared westward of Hokkaido (the northernmost Japanese island) yesterday. They seized and burned a small sailing vessel, captured the Captain, and then disappeared to the northwest. They were evidently returning to Vladivostok.

All the crew of the vessel except the Captain succeeded in landing, but a steamer dispatched to the rescue of the burning derelict was forced to return on account of the storm. The Russians had poured kerosene on the deck of the vessel and had withdrawn after igniting the oil.

There is a possibility that the Russians have destroyed other small craft, although no reports to that effect have been received.

Although none was sighted, it is believed the larger vessels of the Vladivostok squadron accompanied the destroyers. It is doubted whether torpedo craft would venture across unescorted in the heavy sea which was running when they burned the sailing vessel.

The Russian boats have not been reported to-day. The object of their visit is not clear. It is thought that they hoped to torpedo the Japanese patrol at night, and it is also suggested that the Vladivostok vessels plan a diversion to assist the fleet of Admiral Rojestvensky.

HONGKONG, May 6.—A dispatch from Tsing-Tau (Shan-Tung Peninsula) says that twenty-five Russian warships have been sighted off Vanfong, and that fourteen cruisers were off the Three Kings on May 3.

French battleships have been observed leaving Vanfong.

[The maps available do not locate Vanfong or the Three Kings.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Sunday, May 7.—Private advices received here from Paris say that the Governor General of Indo-China, M. Beau, and the French Admiral de Jonquières report that the renewed Japanese complaint of a violation of French neutrality is unfounded. After leaving Kamranh Bay, they say, Admiral Rojestvensky stopped nowhere in French territorial waters over twenty-four hours. The charge regarding the shipment of contraband from Saigon for the Russian fleet is being investigated.

Admiral Nebogatoff's junction with Admiral Rojestvensky is now considered by the Admiralty as practically assured, and hope for a successful issue of the approaching struggle for the mastery of the sea is greatly encouraged thereby.

If Admiral Kamimura fails to prevent a juncture of the Russian fleets, as the Admiralty here believes will be the case, the impression is strong that Admiral Togo will not dare risk an open battle against the united divisions of Rojestvensky and Nebogatoff, but will content himself with torpedo attacks and possibly a long-range action.

Naval officers are prepared to see Rojestvensky lose half his convoy, but in face of the united divisions it is believed that Togo will accomplish little or nothing in the way of opposition to the advance to Vladivostok, and that he must be content, with the aid of the army, to try to invest Vladivostok by land and sea and make it another Port Arthur. If the fleet reaches Vladivostok intact, however, naval officers here say that victory is won.

There is a strong intimation that Rojestvensky has something up his sleeve which may prove a surprise. This possibly is a diversion in the shape of the dispatch of some fast converted cruisers of the convoy into the Pacific to raid Japanese commerce.

OYAMA RESUMING ADVANCE.

Another Great Battle May Be Beginning—Kuropatkin Going Home.

FENGHUSHSHIENG, (or Maimaikai,) Manchuria, May 6.—Field Marshal Oyama seems to be ready to assume the offensive on a large scale and activity has already begun against Gen. Linevitch's left. This may be the prelude to another general battle.

The Japanese have concentrated heavy columns on the Liao River, and their advance divisions have been in contact with the Russians, who are holding the main road from Fakoman to Bashienchen.

On Thursday the Japanese cavalry suddenly attacked the Cossacks in overwhelming force, forcing the Russians to retire. Then, supported by infantry, the Japanese advanced and drove the Russian infantry out of the village of Paitoun.

A Russian reconnoitering party twenty miles further west ran into an ambush and all the party except five were killed.

ST. PETERSBURG, May 6.—The rumors of the approaching return of Gen. Kuropatkin from the front now seem to be definitely confirmed, and it is said that Gen. Zaroubaieff, commander of the Fourth East Siberian Corps, will succeed him. Failing health is assigned as the cause for Kuropatkin's return to St. Petersburg.

Staff Col. Linda, formerly Gen. Kuropatkin's Adjutant, replying to the newspaper campaign against the General Staff, declares that the indiscretions of certain correspondents were more responsible for the misfortunes of the war than the failings of the General Staff. He attributes the defeat of the Russians at the Sha River to a correspondent named Rostoffitseff, one of the most vigorous assailants of the staff, saying that his dispatch of Oct. 5, which was smuggled through, gave information and warning to Field Marshal Oyama that the Russians "were preparing to leave Port Arthur."

The critics of the General Staff in reply say that the Japanese were warned by Gen. Kuropatkin's famous order of advance, which was read to the army on Oct. 2.

TOKIO, Sunday, May 7.—According to advices from Manchuria, Field Marshal Oyama's extreme right and extreme left have been materially advanced.

ARMY AND NAVY MANOEUVRES.

Warships to Operate Against Forts of Baltimore District.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The joint army and navy manoeuvres are fixed to take place from June 11 to June 17. The plans restrict the operations to the development of certain specific points relating mainly to the defense of Washington and Baltimore. The defensive force will be limited to the coast artillery. The navy will not be allowed to use landing parties. About 2,000 artillerymen will be distributed among the four forts of the artillery district of Baltimore.

During the six days that the manoeuvres will be in progress the forts established for the defense of Washington and Baltimore will take on the appearance of actual warfare, and everything will be conducted as though a foreign country was the adversary. The artillery troops stationed at Fort Wright and Fort Wadsworth, N. Y.; Fort Mott, N. J.; Fort Greble, R. I., and Fort Banks, Mass., will be sent to the Chesapeake Bay forts. There will also be a torpedo company from one of the New York forts used in the defense.

The plans of the navy have not been announced as yet, nor list of vessels that will participate, but it is understood that the following, under the command of Admiral Evans, will take part: The first-class battleship Massachusetts, the second-class battleship Texas, the monitors Arkansas, Florida, and Nevada, the training ship Hartford, and six destroyers.

BRESCI'S ACCOMPLICE CAUGHT

ROME, May 6.—The Anarchist Vittorio Jaffei has been arrested at Cairo, Egypt.

Jaffei, who is twenty-seven years old, came to Italy from Paterson, N. J., with Gaetano Bresci, the assassin of King Humbert. Jeffei was a customs guard before becoming an Anarchist. Shortly before King Humbert was assassinated he went to Switzerland, where he met Bresci and Bresci's other accomplice in the murder of the Italian King, whose death the three plotted.

A court at Milan in 1901 tried Jaffei in contumacy and sentenced him to solitary confinement for life. It is stated that Jaffei has expressed the intention of murdering King Victor Emmanuel.

It is said that Bresci's accomplice in the actual assassination of King Humbert was Luigi Granotti, thirty-eight years old, a hatmaker, from Paterson.

King Humbert was assassinated at Monza on July 29, 1900, by Gaetano Bresci, who was subsequently condemned to imprisonment for life, that being the most severe penalty which can be imposed for murder under the laws of Italy. He was sent to the Penitentiary of Santa Stefano and committed suicide there on May 21, 1901.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—An important step in the reorganization of the Catholic University was taken to-day, when, following a meeting of the Board of Trustees, announcement was made that the Very Rev. The chair had been vacant since the last incumbent, the Rev. P. J. Garrigan, was made Bishop of Sioux City.

Dr. Grannan's connection with the Catholic University dates back to 1889. He is regarded as one of the most eminent of American Biblical scholars, and was selected by the late Pope Leo XIII. as the representative of the American Church on the Biblical Commission in Rome. Mgr. O'Connell, rector of the university, is in poor health and will take a long sea voyage soon.

GULLY SAVED THEIR LIVES.

Engineer and Fireman Fell Into It; Locomotive on Top.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, May 6.—George Conroy, engineer, and Thomas A. Stockton, fireman, of a Pennsylvania mail train, had miraculous escapes from death in a wreck at Plainsborough early this morning.

A freight train had been wrecked by a misplaced switch, and the débris was scattered all over both tracks. Before danger signals could be sent back the mail train dashed up, running at the rate of fifty miles an hour. The locomotive rolled down an embankment thirty feet high with both men on it. It fell over them, when it stopped rolling, but happily there was a gully where they lay, and they escaped being crushed to death.

When Conroy crawled from beneath the locomotive he found that his ankle had been broken. Two years ago he was in an accident and his collar bone and right arm were broken. Stockton's injuries were slight.

The boys' strike at the plant of the Standard Oil Company located at the foot of Eighth Street, Long Island City, was declared off yesterday morning. "We heard," said a juvenile striker, "that Mr. Rockefeller was giving away a bunch of money to churches, and we thought that some of it ought to come our way." While they were being paid off the boys were told that they could come back to work, and they did so when the whistle sounded yesterday morning.

Acid Dentifrices Destroy the Teeth.

Millions of people are carelessly undermining their health in a way least suspected. THE GUARDS TO THE GATEWAY OF HEALTH ARE THE TEETH, and no constitution is so strong that it will not finally succumb to the improper mastication of food. And how can you properly masticate your food with loose, sore, sensitive teeth? These are only some of the results of the use of acid dentifrices and those filled with grit and other injurious substances. If you have been guilty of this gross injustice to one of the greatest organisms of the human system you should stop it at once.

Avoid an Acid Dentifrice.

There is no greater factor in the destruction of the teeth—in fact, it is the teeth's worst enemy. TEST YOUR DENTIFRICE. A trace of acid will turn blue litmus paper pink. Use this simple test. A perfect dentifrice should be slightly alkaline, in which case the blue litmus paper will retain its color. If you have no time nor inclination to make this test, by all means take our guarantee, backed up by our offer of

$1,000 in Gold

to any one who can disprove that SOZODONT is a non-acid. We declare that SOZODONT is slightly alkaline.

Respect for your teeth means health, comfort and pleasing personal appearance, and to obtain these we strongly recommend that you follow instructions:

How to Select a Dentifrice.

1st. IT MUST BE POSITIVELY NON-ACID.
2nd. IT MUST BE ONLY SLIGHTLY ALKALINE. (Soaps are too alkaline.)
3rd. IT MUST NOT CONTAIN ANY BLEACHING PREPARATION.
4th. IT MUST NOT BE GRITTY OR CONTAIN ANY SUBSTANCES INJURIOUS TO THE TEETH.
5th. IF A LIQUID, IT MUST BE PUT UP IN TRANSPARENT FLINT GLASS BOTTLES, SO YOU CAN SEE WHAT YOU ARE USING.

There is just one dentifrice in the world that can stand this test—the only one that has been in universal use in every country in the world for over sixty years and is conceded the greatest and safest dentifrice, one from which you derive the greatest value for the time and care expended upon your teeth—

5,000 IN POLICE PARADE GET A HEARTY OVATION

Cornerstone for New Headquarters Laid Before the March.

MEDALS OF HONOR PRESENTED

Mayor Pins Them on the Bluecoats—Crowds on Streets Applaud Their Favorite Commanders.

The city's police were on annual parade yesterday, and more than 600,000 persons saw a distinctly creditable display of its protectors of life and property. The paraders were over 5,000 strong.

There were three brigades, each in command of a Borough Inspector, composed of ten full regiments, each headed by an Inspector, and there was a famous show of police cavalry in the now famous traffic squad, and the intrepid mounted squad—now called cavalry.

The veteran policeman Chief Inspector Moses W. Cortright, who has passed through so many administrations unbesmirched, was in command, and led the march on his charger Jed.

The parade formed yesterday at Battery Place and Broadway and this thoroughfare was the route to Twenty-third Street, where Madison Avenue to Fortieth Street was taken. The parade then went to Fifth Avenue, and the head of the column halted at Twenty-ninth Street until 4 o'clock, when the march past the reviewing and grand stands at the Worth Monument was taken up.

Chief Inspector Cortright started at the head of the column at 1:50 o'clock, followed by the staff of nine Captains and Sergeants, of which the reinstated John T. Stephenson was chief. Following them were the wearers of medals of honor for 1898 to 1904, and those selected to receive such distinction this year.

Of the latter policemen F. G. Wilday of the East Twenty-second Street Station, who would have received the Rinelander Medal, was absent on account of illness, the result of a gallant rescue from drowning in a sewer-polluted pool of the East River.

Next came the police band, and then the traffic squad under Acting Inspector W. G. Hogan, and consisting of two troops of mounted men and a battalion of six companies of infantry.

The brigade and regiment formations follow:

First Brigade—Borough Inspector Nicholas Brooks commanding.

First Regiment—Inspector W. W. McLaughlin; Second Regiment—Inspector Donald Grant; Third Regiment—Inspector Elbert O. Smith; Fourth Regiment—Inspector Max F. Schmittberger.

Second Brigade—Borough Inspector Thomas Murphy commanding:

Fifth Regiment—Inspector George F. Titus; Sixth Regiment—Inspector George F. McClusky; Seventh Regiment—Inspector Richard Walsh.

Third Brigade—Borough Inspector Adam A. Cross commanding:

Eighth Regiment—Inspector James Kane; Ninth Regiment—Inspector Thomas L. Druhan; Tenth Regiment—Inspector John Wiegand.

Following the twelfth company of the regiment were the Harbor Police, the Bicycle Squad, and two troops in five platoons of police cavalry under the command of the Centaur Sergt. Gerard B. Hillyer. Each regiment had its band.

Special commanders were singled out by the crowds at various points and greeted with all sorts of plaudits. Of the brigade commanders Inspector Cross's reception was the most vociferous. He was reinstated to the department by the courts not long ago. Other reinstated men seemed to be favorites, among them Inspector Grant—"Adonis," as Senator Depew dubbed him—and Inspector Schmittberger. The rivals, Inspectors Titus and McClusky, received ovations in the financial quarter, and Inspector Walsh, "Smiling Dick," had friends in the theatre and hotel district. Of the company commanders those who appeared to have the most friends intent on making a fuss over them were Capts. Langan, Burfeind, J. W. O'Connor, Herlihy, Dennis Brennan, Joseph Burns, McGlynn, Halpin, McDermott, Flood, Cottrell, Gehegan, Aloncle, and Miles O'Reilly.

The review and grand stands at the Worth Monument were filled before 3 o'clock. On the stand where the Mayor's flag was displayed were R. A. C. Smith, Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, Peter F. Meyer, Hugh Hastings, Senator J. C. Fitzgerald, Assemblyman L. J. Tompkins, John P. Haines, Borough President Ahearn, ex-Capt. Vredenburgh, C. V. Fornes, Gen. Frederic Dent Grant, Gen. C. F. Roe, ex-Commissioner John N. Partridge, Gherardi Davis, Gen. George Moore Smith, F. S. Witherbee, Deputy Commissioners McAvoy, Farrell, and Lindsley, ex-Chief John H. McCullagh, Col. William Kipp, William Sulzer, Commissioner J. McG. Woodbury, Admiral J. B. Coghlan, and others.

Just before 4 o'clock Mayor McClellan arrived with Commissioner McAdoo and Col. Selden E. Marvin, Military Secretary representing Gov. Higgins, who is in Pennsylvania.

The Mayor walked over to the medal men drawn up in front of the review stand and pinned the Bell medal on the coat of Patrolman Sullivan, who, in August last year rescued Campbell Glover from drowning in the Harlem River at One Hundred and Fifty-ninth Street. In like manner the Mayor presented the Meyer medal to Detective Sergeant Galvin, who, at the Brooklyn Bridge last May, arrested Giuseppi Marcello, although severely injured by a pistol bullet from the prisoner's revolver. Patrolman Joseph J. Donovan of the Seventy-third Precinct, received the medal of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, for making the greatest number of arrests for cruelty last year.

Then came the march past, which occupied just an hour, and brought out volley after volley of applause.

PRAISE FOR TRAFFIC SQUAD.

Merchants' Association Speaker Says Nice Things in Presenting Flags.

After the cornerstone ceremonies the Mayor and Mr. McAdoo were present at the presentation of two flags to the Street Traffic Squad, in front of the New York Life Insurance Building, by the Merchants' Association, at 12:30 o'clock. A stand for 300 persons had been put up north of the building, and it was fully occupied by members of the Merchants' Association and their wives when the squad to be honored, mounted and on foot, came from Centre Street. They were, to a man, spick and span, and the buff leather harness and trappings of the horses suited them to perfection, as the animals were all fine bays.

It had been planned by the association's committee, which consisted of W. F. King, Chairman; John C. Eames, and W. A. Marble, to present to the squad two flags, one a superb infantry standard and the other a squadron flag with the squad's emblem, a horse's head on a wheel, but the latter is not yet finished, and will come into the possession of the squad next month. Chairman King, in his presentation address to Mr. McAdoo, said:

"There are probably no men connected with this department more proud this day of the work intrusted to them in safeguarding the lives of millions of men, women, and children; none who do their work with more thoroughness, cheerfulness, and pride, than the men of the Traffic Squad. To my mind, the reforms they have accomplished are great object lessons to the taxpayers of our city, showing what the Police Department can do with the assistance of patrolmen who are not molested or subjected to the fear of outside influences, which in the past have been so potent a force toward disorganization of the most important body maintained for public safety.

In his reply Commissioner McAdoo said the work had really been done by Capt. O'Brien and his men.

POLICE DINE AT WALDORF.

Traffic Squad Entertains its Friends —Kind Words from McAdoo.

The first annual dinner of the Street Traffic Regulation Bureau of the Police Department was held last night in the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria. Including the guests, 400 persons sat down to dinner, the majority being in the uniform of the department. It was held Feast where bouquets were thrown at Police Commissioner McAdoo, Inspector Stephen O'Brien, ex-Deputy Commissioner Piper, Controller Grout, and the police force as a body.

The big fellows in blue after the exercise of the parade in the afternoon did more than justice to the dinner, which they had paid for themselves. Mr. McAdoo began the speechmaking.

"You owned the town to-day," he said. "The town was proud of you and no citizen more proud than the Police Commissioner. I heard so many good things about you from citizens, officers of the army and navy, and from visiting foreigners, here to study our institutions, that I must warn you to be modest if you are to continue to be useful.

"Unfortunately, Mayor McClellan could not be with us to-night, but you must remember that you have no firmer friend than he is. Again and again he expressed his pride in you this afternoon as you marched by us.

"You may think that I am hard on you at times. The Captain of a ship does not always know what his men think of him. As an Irish sailor said to his departing officer that there would be many a dry eye when he went over the side of the ship, so when I go up the wrong side of Mulberry Street there will be many a dry eye. When you think that my discipline is too rigorous, remember it is because I respect you and want the public to believe in you. I punish the unworthy to protect the worthy.

"I don't want to boast, but truly the scenes of violence and murder occurring in another city could not take place in New York. I have five fighting Captains who could restore order in twenty-four hours. But remember that we must be careful about the personal liberty of the citizen. The Judges in Brooklyn will see to that.

"I cannot order that you should place violent hands on the chauffeurs, and so have ordered that you take off your hats to the offenders when you explain that the legal rate is not over eight miles an hour. In the light of the Brooklyn belief, be sure that you do not trespass on the personal liberty of the man who is killing his fellow-citizen.

"We have a force of Chesterfields who are polite to even the hackman who wears a fur cap in July to designate his right to run over people. Do not harm him, but admonish him to be gentle in the pursuit of his murderous career.

"With 200 years of murder behind them the free-born cabmen have been a little hard at first to manage. Capt. Steve O'Brien solved the riddle. The cabmen and the other drivers are now taking kindly to the regulations, for they have seen that you will stop the carriage of a Mrs. Vanderbilt with the same courtesy as you will the car of a Mrs. McDuffey, if either is driving too fast."

Other speakers were Controller Grout, Capt. Piper, Capt. O'Brien, William F. King of the Merchants' Association, Charles V. Fornes, and the Deputy Police Commissioners. On behalf of the Merchants' Association an engrossed and framed set of resolutions, commending him for his achievements in regulating street traffic, was presented to Capt. O'Brien.

FOR NEW HEADQUARTERS.

Mayor Lays Cornerstone on the Site of Old Centre Market.

The cornerstone of the new Police Headquarters, which is to be on the site of the old Centre Market, at Grand and Centre Streets, was laid at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning. A stand had been erected on the southwest corner of the plot, which is less than a hundred yards from the building in Lafayette Street, which was the Police Headquarters before the move to Mulberry Street.

A cordon of foot and mounted men of the Traffic Squad kept the crowd back, and music was furnished by the police band, led by Prof. John G. Frank. On the platform besides Mayor McClellan, Commissioner McAdoo, and the architect, Francis L. V. Hoppin, were a number of women, including Mrs. and Miss McAdoo, ex-Commissioner John N. Partridge, Mgr. Lavelle, Deputy Commissioners McAvoy, Lindsley, and Farrell, ex-Chief John H. McCullagh, Controller Grout, Lispenard Stewart, Col. William Kipp, the Rev. Howard Duffield, the Rev. James Connelly, Hugh Dalton, ex-Deputy Commissioners F. H. Ebstein and Alexander Piper, Acting Inspector Stephen O'Brien, T. J. Oakley, Philip Rhinelander, and President C. V. Fornes.

When the officiating party had grouped around the cornerstone, a five-ton block of Quincy granite, which was over a recess, which contained coins, newspapers of the day, and police rules and records, Dr. Duffield offered an invocation. Mayor McClellan took an ivory-handled silver trowel, and, after dipping it in the mortar, which is now the bed of the corner stone, made a short address. He said:

"May this building house a force of honest and honorable men. May it live and serve us as an example for all that is good, all that is just, all that is righteous. Commissioner, I, on behalf of the people of this city, give over to you this new Headquarters for your force, confident that the trust reposed in you by the people will never be betrayed."

Commissioner McAdoo replied to the Mayor.

GET WOMAN WHO LEFT CHILD DYING ON PIER

Susie Edwards Arrested While Leaving Boat at Norfolk.

POISON THEORY STILL HELD

Spinal Meningitis Only Other Explanation from Coroner's Physician—Child May Have Drunk Perfume.

Word was received in this city yesterday of the arrest at Norfolk, Va., of Susie Edwards, the colored woman who sailed on Friday afternoon on the Dominion Line steamer Jefferson, leaving on the dock a ten-year-old colored girl who shortly afterward became violently ill and died in the Hudson Street Hospital under conditions that indicated poisoning.

An autopsy performed by Coroner's physician Albert T. Weston last night led him to believe that the child could have died from one of only two causes, cerebro-spinal meningitis or poisoning.

"I am not prepared, however," said Dr. Weston, "to give a decided opinion on the matter until the contents of the stomach have been examined by a bacteriologist and a chemist. I have excluded every possible cause but meningitis and poison, but I will admit that the disappearance of the woman who was in charge of the child and the fact that no one has since turned up to claim it tend to exclude even the idea of cerebro-spinal meningitis."

Another theory to account for the suspicious death of the little colored girl arises from a cologne bottle which was found in a grip with some picture books and toys belonging to the child. The bottle had recently contained cologne, and it is believed that possibly the child drank the perfume, which may have contained from 40 to 95 per cent. pure alcohol.

Detectives of the Central Office and the police of the Leonard Street Station were busy yesterday trying to find another colored woman who was seen on the Dominion deck with the Edwards woman and the child. This woman disappeared before the boat sailed and did not return, as the dock employes expected, to take charge of the little colored girl after Susie Edwards went off on the Jefferson.

Special to The New York Times.

NORFOLK, Va., May 6.—Susie Edwards, colored, of Enterprise, N. C., who was arrested this afternoon on the steamer Jefferson, charged with having abandoned in the waiting room of the Old Dominion Line in New York a nine-year-old colored girl, who died, denies all knowledge of who the child is. She said that while at the pier a colored woman came in with the child and requested that she take care of it while the other woman went out for a few moments. When it was time for the boat to leave the woman had not returned, and the Edwards woman says that she boarded the steamer, leaving the child in the waiting room. She says that she does not know the woman who brought the child, and could give no description of her. The prisoner says that she is willing to return to New York without requisition papers.

POLICEMAN KILLS HIMSELF.

O'Beirne Accidentally Shot While Preparing for the Parade.

While dressing himself to report for duty in the police parade yesterday, Policeman Thomas O'Beirne, forty-five years old, attached to the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth Street Station, shot himself in the left breast with his revolver in his home on the top floor at 364 East One Hundred and Twenty-first Street, and died in a few minutes. He was alone when he shot himself, but his wife declared that the shooting was accidental. It is certain, his family and fellow-officers say, that he had no motive for suicide.

O'Beirne was unconscious when his wife found him, and he did not regain his senses.

O'Beirne was appointed to the police force on Sept. 26, 1888. He leaves a widow, two daughters, and a son.

O'Beirne was a brother of Patrick J. O'Beirne, lawyer and former Alderman, who gained some fame several years ago by opposing Richard Croker.

SECOND ROCKEFELLER REPLY TO DR. GLADDEN

Murphy Calls Standard Oil Critic's Attack Puerile.

NO MOTIVE FOR ANY PERJURY

Rockefeller Answered Questions About Both Improvement Companies, Lawyer Says.

The following official statement was made yesterday by Starr J. Murphy, of counsel for John D. Rockefeller, in reply to Dr. Washington Gladden's latest attack upon Mr. Rockefeller:

"My attention has just been called to a dispatch from Columbus, Ohio, dated April 29, in which Dr. Gladden replies to my former statement in answer to his accusation that Mr. Rockefeller testified falsely with regard to his connection with the South Improvement Company. Inasmuch as Dr. Gladden now quotes the testimony, showing that the company concerning which Mr. Rockefeller was being interrogated was not, as originally stated, the South Improvement Company, but the Southern Improvement Company, there remains only the question whether these were the same corporation. As Dr. Gladden says that he has succeeded in finding the act to incorporate the Southern Improvement Company, it is unnecessary to refer to the page where that is printed. He says that he has searched the records and cannot find any such corporation as the South Improvement Company, and asserts 'No such company was incorporated on the day he names, May 6, 1871.' If Dr. Gladden will take the Laws of Pennsylvania for the year 1872 he will find in the index, page 1,488, the following:

"Improvement Companies, South, act to incorporate 1278

"If he will turn to page 1,278 he will find it entitled 'Appendix—1871,' and on that page, set forth in full, the charter of the South Improvement Company, approved the 6th day of May, 1871. If he will then turn to page 715 he will find an act entitled 'An act to repeal the charter of the South Improvement Company,' and reading as follows: 'Be it enacted • • • that the act entitled, "An act to incorporate the South Improvement Company," approved the sixth day of May, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred seventy-one, be and the same is hereby repealed.' Dr. Gladden's chief authority, Miss Tarbell, in her history, Vol. 1, Page 94, says that the Pennsylvania Legislature repealed the charter of the South Improvement Company. This is the repealing act, and the fact that it gives the name of the corporation correctly, and refers to the date of its passage, shows that there is no excuse for confusing this with any other corporation. So much for Dr. Gladden's competence as an investigator. There is no foundation whatever for his statement that the charter of the Southern Improvement Company was purchased by Mr. Rockefeller and his friends.

"Dr. Gladden's former article to which I replied amounted to the charge that Mr. Rockefeller had committed perjury in falsely testifying that he was not connected with the South Improvement Company. I have shown, and Dr. Gladden's reply admits, that he was not asked about the South Improvement Company, but about a totally different corporation. He now seeks to shift the issue by saying that Mr. Rockefeller was bound to answer, not the question that was asked him, but some other question which he might have imagined the examiner had intended to ask him. This is puerile. A witness on the stand is bound to answer the question which is asked, and he is not required, nor is he permitted, to assume that the examiner did not say what he meant.

"Furthermore, perjury is a serious crime, and no person with any proper sense of responsibility for his utterances would accuse another of it, without first inquiring whether there was any apparent motive. There could have been no possible motive for Mr. Rockefeller to testify falsely with regard to his connection with the South Improvement Company, and if Dr. Gladden had pursued his inquiries a little further he would have seen that there was no desire on his part to do so. The South Improvement Company was investigated by a committee of Congress in 1872, and on March 30 of that year Mr. William G. Warden, Secretary of the company, gave a list of the stockholders, including the name of John D. Rockefeller. It had therefore been matter of public record and public notoriety for sixteen years prior to the examination which Dr. Gladden speaks of, that Mr. Rockefeller had been a stockholder of the South Improvement Company, and it would have been the height of folly for him to have denied his connection with it, even if there had been any object in his doing so. There was no such object. If Dr. Gladden will examine the testimony taken by the House of Representatives with relation to the Standard Oil Company in 1888, he will find on Page 387 that Mr. Rockefeller was then examined concerning the South Improvement Company, and testified with the utmost frankness with regard to his connection with it.

"It thus is proved: First, that in the passage which formed the basis of Dr. Gladden's charge, Mr. Rockefeller was not examined with regard to the South Improvement Company, but with regard to the Southern Improvement Company, and that his testimony was true; second, that the South Improvement Company and the Southern Improvement Company were totally distinct corporations; third, that Mr. Rockefeller could have had no possible motive for testifying that he was not connected with the South Improvement Company, nor did he so testify; and, fourth, that when he was examined concerning the South Improvement Company he testified with perfect frankness with regard to his connection with it."

TEXAS INSURANCE TAXES.

New Bill to Meet Points of Law Raised by Companies.

Special to The New York Times.

DALLAS, Texas, May 6.—The Texas Legislature recently at its regular session passed a law which was to become effective July 15 next, taxing the gross receipts or premiums of insurance companies doing business in Texas. The foreign insurance companies at once went to the Federal court and enjoined the State officials from enforcing the new law, on the ground of unconstitutionality.

A special session of the Legislature is in session to provide revenue for State purposes and Gov. Lanham has sent in the following message:

I present the following additional subjects for legislation: To provide by general law for taxation of premium receipts of foreign and domestic insurance companies, or either, and to provide by general law for levying a franchise tax on foreign and domestic insurance companies, or either.

The laws passed by the regular session of the Twenty-ninth Legislature on the above subjects are now being contested in the courts on the ground of their unconstitutionality. I recommend such legislation as may in your judgment be necessary to place the revenue laws on the above subjects beyond question.

A new bill has been prepared which overcomes the alleged unconstitutional features cited by the companies, and the Legislature is inclined to "rub it in" so to speak, by making the tax provisions approximately 25 per cent. higher than new legislation

CUMMINS'S TARIFF WARNING.

Must Get a New Congress to Get Reciprocity, He Says.

CHICAGO, May 6.—Gov. A. B. Cummins of Iowa and ex-Senator W. A. Harris of Kansas were among the speakers to-day at a luncheon for foreign Consuls by the Chicago Commercial Association at the Auditorium. Gov. Cummins pointed out the danger of a disastrous trade war for America, and said:

"Canada has been knocking at our doors for years for fair trade, and we have blindly rejected her advances, until now, I fear, the door of opportunity is forever closed. And yet they have lain ever since in the dusty and neglected archives of a Senate which refuses even to discuss or consider them.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The marriage of Miss Frances Newlands, daughter of Senator Newlands of Nevada, to Lieut. Leopold von Bredow of the German Army, late an Attaché of the German Embassy in this city, but now on duty with his regiment in Berlin, took place to-day at noon at Woodley, the country home of the bride's father, near this city.

The absence from the ceremony of the German Ambassador, Baron von Sternburg, and the Baroness von Sternburg, both of whom are in the city, was the subject of widespread comment. The Baroness was a prominent participant in a horse show for charity to-day. Their failure to attend the wedding is attributed to a feud that has caused trouble in German Embassy circles for over two years.

Lieut. von Bredow was appointed to the embassy four years ago, serving under the former Ambassador, Dr. von Holleben, as well as under Baron von Sternburg. He was one of the faithful adherents of the Holleben régime, who deeply resented the succession of the present Ambassador, and with the former First Secretary of the Embassy, Count Quadt-Wykrad-Isny, is credited with the social policy toward the present Ambassador and family which soon led to the recall or transfer of nearly the entire staff.

At the wedding to-day Lieut. von Bredow, who was attended by Herr Frederich von Verdy du Vernois, Third Secretary of the German Embassy, wore his full dress uniform of "Gardekuerassiere" of white cloth, with trimming of gold and red, black helmet and boots, the helmet surmounted by a golden eagle to indicate service in the line.

Miss Newlands wore the convention white satin, trimmed in superb lace, with tulle veil and orange blossoms. She was escorted to the floral altar erected in the drawing room by her father, who gave her in marriage, according to the service of the Episcopal Church. The Rev. T. S. Childs of All Saints' Church officiated. There were no bridesmaids. No additional guests were invited to the wedding breakfast, which followed immediately. Early in the afternoon Lieut. von Bredow and his bride left for a short honeymoon trip. They will return to Woodley next week and sail for Germany May 29.

Frau von Bredow, who made her début four years ago, is the youngest of the three daughters of the Nevada Senator by his first marriage and a granddaughter of the late Senator Sharon of California. Through her mother she inherited a large fortune which she enjoys in her own right.

She won her degree from the Columbian University in this city before making her début in society, is an accomplished linguist, has traveled abroad extensively, and is an especially keen horsewoman, although delicate in appearance and considerably under medium height.

Her elder sisters married two years ago, Miss Edythe Newlands becoming Mrs. Charles Johnston and Miss Janet Newlands Mrs. William B. Johnston, the bridegrooms being brothers and sons of the late Dr. W. W. Johnston of this city. Charles Johnston at the time of his marriage was an instructor in a preparatory school at Boston, and had previously acted as private secretary to his bride's father. Dr. William Johnston was a promising young physician, but shortly after his marriage his health failed, and with his wife he has gone abroad for an indefinite period.

FINN'S RULE FOR "DRUNKS."

Hard-Working Men to Go Free, "Bums" to the Island.

Magistrate Daniel E. Finn, "Battery Dan," sat as a Police Magistrate for the first time in the Tombs Court yesterday, and his friends made of the grim old courtroom a literal bower of flowers. One basket of rare orchids in the collection is said to have cost $300. Long before the time for court to open the room was filled with friends and political followers of the new Judge.

The line of prisoners before the bench was unusually small. All were "drunks," two being from "Battery Dan's" own district, Battery Park. The court discharged them all with gentle reprimands "to go forth and sin no more."

When the first prisoner was arraigned Lawyer W. J. A. Gaffrey, former law partner of the new Magistrate, stepped up to the bridge to appear for the prisoner.

"Your Honor," he said, "in appearing for this unfortunate mortal, I ask you to exercise that judicial clemency which, from long association with you, I know exists in your heart."

Magistrate Finn said:

"I am going to discharge this man because he says he has a family to support. I wish to say that when any hard-working man is brought before me for being drunk, and has been locked up all night I am going to discharge him. He has been sufficiently punished, and I believe the infliction of a fine imposes a hardship and possible suffering on his family. In the case of so-called 'bums' I am in the future going to send them to the Island."

BEGGED TO SUPPORT GIRLS.

Grandmother Took Good Care of Children Whose Mother Was Dead.

Because their grandmother, Mrs. Catherine O'Connor, seventy-three years old, of 18 Cherry Street, who supported them, was sent to Blackwell's Island for a term of six months for begging, Mary Andrews, fourteen years old, and her four-year-old sister, Ellen, were committed yesterday by Justice McKean in the Children's Court to the Dominican Home.

Mrs. O'Connor was arrested on Thursday afternoon by Patrolman Brennan, and the following morning was sentenced by Magistrate Barlow in the Essex Market Court. Brennan declared that she was a professional beggar. When her grandchildren appeared in court after she had been committed, to ask for her release, they were taken into custody by agents of the Children's Society. The children, who were well dressed, said that they did not know of their grandmother's actions. The older girl was surprised to hear that the old woman had secured

THE NEW CITY GOVERNMENT.

Two bills were passed by the Legislature at the session just closed which, if they receive the approval of the Governor, as they are practically sure to do, will give to this city something like a new Government. That is to say, these laws will work a very substantial change in the distribution of powers, and especially in the possible use of the powers intrusted to the Mayor.

One bill extends the term of the Mayor to four years. The other transfers to the Board of Apportionment the powers of the Board of Aldermen over franchises. The two, taken together, manifestly strengthen greatly the principle of the concentration of power and responsibility. The Aldermen may be said to be almost eliminated from the City Government, since the specific powers remaining to them are not such as to give them either influence or opportunity. They cannot, officially at least, impose their will on the Mayor, or upon other members of the City Government. Their power and with it their prestige passes to the members of the Board of Apportionment, and a considerable part of it increases the influence of the Mayor, in addition to the very great enhancement of that power on account of the extension of his term. It is no exaggeration to say that the legislation of this session confers the major part of the municipal governmental functions on the Mayor and the Controller, and the President of the Board of Aldermen, with a conspicuous preponderance in the hands of the Mayor himself.

Undoubtedly the possibility of such a radical change from the hands of a Republican Legislature was due in chief part to the record of Mayor McCLELLAN and to the qualities demonstrated by that record. It is not necessary to paint this record in too glowing colors. In accordance with a well-known principle of optics, a moderately bright object stands out much more vividly against a sombre background, and the public mind sees the record of Mayor McCLELLAN against the gloomy expectations which Tammany had awakened. He has been so much better a Mayor than most of us thought that he could be that there is an unavoidable tendency to regard him as rather better than actually he has proved himself to be. But we can make all allowances we choose for this familiar phenomenon, and it remains true that an extension of the term of the Mayor would not have been conceded by the Legislature, and would not be welcomed by the intelligent people of New York, had not the present Mayor won a very decided degree of confidence in his good intentions and in his ability. His position in that respect is made plainer and more significant by the fact that he protested openly and urgently against the one staring manifestation of Tammanyism in the Legislature, the votes of all but two of the Tammany members against the bills to release the city from the grasp of the gas and electric light companies. The contrast between their votes and his telegrams of protest stands out very clearly, very brilliantly.

The situation presented at this moment is a striking one. A Mayor who has made a surprisingly good impression on the public mind, at the close of the session of the Legislature openly rebukes the representatives of all there is worst in his party machine, and passes to the canvass in which are to be decided the nomination and election of a Mayor for four years. Should he desire the renomination, it is practically out of the power of Tammany to refuse it except at the cost of almost certain defeat. So far as can now be seen he can have a renomination, and have it on his own terms. He can have it, that is to say, with the assurance that in the four years he shall be free to give to the city in all the matters embraced by his extraordinary powers an administration in accordance with his own standards, which he can fix as high as he chooses. We have frequently avowed our conviction that Mr. McCLELLAN sincerely wished to give to the city as good a Government as his party machine would permit. After January of next year, if he shall so decide, it will be for him to say, and not for his party machine to say, practically, how good the Government shall be. We do not mean that he can accomplish miracles, or that he can attain perfection in himself or his agents; but we do mean that far more than any other Mayor we have had it will be within his discretion to shape the whole administration. His office will give him very great powers and his party must give him the office unless it deliberately prefers almost inevitable defeat.

Will Mr. McCLELLAN rise to the occasion? That is a question that no one can now answer. He has done much that indicates his ability and willingness so to do. But it cannot be said that he has been subjected to an absolutely decisive test. For one thing, he has not been called on to face the open hostility of Tammany. Tammany, on the contrary, maintains an attitude of apparent friendliness and approval calculated to excite reasonable suspicion. No one on the outside can say whether this attitude is sincere, or whether it is dictated by prudence. If it be the latter, the extension of the Mayor's term will make prudence still more imperative. In any case it presents to a man still young, a man of demonstrated ability within limits heretofore rather narrow, to show what he can do on a much wider and more important field. With entire moderation it may be said that a greater opportunity hardly exists for any man in official life to-day in this country.

THE MOROCCAN QUESTION.

It is rather astonishing to an American to observe how large a space in the European press the Moroccan incident and its sequels continue to occupy. On the face of it, the initiatory "incident" was merely a speech of the German Kaiser's at a luncheon given to him by German Merchants in Tangier, a speech which has never yet been authentically reported or officially avowed. It may be inferred to have consisted of remarks which the imperial orator thought likely to please his subjects and hosts. But the subjects and hosts, after hearing it, proceeded to walk about with chips on their shoulders, intimating that Germany would "show" France and Great Britain what the English guarantee of the French protectorate amounted to, or rather to what it did not amount. In fact, what seemed to have happened was a "gentleman's agreement" between the two chief naval powers of the Mediterranean, one recognizing the protectorate of the other over one Mediterranean country in return for a like recognition of its own protectorate over another. The interests of Germany, being purely commercial, might be supposed to have been sufficiently safeguarded by the promise of France to maintain the "open door" in Morocco.

Nevertheless, it has appeared that Germany took umbrage at the conclusion of the Anglo-French agreement without consulting her. The resignation of M. DELCASSE, although he was induced to withdraw it, is commonly ascribed in France to the machinations of Germany. The Parisian press seems to be of the opinion, expressed by Sir ROWLAND BLENNERHASSETT in the current number of The Fortnightly Review, that "German policy, though more clumsily contrived than in BISMARCK's day, still has as its constant objective the isolation of France." The Matin of Paris, in support of this view, recalling the attempt made by BISMARCK to interfere in the domestic politics of France, quotes the protest made by that statesman, in the form of a note to the French Moniteur Officiel, against a decree promulgated by GAMBETTA in 1871, and adds: "The French statesman who is made an object of attack from Berlin, and whose overthrow is sought by brutal or treacherous means, is certain of enjoying in France a popularity proportionate to the hatred which he excites abroad." That clearly appears to be the case with respect to M. DELCASSE.

It would be a curious result of the German objections to the Anglo-French "understanding" that they should convert that understanding into a formal alliance. And yet that result is by no means out of the question. It would be as distinctly a natural alliance as that of France and Russia is unnatural. For it would be the union of the two European nations which are politically most advanced, and which acknowledge allegiance to the same political ideals. Although our traditional objections to "entangling alliances" would prevent our joining such a combination, yet, by reason of our own political advancement and our own political ideals, such a combination would without doubt command our unofficial sympathy. The remarks of Mr. McCORMICK, our new Ambassador at Paris, upon his reception by M. LOUBET, which have perhaps attracted less attention at home than they deserve, might even indicate that they would command our official sympathy. At any rate, it does not seem likely that the German Government will derive much benefit from its latest exhibition of "dynastic politics."

COMPANION REPUBLICAN MEASURES.

The Republican Legislature feared political consequences when it passed the Greater New York Water bill with the section excluded which grants this city full control for sale and street lighting of electricity to be derived from water power in the Catskills. It therefore characteristically passed two further measures, of which the first with apparent frankness concedes to the city the right to light its streets by its own water power, although denying [illegible] the second [illegible]

THE CHOATE BANQUET.

The banquet of Friday evening to the departing American Ambassador to Great Britain was the culminating compliment of what may be called Mr. CHOATE's farewell tour of London. Certainly there was nothing in it of anti-climax. From a British point of view a banquet which assembles the Prime Minister, the leader of "His Majesty's Opposition," the Archbishop of Canterbury, and the Duke of WELLINGTON would be sufficiently notable and memorable on that account. From an American point of view the fact that the Mayors of the leading English provincial cities had taken the trouble to come on for the sake of doing honor to the representative of America and the guest of London, and that the Lord Mayor's board was moreover graced by the most distinguished living Englishmen in literature, science, and art, will seem even more significant.

It were as difficult as invidious to attempt to apportion and distribute between the guest and his country this very remarkable "international demonstration." Mr. CHOATE's own modest remarks left himself, personally, with too small a share. He has been a capital representative of his own country in his ancestral country, and has evidently attracted to himself the warm personal good-will of those who have met him and of the whole British public. But it would be belittling the significance of the occasion, as he felt and said, to attribute the whole demonstration to that personal good-will. The plain fact is that the English people, from top to bottom, have come to like us and to believe in us, our politics only excepted, that they wish to stand well with us, and that they gladly seize a suitable opportunity for saying so. Very well! We like them and believe in them, not even excepting their politics, which are so rapidly coming our way, and we wish to stand well with them. Such a state of feeling on both sides is not only an excellent thing for both nations concerned. It is of excellent augury for the peace and prosperity and progress of the whole world.

CONSEQUENCES OF STERNUTATION

Not long ago a respected New Hampshire divine while conducting service was seized with a fit of sneezing which, after a vain effort to "live it down," compelled him to leave the pulpit. Affected by a spasm of similar kind a Waterbury laborer working a few days ago in the coalyard there suddenly found himself doubled up so that no effort of his own or of his fellow-workmen or the two doctors who were called in could avail to straighten him out. The latter, however, held out hopes that he would limber up after a while and move about in erect attitudes, as usual. More striking than either of these occurrences was the result of an entirely ladylike sneeze on the part of a young female typewriter employed in one of the large public buildings in Washington. This sternutatory zephyr brought down, fortunately with no injury to the young lady, though greatly to her surprise, several tons of ceiling, leaving its ornamental designs in shattered ruin on the floor.

These occurrences seem to signify that the sneeze may at times possess occult powers not hitherto ascribed to it. The physiological agitation it is capable of producing has been well enough known; doctors have dwelt on it in their treatises and set down remedial formularies for it, but its extraordinary vibratory potencies, illustrated by the dropped ceiling and comparable with the quavering of those Biblical rams' horns which shook down the walls of Jericho, have not hitherto been suspected. That almost supernatural forces resided in vibration was declared in and out of season and at the top of his own confident voice by the late KEELEY of motor fame, who professed his ability to drive a heavy train of cars a hundred miles an hour on some vibratory arrangement the physical basis of which was not larger than a tea cup. His achievement, of course, did not come up to his profession; in fact, he never reached the point of any achievement whatever except a few phenomena originating in jugglery and fraud; but his pretensions made a certain impression on the public mind, or part of it, leading to the surmise that there might be something in them.

A good many people had noticed how massive churches sometimes trembled when a certain note was struck on the organ, and perhaps some of them had seen a powerful bridge to bear up elephants and St. Patrick's Day processions shaken almost to falling by the trotting of a very inconsiderable dog across it. The starting and downfall of a heavy ceiling by a light pneumatic spasm was in line with these phenomena, and the subject in general now invites examination. If a simple female sneeze is capable of shattering a public edifice the sooner we know it the better; but if that fortuitous paroxysm merely synchronizes with an architectural cataclysm bound to happen anyway, that aspect of the case ought to be made clear, and any soft sternutatory explosion which may take place hereafter at the same time that some neighboring jerry building is tumbling down be cleared of a responsibility which does not belong to it and delivered from a censure which it does not deserve. PIPE GALLERIES.

One of the enactments of the Legislature which will do much to leave it in kindly remembrance, is the passage of the Gardner Pipe Gallery bill, which has survived vivisection, emasculation, and other rude surgery and finally gone to the Governor in much better shape than could have been expected. That the Governor will approve it is not open to reasonable doubt. It provides that in future extensions of the subway system of New York pipe galleries shall be built in connection with the tunnels at the time they are constructed and as part of the work. This places the matter where it should be—at least so far as concerns the streets excavated for subways—under the control of the Rapid Transit Commission. In the last report of the Plans Committee of the commission, the need of such legislation as is embodied in the Gardner bill was set forth as follows:

> It has always been the desire of the board, and so far as legal limitations would permit it has been the policy of the board, to provide for pipe galleries to accommodate pipes, wires, sewers, and other sub-surface structures. In the general plan for the rapid transit railroad now under construction, it was expressly provided that along Elm Street suitable galleries might be placed at the outside of the exterior tracks, and on April 19, 1900, the board passed a resolution requiring the contractor to construct such pipe galleries on Elm Street, between the south side of Worth Street and the north side of Astor Place. Such construction was actually begun, and continued until about Nov. 1, 1900, on which date a communication was received from the city authorities stating it as the opinion of the Departments of Sewers and Water Supply that the interests of the city would be best served by not locating either the sewers or the water pipes in such galleries. It was therefore determined by the Rapid Transit Board, in deference to the views expressed, not to proceed further with such construction. In order to enable the board effectually to deal with the subject, legislation will be necessary which should enable it to provide for the construction of pipe galleries in connection with and as a part of the construction of any proposed new lines wherever the board, in its discretion, might think such pipe galleries desirable.

The corporate opposition to any recognition of the pipe gallery in the schemes of future municipal improvement was extremely strong, and that it was not effective in resisting the passage of the Gardner bill is quite as much a matter of surprise as of congratulation. These influences were potent to defeat the Elsberg bill introduced early in the session, but they seem to have failed later. We may now expect a resumption of the effort to influence public opinion against pipe galleries on the ground of the danger incident to their use. The gas interest has made a great many timid people believe that to run gas mains in tunnels would constitute a perpetual menace to life and property. As a matter of fact, the dangers resulting from the existing conditions are immeasurably greater than have ever been found to exist in connection with pipe galleries anywhere. It is an interesting fact that a considerable proportion of the gas supply of Manhattan is now brought to it through mains laid in a tunnel under the East River, and that when the Astoria project is fully carried out all of it will be. Probably this is the only portion of the gas main system of New York which does not leak an average of something like a million cubic feet a mile per annum.

It needs no argument to show that New York cannot be a clean, orderly, or beautiful city, nor one comfortable and safe to live in, until street excavation is minimized. Undertakings like the Rapid Transit Subway, the Pennsylvania terminal and its interborough tunnel, and the New York Central Terminal improvement, must be classed by themselves. Great and permanent public improvements necessarily involve present sacrifices for the attainment of future benefits. To work which has to be done over and over again, like the repairing of buried mains, each time with the destruction [illegible]

The letter elsewhere printed, in which a correspondent complains of his treatment at Belmont Park on the opening day, is worth the serious attention of the managers of that resort. In so far as he suffered from the unmannerliness of the attendants, our correspondent's grievance would seem to be easily susceptible of redress. But it is also evident that his complaint goes to the general arrangements of the new resort, and to the stigmatization which those arrangements inflict upon the paying public as compared with the "insiders." Nobody, we are sure, better appreciates than the managers of the new race track that its prosperity depends upon the removal of all causes for complaint on this score. Certainly nobody ought to understand better than they that the success, not only of this race track, but of racing in general, depends upon the appeal it makes to the masses of the people, who will neither "stand" for, nor stand, their exclusion from all the advantages of a track all the expenses of which they are expected to defray.

BIBLICAL INSPIRATION.

Some of the Contradictory Passages and What They Signify.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In to-day's issue of THE TIMES the writer of the letter, headed, "Inspiration of the Bible," says: "While the differing and contradictory accounts of the same event, which are placed side by side as if to invite our attention to their discrepancies seem to warn us against such an assumption," (of infallibility.) Sir, with your permission, I will quote some of these contradictory passages in the Gospel:

St. Mark, xv., 40: "There were also women 'afar off,' among whom was Mary Magdalene."

St. John, xix., 25: "Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and Mary Magdalene."

Mary could not have been in the two places at one time.

St. Mark, xvi., 34: "And at the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying: 'Eloi! Eloi, lama sabachtani,' which is, being interpreted: 'My God! My God! Why hast thou forsaken me?'"

This interpretation is erroneous. The Hebrew sabachtani is, translated, "Hast thou sacrificed me?" The Hebrew word for hast thou forsaken me is "asabtani."

St. Luke, xxiv., 46: "And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, He said: 'Father! Into thy hands I commend my spirit.'"

As both passages agree that Jesus uttered only one Biblical verse in His death agony, which version is the correct one?

St. Luke, x., 50: "And Jesus said forbid him not, for he that is not against us is for us."

St. Luke, xi., 23: "He that is not with me is against me."

Both passages seem to allude to a neutral person, who visibly inclines neither to nor against the tenet of Christ. In the first quoted passage Christ is quoted by St. Luke as judging and declaring a man who is not openly against Him as for Him, because, otherwise, he would come out openly against him; therefore, he gets the benefit of any remaining doubt. In the second quoted passage St. Luke makes Christ reverse himself by declaring that, as he is not openly for Him, although neither openly against Him, he is by inference against "Me."

The Gospels were not written at the time all those events happened. The nearest was written more than a generation after Christ's death. Matthew wrote his Gospel in 64 A. D., Mark and St. Luke 63, and St. John 97. It is obvious and in accordance with common sense that their chronicle is more a depository of gathered information obtained from different sources than the record of what they knew of their own knowledge and saw with their own eyes; and their record does not differ from a record of the German-French war, should anybody write it in our days, so remote from the time it happened, whose accuracy will naturally be founded on information and hearsay evidence. The Peril of Niagara Falls.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The representatives of the people of this State have no more right to give away Niagara Falls than our local rulers would have to give Central Park to a band of real estate speculators. If our laws sanction this vandalism the sooner they are revised the better. These greedy, heartless corporations which are despoiling Niagara Falls are fostering Socialism, if not Anarchy. They are themselves Anarchists, not only against society but against the Master of Creation. It is to be hoped that the almost unanimous sentiment of the people against the spoliation of the Falls will soon take such shape as to not only render further encroachment impossible, but also result in the reclamation of the part already taken.

The Patterson Case Extravagance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial on the Patterson case was a very fair and candid discussion of that case. Is there no limit to the cost of trials like several we have had? Is it a proper expenditure of the people's money to "buy" testimony, (I use the word advisedly,) as in the Hains case, or the Molineux case, where great sums were paid to so-called experts? I was glad to read your editorial.

$5 to Get in on the Ground Floor and Out by Way of the Sky.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The many published criticisms of the new Belmont Park race track, pointing out that it has been constructed with an eye solely to the comfort and convenience of the small number of persons admitted to the clubhouse, prompt me to write to you of my personal experience at the track on Thursday last, the opening day, as illustrating very strongly, it seems to me, the disregard of the management for the welfare of the great majority of racegoers, the fees received from whom make racing possible.

My party occupied reserved seats in the section of the grand stand nearest the clubhouse. These seats were at the very front of the grand stand, the best offered to the general public; and $5 each, the modest price asked by the association, was paid for them, in addition to the regular fee for admission. The reserved-seat inclosure, a parallelogram, had but one entrance and exit, and that facing a short flight of steps which descended to the wide passage in the rear of the Turf and Field Club boxes, leading to the rear of the grandstand, and thence to the ground, an obvious and easy exit. This passage had been used by us in reaching our seats, and no question was made at any time during the day of our right to enter it from below and ascend to our seats. When, however, between races we desired to descend to the ground the attendants declared that we could not use this passage, but must ascend a flight of steps to the extreme top and rear of the grand stand, thence to make our way along half its length and descend half a dozen flights of steps adjoining the betting ring.

After the Metropolitan Handicap we started to leave the grounds, and one of the ladies of my party, faint with the previous exertion and almost ill from the severe cold weather of the day, protested that it was physically impossible for her to make the ascent I have mentioned. The attendants remained obdurate—and impolite—and when I protested further, produced a rope and stretched it across the exit. I left the ladies to look up officers of the association and explain the situation to them. It was quite half an hour before I could find anybody in authority, and when I did the ground taken by the attendants was sustained, namely, that the buyers of five-dollar seats at the front of the grand stand could have no exit except by the tollsome ascent and descent I have described.

This, of course, is but a trifling matter, compared with the other and more important evidences of disregard of the public—notably, the placing of the finish line in front of the clubhouse—to which attention has been called by the newspapers. Now, on the 19th of May the terms of the present State Racing Commissioners expire and their successors are to be appointed by Gov. Higgins. It seems to me that if race tracks are to be constructed and managed as Belmont Park is, in the spirit of "nothing for the public but the privilege of paying," it is time for the Governor to consider whether it is wise that the builders and managers of these tracks should themselves be continued as members of the State Racing Commission, to supervise and approve their own work.

CAPITALS AND ENGLISH.

Why Shouldn't the Seasons Be Treated as Respectfully as the Months?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

K. B. Emerson is correct in what he says, in your issue of the 3d inst., about THE TIMES's use of capitals, for such is the law of the rhetoricians. Rhetoricians and others, however, do not make a language or the written use thereof; it is custom. If the days of the week and the months of the year begin with capitals, why should not the names of the seasons?

I have always liked and approved of the seasons being written as THE TIMES writes them—they are but four in number—it lends a dignity to their appearance; and may this use grow into a custom, and that right soon. A word further about what "Observer" says in the issue about the "Bad English of Teachers." Candidly and plainly put, it is as follows:

Many of the teachers in the public schools of this city belong to a class who rarely speak good English, any more than they can articulate it correctly. These people invariably sidetrack the auxiliary shall—they know it not, using will in its place. They not only use was when were is indicated, but they use the past definite with the indefinite yet, as, "Did you do it yet?" To my way of thinking, there are few offenses against correct English worse than this. UTAH.

THE PUSHCART EVIL.

Dangers of Street Hawking to the Community at Large.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your editorial on "The Pushcart Evil" in this morning's issue, although very short, was to the point. It revived the hopes of those of your numerous readers who have been protesting against this evil for the last ten years, and who for a good part of that time have regarded THE TIMES as the most eloquent advocate in favor of clean and clear streets.

The matter is now being considered by the Mayor, the Police Commissioner, the President of the Board of Health, the Street Cleaning Commissioner, the Settlement House Workers, the Peddlers' Association, the press, the police, some of the politicians, and last, but not least, a large portion of the poor suffering people who are compelled to walk in the middle of the street. It has been satisfactorily proved at the meetings of the Mayor's commission that many people are in this business who have no legal right to be in it, and that many people are receiving money for allowing the provisions of the city ordinance to be violated daily in front of their premises.

The arguments that have been heard, even from the peddlers themselves, all tend to show that the pushcart and street peddling traffic is degrading to those who are in it, and dangerous to the community at large.

A few short, pointed editorials like that in to-day's TIMES will do more to bring about a successful solution of the problem than any other means that have been tried in the past, or that are now being tried without any apparent good results.

The Great Cities of the Future.

From The Chicago Record-Herald.

Chicago and St. Louis will live in future history as the two greatest cities of the world, Prof. J. Paul Goode of the University of Chicago told his students in a lecture yesterday. "In the near future the ocean steamships will come straight to Chicago by means of the St. Lawrence River and the Great Lakes," he said. "Ships will go to St. Louis by means of the Mississippi, and it will become the second largest city of the world because of its commerce."

Owners Not Penalized Who Seek Safety in Fireproof Construction.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read the editorial in THE TIMES of May 1.

Fire insurance companies cannot say that "they will not write risks in which the owner and tenant have not co-operated in doing all in their power to reduce the fire hazard." We are to some extent like the railroads or express companies; we must, within reason, give the public the indemnity we are created to furnish. Our rates are based on conditions and our charges are predicated upon our experience table, and while I do not claim that our methods are perfect, I do claim and will maintain and prove that "the man who seeks the highest obtainable standards in fireproof construction is" not "penalized to make good the losses of those who are indifferent whether their buildings burn or not." As a matter of fact, fireproof office buildings, have not yielded a profit, but a loss to my company, and no doubt to all companies.

You cannot hope to tell us how to run our business, any more than I would presume to tell you how to conduct yours. If we should follow the suggestions contained in your editorial we would work hardship to many innocent persons, owners and occupants of buildings constructed years ago, when they were considered types of good construction, and are now, because of improved methods, "fire-traps." We charge for the hazard as we find it, and our charge being built up of many individual charges, shows the property owner how he can improve his risk and get a lower rate.

The system and the work that the National Board of Fire Underwriters is doing in reporting on conditions from a fire standpoint in our cities, and in framing and distributing a model building law, is educating the public, and, in time, our terrible fire waste will be reduced, but it cannot be accomplished by such drastic action as you advocate in the editorial in your issue of April 30th.

Yours truly, INSURANCE.

FASTER SUBWAY SERVICE.

Might Be Achieved by the Illinois Central's Side-Door System.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

At this time, when plans are being discussed for new subways, it seems to me that much more careful consideration should be given as to the matter of saving great inconvenience and delays in the admitting and discharging of passengers from the trains, as there is no easier way to decrease the length of time required for the journey than by reducing the time for stops to a minimum.

I inclose an article on side-door suburban passenger cars, from The American Engineer and Railroad Journal for May, 1905, which has just been issued, showing that in the regular daily service, which has now extended over nineteen months, the Illinois Central is able to cut its stops down to 7.61 seconds each, and this with cars holding about 50 per cent. more passengers than the usual car and weighing less per seat.

One matter that should be considered in connection with the adoption of such cars with doors between each set of seats would be the location of stations on tangents, although I have no doubt that a movable drop attached to the side of the car could be arranged, if necessary, to insure safety at stations located on curves where there is necessarily considerable space between the side of the car and the platform. The method of signaling to the engineer and the safety of the system are also a vast improvement over our elevated and subway method.

A Different View of Farm Life.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I would like to answer "R. A. D.'s" "Discouraging Picture of Farm Life" in your issue of May 3. He must certainly have a case of dyspepsia when one can give so dark a picture of farm life.

I was born in one of the New England States on a farm, and can say that life on the farm is anything but what "R. A. D." pictures it. Where can we learn more than with the beauties of nature all around us? He speaks of animals to associate with. Where do we find more perfect examples of love and nature? He speaks of dry weather, blizzards, &c. Does not God always give us a seedtime and harvest, which is more than we can say of city life?

There is something to learn at every turn of the road, woods, and fields. I am sure, from experience, that the New England farmer is up to date with his daily paper and monthly magazine, and no half-way preacher suits his tastes.

As for me, I feel like a great missionary when I get a family from the city to go out on a farm and have been thanked many times for so doing. F. E. HOLMES.

COACHING CLUB HOLDS PARADE IN THE PARK

Eleven Vehicles in Line Reviewed by Reginald Rives.

PERFORM FANCY MANOEUVRES

Big Crowd Follows Procession, Which Starts After Luncheon at the Metropolitan Club.

The annual parade of the Coaching Club took place yesterday afternoon. It started, eleven coaches in line, a little before 3 o'clock, from Fifth Avenue and Sixtieth Street, in front of the Metropolitan Club, where the hosts of the different parties and their guests had luncheon. A rapid tour of Central Park was made, and the parade halted at the Circle at One Hundred and Sixth Street, where it was reviewed by the Vice President, Reginald Rives, in the presence of a large audience, in carriages, automobiles, hansoms, and on foot.

There could not have been selected a more propitious time of the day, as the sun shone for half an hour, a contrast from the leaden skies and chilly weather of the past few days. The park was at its best, crowded with a representative Saturday afternoon throng. Every bench was occupied along the route of the parade, and many followed on foot and others in conveyances of different sorts.

Fifth Avenue in front of the Metropolitan Club was jammed fully an hour before the start, and the large windows of the club were filled with members. The parade was quite different from that of last year. The personnel was somewhat different, and the hour selected was one which was popular some years ago, but which for three seasons has been changed owing to the start made in the morning and luncheon being given at Morris Park.

Missed from the parade was the veteran Col. William Jay, the President and originator of the club. Its Secretary, William C. Gulliver, was also among the absentees. J. Henry Smith, with Mrs. Clarence Mackay on the box seat, led the coaches. Printed instructions had been given to each of the members of the club for the parade and review. These were most explicit, and were planned by Robert L. Gerry, who took a very active interest in getting up the affair. Mr. Gerry believes in plainly set forth rules, and at his stables has all his instructions printed and framed.

It was a little after 3 when the parade started at a rapid pace through the Park. The last coach to arrive at the meeting place was that of Alfred G. Vanderbilt. Mrs. Vanderbilt, Miss Evelyn Parsons, and Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, and Messrs. Spencer and Clark were waiting for it on the sidewalk at the Fifth Avenue side of the Park. Mrs. Vanderbilt, Sr., was in her brougham near by, and W. Rhinelander Stewart took care of the party until Alfred Vanderbilt arrived. The coach driven by Reginald Rives with a stag party joined the parade at the Mall. It was the last in the order of running.

Following the line were innumerable vehicles of all sorts, and at the reviewing circle many of the relatives and friends of those who were on the coaches had places to see the parade. W. Goadby Loew and his two little daughters, Mrs. Adrian Iselin and Miss Therese Iselin, Mrs. Henry Meyer Johnson and Miss Ruggles, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Haggin, Mrs. Vanderbilt, and Miss Angelica Gerry were among those who saw the parade from this point.

The reviewing was without a hitch. The column of drags moved around the circle, keeping to the left. When the Vice President's drag entered the circle the column halted close to the curb on the near side of the road, each coach approaching the one in front as near as convenience would permit. When Reginald Rives pulled up at the Circle, the manoeuvre of succeeding coaches, each taking the lead in turn, passing around the Circle, and taking its place at the end of the line, was executed. This was most gracefully and skillfully done. As each coach passed the Vice President, the members saluted with the whip. The parade was then dismissed and the coaches returned, driving through the Park, at some distance from one another, the members of each party exchanging greetings with friends in carriages along the route. At the entrance of the Park, hansoms and motors and cabs were waiting to take the paraders home.

Several parties drove up to the Driving Club and Ardsley for dinner, but the majority disbanded at the Park entrance. It was one of the most rapid parades ever given. The coaches reached the Circle, executed the manoeuvres, were reviewed, and returned to the starting place within an hour.

The line was headed by the coach of J. Henry Smith, dark blue and black, with chestnut horses. The floral decorations on the headstalls of the horses were cornflowers. The guests carried bouquets of the same flowers, and the men wore cornflower boutonnières. Mrs. Clarence Mackay was on the boxseat, dressed in white cloth and large white plumed hat. The other guests were Mrs. J. Lee Tailer, Miss Anita Stewart, Clarence Mackay, and T. Suffern Tailer.

Ledyard Blair drove a yellow-and-black coach, with chestnuts and bays. Mrs. Thomas Hastings was on the boxseat, and the other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Van Ingen, Mr. and Mrs. Goodhue Livingston, and Thomas Hastings. The flowers were pink and yellow.

Seymour Le Grand Cromwell's coach had red running gear, with maroon side panels, bay and black wheelers, bay and gray leaders. Mrs. Cromwell was on the boxseat. The guests were Miss Mary Stuart Kernochan, Miss Tolfree, Bronson Winthrop, and William P. Burden.

Oliver Gould Jennings drove a black and dark blue coach, with three bays and a black leader. Corn flowers were the decorations. On the box seat was Mrs. Jennings, and the guests were Mr. and Mrs. F. Egerton Webb and Mr. and Mrs. Lanfear Norrie.

Robert L. Gerry's coach was maroon and red, and the horses dark brown. On the box seat was Mrs. William Woodward. The other guests were Mr. and Mrs. William Wheelock, Miss Harriman, and William Woodward. The flowers were red carnations in two shades.

Gustav E. Kissel's coach had red wheels, black body, and maroon panels. The horses were three bays and a chestnut. Mrs. Kissel was on the box seat, and the guests were Mrs. Charles A. Peabody, Miss Anita Peabody, Miss Dorothy Kissel, Kenneth Robinson, and Arthur Choate. The flowers were red roses.

G. G. Haven, Jr., drove a primrose and black coach, with bay wheelers and chestnut leaders. His guests were Mrs. Robert L. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. John Prentice, and Miss Natica Rives. The decorations were yellow daisies.

G. Louis Boissevain's coach had light blue running gear and body, horses grays and blacks. The decorations were light blue cornflowers. His guests were Mr. and Mrs. Barklie Henry of Philadelphia, Mrs. W. Goadby Loew, and Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, and the Count Limburg Stirum.

E. Victor Loew's coach had red gear and green panels. The horses were bay wheelers and brown leaders. Mrs. Howard C. Brokaw was on the box seat, and the guests were Miss Mabel Gerry, Miss Jean Reid, J. Roman Baldwin, and Howard C. Brokaw.

Alfred G. Vanderbilt drove his maroon, red, and white coach with bay horses. Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt was on the box seat, and the guests were Miss Gladys Vanderbilt, Miss Evelyn Parsons, Willing Spencer, and T. B. Clark, Jr., and the flowers were red and white carnations.

Reginald Rives had a stag party. On the box seat was Harry Eldridge and among the others were Edward Bulkeley and Augustus Schermerhorn.

Luncheon was served before the start in the large dining room on the main floor of the Ladies' Annex of the Metropolitan Club. There were eleven tables, one for each coach and rein. The tables were decorated with flowers to match the colors of the coaches, and were placed in order to correspond with the positions of the coaches in the parade.

YELLOW DOG REAL MASCOT.

Fire Started When He Left Police Parade Reviewing Stand.

The reviewing stand for the police parade was packed with people, who watched the force march past. Space on the stand could not be bought. One had to have a special permit.

But on one of the best seats, near the Mayor's party, sat a yellow dog, looking at the magnificence file by. He was altogether at ease. Now and then he winked at a fat policeman and his lean sides shook as if with laughter. Many looked with an admiring eye at the yellow dog. Everybody seemed his friend.

Then an overzealous bluecoat chased him down from the stand. And not a hand was raised in his defease. But he still had friends there. For when a few minutes later the bunting around a post caught fire a citizen sitting near yelled out:

"That's what you git fer beatin' that pore dorg."

The fire amounted to very little, and was put out without alarming anybody.

CARVED BRIDAL CHESTS.

Exhibition in Wood Carving by Pupils of Karl von Rydingsvard.

Prior to leaving for his Summer school at Brunswick, Me., Mr. Karl von Rydingsvärd held an exhibition yesterday to show some of the Winter's work achieved by his pupils at the studio, 96 Fifth Avenue. Most noteworthy among the exhibits are cassones or bridal chests, elaborately decorated as to covers and sides with carving in low relief executed according to the taste and skill of the pupil. They are intended as gifts to brides after the old fashion, when the trousseau of a young woman consisted largely of homespun linen and clothing made by her own hands. The interior is arranged with compartments and trays so that articles of less bulk and perhaps greater value than gowns and bed linen can be kept in them to-day.

In accordance with the teaching of Mr. von Rydingsvärd, these chests are solid affairs, put together without screws or nails and with a minimum of glue, all the parts showing the direct impress of the given maker's hand. They are usually of oak, and after being finished are given successive coats of oil. No varnish is used, and the natural grain of the wood is kept in sight as an important element in their beauty.

The most curious of these coffers is one carved by Miss Hetta Ward with low reliefs taken from Assyrian cylinder seals in the collection of her brother, Dr. Ward, editor of The Independent and notable explorer of the lost cities in Mesopotamia. On the lid is reproduced, considerably enlarged, of course, the seal of King Darius, which shows him erect in his chariot driving from his bow one arrow after another into a lion rampant in front of the horses. As a pendant on the lid is a mythological scene from an Assyrian relief showing Heabani or some other semi-divine hero grappling with an eagle-headed lion. On the front and sides are other carvings taken from the oldest cylinder-seals known; the sacred tree, the winged disk, the circle containing the head of the moon-god Sin, the male figures typifying the benefits of rain who give drink to oxen having the enormous horns of the water-buffalo and produce through the outflow from their jars the rivers Euphrates and Tigris—these and other strange survivals of a long-lost religion are deftly disposed over the oaken chest.

Another cassone by Mrs. James Briggs, Jr., has a scheme of apple blossoms, leaves, and fruit, more directly in keeping with bridal ideas, in its style quite modern and suggestive of l'art nouveau. Miss Bickford follows rather the Roman or Renaissance style. Each object reflects a personal taste.

A massive armchair hewn by hand from oak is by Mr. von Rydingsvärd, who has taken as his model an eighth century piece of Norwegian work preserved at Bergen. A screen carved in mahogany by Mrs. von Rydingsvärd follows the Italian Renaissance in the low relief fruit and leaf designs of its panels. Another screen is by Mrs. Henrietta Sullivan. The general effect of these pieces is massiveness and durability, absence of veneers and varnish, a square solidity in the designs. It is noticeable that there are no salient parts which would be likely to be knocked off under rough usage. These individual pieces of furniture are certain to improve with age and successive rubbings with oil. They are particularly fitted for Summer camps, country houses, bachelor dens, and since they are made by friends for friends they form gifts which have the rarest of qualities, that of the personality of the giver.

At Brunswick the workshops are naturally more extensive and the amount of output larger, the delightful occupation engaging residents and Summer visitors alike in a kind of occupation that brings people together and levels social barriers. Usually on his return to New York in the Autumn Mr. von Rydingsvärd holds a second and much larger exhibition of the Summer's harvest. A Swede by birth, he has been in America some twenty years, and has often shown his work at the arts and crafts exhibitions of the Architectural League and the National Arts Club.

DUEL OF APPARENTLY PRINCIPALS FLEE FIELD

An Affair of Spookdom at Central Park's Edge.

POLICE GET CONTESTANTS

After a Weird Chase—Neither Principal Knew That He Was Fighting the Other.

Policeman Roeder of the West Seventy-eighth Street Station was standing at the Seventy-second Street entrance to Central Park last night when he saw a strange object moving across the drive. It looked like a huge crawling animal of some sort and disappeared into the shrubbery on the opposite side of the drive.

"A Zoo thing for a dollar!" gasped Roeder. "Mebbe a lion."

He walked a little distance into the Park, then paused.

"Well," he thought, "lions are not in my precinct, and, anyway, there's Brace."

Policeman Brace of the Arsenal Station was creeping from another direction toward the spot where the bulky, ungainly thing had vanished. Presently Roeder saw Brace stop and crouch behind a tree. At the same moment a match was struck in another part of the shrubbery, followed by a succession of queer watery flickerings of blue flame.

"Glad it ain't up to me," muttered Roeder. "That Park's a queer place at night, an' Brace's welcome to his job."

Suddenly from the place he had been watching Roeder heard a fearful, blood curdling scream. On the drive was the ungainly, crawling thing, while before it for a mere second stood a figure, the head and hands had a phosphorescent glow.

The apparition did not last. The bulky thing on the ground suddenly gathered up its hindlegs and forelegs and vanished into the brush, leaving its rotund body in the middle of the drive. Simultaneously, and with another ear-piercing shriek, the phosphorescent figure shot toward Roeder, with the burly form of Ben Brace in pursuit.

Roeder bravely stood his ground, drew his stick, and yelled "Stop!" The glowing figure just dashed past him with another hollow shriek, and headed in the direction of Columbus Avenue.

"I'm blown!" Policeman Brace gasped, as he saw Roeder. "Catch it, an' I'll go after the other thing!"

Roeder started in pursuit. The apparition was losing ground, and phosphorescence, too, as the chase drew on to Columbus Avenue, but it was not caught until it got to Sixty-third Street. It backed up, then, against a window and howled until it saw that Roeder was a substantial policeman.

"Gee, I t'ought you wuz a spook!" said the "phantom," which under a strong light appeared to be nothing more awesome than a newsboy.

At the Sixty-eighth Street station the boy, sobbing hysterically, gave his name as "Dicky" Lonergan of 127 West Sixty-fifth Street. He explained the affair.

"Me an' Mike an' Mosey—we all sells papers aroun' Se'nty-sec'n' an down to de Coicle—was playin' 'Scare-em-alive, Jack.' Mosey tole me dat Mike was down on de Drive waitin' t' scare me, 'So,' t'inks me, 'I'll scare Mike.' I gets some red matches an' wet's em an' slobbers dem on me han's an' face an' comes out to look f'r Mike, when—gee, boss! A-a-a sumtin' wid a puddin' body an' funnv legs comes crawlin' out o' de trees groonin' like a band. I took it on de run, an' de cop come after me."

While "Dicky" Lonergan was telling his story the door opened to admit a delegation of newsboys headed by the aforesaid "Mike." He explained what the other strange thing had been.

"Dat wus jes' me in de pertaty barrel. I t'ought he wuz somebody else," he said.

The Sergeant and Roeder turned their backs for a moment. Then the superior officer said tartly:

"Go home, all of you, and learn to behave yourselves."

Motorman's Number.

A billygoat, possessed of plenty of pluck but mighty little discretion, sauntered from nowhere in particular to Fulton and Washington Streets, Jamaica, early yesterday afternoon. At the corner was a crowd estimated at from 500 to 1,000 men, boys, and women, waiting for cars to carry them to Belmont Park.

"Mmmmaaaaa!" said Billy.

The crowd yelled a greeting. Billy "perked up," seeming to like the crowd's recognition of his dignity. He pondered what would best show that he really deserved all that had come to him, and more. An approaching trolley car solved the puzzle. Billy determined to riddle the front end of the strange looking thing with a hole exactly the size of himself, and applied himself thereto head first.

Billy was supplied with an excellent pair of horns, else he would certainly have been dead ere now, for the trolley car met his avalanche like charge unflinchingly, and sent him rolling rapidly gutterward, while the motorman leaned over the starboard side and laughed.

Billy arose much crestfallen. He paid no heed to the hoarse laughter of the race crowd, but started rapidly off in the direction of nowhere, whence he had come, looking over his shoulder at the number of the car as if making a mental note preparatory to reporting the motorman.

FRENCH XVIII. CENTURY PRINTS

Collection of an Amateur Shown at the Grolier Club.

The Grolier Club, 29 East Thirty-second Street, has a large if not exhaustive collection of colored and other engravings made in France during the eighteenth century, lent by one of the members of the club and arranged by Mr. E. C. Kennedy of Wunderlich & Co. It will be visible until May 20.

Threescore engravers are represented by more than sixscore of prints, from Laurent Cars, who was born in 1699, to P. L. Debucourt, who died in 1832. The latter is shown in a dozen dainty colored prints, including gay and many figured scenes like "The Wedding at the Château" and "The Minuet of the Bride," in which old and young, children and staid middle-aged persons give themselves up to the jollity which was once a trait of French assemblages under the Ancien Régime. "The Two Kisses" is a comedy often repeated later in French art. A terribly ugly old man worthy of Hogarth at his strongest sits in ecstasy before a painting in which he is depicted imprinting a satyr-like kiss on the cheek of a young minx in giddy costume. The painter has made her suffering the embrace with commendable patience. While the old man luxuriates in the picture, this same minx is being kissed by the young painter behind his back, and the two naughty children are enjoying the situation to the top of their bent. More sober is "The Bouquets, or Grandma's Birthday," a scene which German painters have often given with burgher or peasant figures.

In "Philosophy Gone to Sleep," engraved by Jacques Allamet, we have a joke by the famous painter Greuze on his wife, whom he has painted nodding over the works of the French philosophers, Mme. de Pompadour, as Van Loo painted her in the character of La Belle Jardinière, is represented by Jean Louis Asselin, while Mme. du Barry is engraved twice by Gaucher and by Beauvarlet after the portraits by Drouais. It is curious to note how often these engravers made mistakes in spelling when they added the titles under the pictures. Instead of writing Gouache (water color) they often spell Gouasse, and indeed we may suppose they used to pronounce it that way.

Charles Eisen engraves a stilted scene in the taste of his epoch showing the library of Madame la Dauphine, with the youthful Marie Antoinette, not yet Queen, receiving a volume from the Muse of History, while the Graces keep her company. A romantic scene such as the old novelists loved is "The Nocturnal Elopement," by Baudoin, engraved by Ponce—coach, cavalier, seizing the lady from the ladder against the wall, companion of the lady descending the ladder with great display of fear and frills, saddled horses, torches, and all! Popular painters little heard of now even in France are given immortality by the excellent craft of these old engravers—Freudeberg, Mallet, Lavreince, Carmontelle, Bénard—as well as many whose pictures now reach fantastic prices after a century of neglect, such as Chardin, Fragonard, Holin, Nattier, J. B. Huet, and A. de St. Aubin, who was engraver as well as painter.

Some of these prints touch upon public matters, but for the most part their subject is without definite character, the object being to show a pretty young woman in clothes at the height of fashion, having her hand kissed by her lover or her toilette attended to by serving maids. There is much grace and a minimum of point in the greater number. But they represent the ideal of that age among the upper classes and offer types of what the period agreed upon as the most desirable points in feminine looks.

CANAL ZONE TO BE CHEERFUL.

Commission to Raise Salaries and Make Life Worth Living.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—Chairman Shonts having returned to Washington, a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Isthmian Canal Commission was held to-day.

Open expressions of discontent and grumbling on the part of the employes in the canal zone and frequent resignations have impressed the committee with the belief that something must be done to make the service more attractive to young Americans.

The most important decision reached to-day was that there should be a rearrangement of salaries, the particular feature of which will be liberal allowances in the lower grades. Provision will be made for leaves of absence on a more generous scale and the social life of the American colony will be developed. Sports will be encouraged; grounds provided for baseball, tennis and open-air games. The organization of clubs will be provided for and accommodations for them supplied by the commission. Altogether it is hoped to check the growing feeling of discontent.

One decision which is calculated to make the Isthmian service more attractive to young men is that when employes have done creditable work on the Isthmus for a reasonable time they may be employed [illegible]

DO AS YOU PLEASE IN LATEST SCHOOL

If You Don't Like Sums at Mrs. Potter's, Go Fishing.

BATHE TWICE DAILY, THOUGH

If You Don't You're Ostracized—Mush and Milk for Embryo Pugilists—Mrs. Edward Potter Explains.

A school without discipline, a home where "don'ts" are tabooed, is the basis of a scheme for a new system of reform education for the young, which Mrs. Edward Potter announced yesterday she would inaugurate in another week at Dyker Heights.

Reasons given by Mrs. Potter for establishing the home-school are summed up as follows:

"The home is unable to educate."

"The street has no educator."

"The curriculum of the schools prohibits human experiences, so it excludes true education."

One of the chief features of the experiment will rest with the special diet. This experiment will be somewhat in the nature of the "poison squad," under the direction of the Federal Department of Agriculture.

The only requirements imposed on the youthful students in this unique school will be that they eat the food served them and bathe twice a day. If they refuse to bathe they will not be punished, but they will be socially ostracized by their classmates, and in other ways made to feel the error of their ways.

For the rest they will be as free as the birds of the air. They may do just as they please. They will not be compelled to do sums, recite history, or bother with any of the textbook problems that do not appeal to them. If, however, algebra should appear attractive to them, they may have as much of it as they like. If the Spring sunshine inspires a longing for the swimming pool or the fishing rod, they may enjoy these pleasures to their hearts' content, so long as they are never tardy at meal time.

All that is expected of a child who goes to this idealistic school is to bask in the sunshine of its own simple, wholesome environment, and "just grow," like Topsy, meantime developing physically and mentally as naturally as the flowers of Spring.

The child will be treated to two meals a day. A breakfast at 10 o'clock and supper at 5. If he be pugilistically inclined, the tendency will not be curbed, because it would interfere with the scheme to permit him his perfect freedom of action, but such a one will receive no meat.

"Does the food a child eats affect its temperament?" said Mrs. Potter. "Indeed, I should think it did. I know myself, when I was a child going to school, that a breakfast of buckwheat cakes and sausage always made me ill-tempered."

"I am a disciple of Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Stetson," explained Mrs. Potter, "in the matter of perfect freedom for the child, both in the home and the school. A child should never be made to do anything he does not want to do. We shall have no servants in the home; I don't want the children to get that idea of menial service. They may help me as they will to in keeping the house clean and doing the cooking and other household work. But if a little girl prefers to play with her doll, or practice in the gymnasium, she will not be compelled to wash dishes, sweep, or sew. To make her work at anything against her will would be to warp her nature and make her a hypocrite.

"I believe that the public school system, with its insistence of a cut-and-dried course for every child, no two of whose natures are alike, is responsible for more than half the misfits of life," said Mrs. Potter.

Mrs. Potter has rented a large house at Dyker Heights, where she will carry on her experiments. She has two children of her own, who will be included in the experimental work. Mrs. Potter will have in her home also about a dozen poor children of the city.

Recital by Blind Organist.

William A. Haden, a blind musician, announces that he will give an organ recital at the Church of the Ascension, Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street, Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. He will be assisted by Miss Marie Louise Gohle. The programme has the approval of the Rev. Percy Stickney Grant, the rector; Mrs. Theodore Sutro, and others, who hope that Mr. Haden will be able to create a wider interest in his professional work. No admission will be charged.

BANKRUPTCY COURT ARGUES AT BASEBALL

Lawyers vs. Clerks, with Judges Holt and Olcott Presiding.

A NEW TRIAL IS ORDERED

Big Schedule of Assets and Liabilities Filed by the Scorer—Struck Jury Deserts in Disgust.

Lawyers of the Bankruptcy Court vs. Clerks of the United States District Attorney's Court was the case on the calendar yesterday afternoon at the American League Ball Park. The legal diamond contest was advertised to start at 3 o'clock promptly, but there were the usual delays of the law. There was the greatest difficulty in selecting a jury. At the scheduled time for the beginning of the contest there were not a baker's dozen of spectators from whom to choose the jury that was to sit in the huge grand stand and render a decision.

Col. Abraham Gruber, politician and attorney, solved the puzzle. Removing his slouch hat, he bowed low to United States Judge Holt and Judge Olcott, who had volunteered to act as umpires, and, in the voice which he usually uses when he addresses his Republican cohorts, said:

"May it please your Honors and the Court, we have here in evidence eighteen men who believe they can play baseball. With deference and respect to your Honors, though you spend much time at the ball grounds, perhaps more than you do on the bench, it is apparent that between your legal learning and your baseball acumen you may be liable to err. Therefore I beseech that this case be tried before a jury. There are some dozens of 'fans' without the gates who would like to be admitted, and enough small boys who thoroughly know the game to give us a jury and a sufficient number of spectators."

The Judges put their heads together, and then empowered him with the authority to admit those on the outside. Col. Gruber thereupon extended the hospitality of the grounds to the "well-well" man, the fellow who crows like a rooster, his twin brother who brays, and others. The jury of experts was installed in the grand stand and the small boys allowed to sit where they would in the "bleachers."

Judge Holt forgot his usual "Proceed, gentlemen," and uttered a fierce "Play ball." The players did the best they could. Notwithstanding the admonitions of the court, the jury, however, behaved very badly. When something like twenty errors had been made in the first inning the jurymen in a frenzy cried aloud and in chorus, "Rotten!" Several of the jurymen quit the box and went outside the grounds for inspiration. Col. Gruber was determined, however, that the jury-box should be filled, and broke all the traditions of our courts by keeping the proper number through inducing the small boys to take the vacant places. He worked very hard, and at the end of the second inning gave it up. He was then willing that it should be a trial without a jury.

In the excitement of the third inning, when everybody hit the ball and everybody else muffed it, Col. Gruber removed his coat and started to "root" for the lawyers as against the clerks, who had a strenuous coach in United States Marshal Henkel, ably assisted by "Bat" Masterson. Col. Gruber asked for no attorney's fee, but espoused the cause of the lawyers because his son was playing with them. The young man had a sad afternoon of it. The fact that he really knew how to play ball did not let him escape from his father's irony. He tried to play all over the field, and as a result took impossible chances, being credited with errors that he might have avoided. It was not consoling when his parent shouted, so that everybody could hear:

"Oh, my son, why was it that I payed all that money to send you to Princeton—my son, oh my son?"

On one occasion the young man was declared out by Judges Holt and Olcott when he had made a desperate slide for the plate. His father declared the umpires to be "bum judicators," and was adjudged in contempt of court, the penalty being the payment of a dinner at a fine restaurant.

When the ball was lost the judges appointed a receiver and filed petitions in bankruptcy. For some reason or other the umpires could not help declaring home runs to be "dividends." When they were disputed they made a composition to settle. They called fouls to be "fraudulent transfers." Catching a fly in the field was termed a "lis pendens," the score a "schedule of assets and liabilities."

The game ended with the seventh inning in a violent dispute. The lawyers entered as many exceptions as there were judgments, and Judge Holt, with Judge Olcott concurring, said that as there were so many errors in the proceedings the verdict of one run in favor of the clerks should be reversed, and that a new trial for next term should be ordered. This is the schedule filed by the scorer:

PLOT AGAINST BRAZIL UNEARTHED IN MADRID

Elaborate Scheme to Make Kunani State Independent.

ABOUT 12,000 MEN RECRUITED

Ex-King at Arms of the Spanish Court Arrested—Committee's Headquarters in London.

MADRID, May 6.—Sarrion de Herrera, ex-King at Arms of the Spanish Court, has been arrested at the instance of the Brazilian Minister here on the charge of conspiring with others against the Government of Brazil.

A search of the residence of Señor de Herrera resulted in the discovery of a number of commissions for officers who were to organize an army in the State of Kunani. The commissions bore the stamp of that State.

The captured documents also show that the plot was financed by a committee having headquarters in London and which had long been working for the independence of the Kunani territory. This territory is between the northern frontier of Brazil and French Guiana.

It is stated that the committee, with a view to controlling the gold mines of Kunani, had been organizing an insurrection and had recruited men in England, France, and Spain, who were represented as colonists, but who were intended eventually to become soldiers.

Documents taken from de Herrera's residence show that organization was proceeding on a vast scale and that nearly 4,000 men had already been recruited in England, 4,000 in France, and 4,000 in Spain, among the last-named being included many Spanish reserve officers, some of whom are actually serving as active officers.

An ex-revolutionary Spanish Captain who headed the rising in Badajos in 1883 holds a commission of Colonel in the future army of Kunani, and it is stated that he is already receiving pay through an English banking house at which funds are deposited.

De Herrera styled himself Minister Plenipotentiary of Spain for the State of Kunani.

The Brazilian Government got wind of the affair and communicated with its Minister at Madrid. The Spanish authorities were notified and acted promptly, and the arrest of de Herrera followed.

DELCASSE WANTS TO STAY.

But French Suspicion of Britain's Attitude May Force Him Out.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 6.—A statement published this morning by the Figaro to the effect that differences had broken out between Foreign Minister Delcassé and Premier Rouvier which would lead to M. Delcassé's resignation at no distant date, was entirely untrue.

I have it on good authority that M Delcassé has no intention of surrendering to the violent press campaign undertaken against him during the past few weeks by politicians who are more anxious to satisfy their private animosities and upset the existing Republican régime than to promote their country's interests and safeguard its honor.

M. Delcassé is being loyally supported by M. Rouvier and his other colleagues of the Cabinet. The only danger lies in the failure of the English press to recognize that the Anglo-French entente cordiale is not an offensive alliance against Germany, but a pacific arrangement between two countries having vast industrial and commercial interests in common.

Unfortunately, an idea has arisen here, owing to the somewhat equivocal attitude of the English press, that in England the Anglo-French understanding is looked upon as a means of checkmating German commercial rivalry by a threat of war in which France would receive most of the blows, while England would merely wipe out Germany's fleet and destroy her maritime trade.

Until this impression is removed the French public will continue to look askance at the Anglo-French entente cordiale, and M. Delcassé's position will be none too secure.

By The Associated Press.

PARIS, May 6.—Despite official denials, the feeling prevails in high quarters that M. Delcassé will not wish to retain the Foreign Office portfolio much longer.

The Cabinet situation is no longer attributed to Morocco, but to a divergence of views as to who should control France's foreign policy. M. Delcassé's prestige throughout Europe naturally leads him to want a free hand, and M. Rouvier evidently desires to occupy a position analogous to that of Count von Bülow, the German Chancellor, in regard to foreign policies.

The personal relations between the Premier and the Foreign Minister remain most cordial, yet the Diplomatic Corps would not be surprised to see M. Delcassé step down before long.

PRO-GERMAN SPANIARDS.

Many Newspapers Hostile to the Policy of Supporting France.

PARIS, May 6.—A slight cloud has arisen over the coming Anglo-French-Spanish celebrations attending King Alfonso's visit to France, owing to the bitterly hostile attitude of a large element of the Spanish press toward Spanish adhesion to France's policy in Morocco. All the diplomatic sagacity of Jules Cambon (the French Ambassador to Spain) appears to be needed to avert a storm.

Both the Republican and Liberal elements in Spain contest the right of the Premier and the Minister for Foreign Affairs to accompany the King on his mission, which, they declare, would commit the nation irreparably to the support of the French Moroccan policy. They further assert that, the Cortes not having approved of the King's visit to France, neither the King nor the Ministers can cast Spain's influence in either way in the conflict now agitating Berlin, Paris, and Fez.

The French view the agitation as being part of Germany's diplomatic manoeuvring. But, notwithstanding the pro-German press campaign, King Alfonso, the Spanish Premier, and other Ministers are resolutely determined to carry out the visit and participate in all its significant assurances that Spain stands with France and Great Britain.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN ILL.

Suffering from a Severe Chill, but His Condition Not Alarming.

BIRMINGHAM, May 6.—Joseph Chamberlain, who with difficulty addressed the Committee of the Unionist Association of Birmingham last night, is suffering from a severe chill, and was too indisposed to attend the reopening ceremony at Queen's College here this afternoon.

BRITAIN BUYS LESS FROM US.

Imports During April Decreased and Exports Increased.

LONDON, May 6.—The April statement of the Board of Trade shows a decrease of $9,494,500 in imports and an increase of $3,268,000 in exports.

The chief decreases in imports were $3,750,000 in foodstuffs and $3,250,000 in raw materials, including cotton, $1,850,000. The decrease of nearly $25,000,000 in imports this year is due to smaller purchases from the United States, while the purchases from the British possessions increased $27,500,000.

The exports include an increase of $3,685,000 in manufactured articles, cotton leading with $3,180,000.

OUR GORGEOUS PARIS EMBASSY.

Salons Elaborately Decorated — One Room Sixty Feet Square.

PARIS, May 6.—The new American Embassy, 12 Quai de Billy, is the centre of much attention. The embassy was used officially for the first time in connection with the ceremony of Ambassador McCormick's presentation of his credentials to President Loubet, and was much admired for its spaciousness and sumptuous appointments.

The walls of the vestibule are of white and green marble, and are hung with Louis XV. tapestries. The ceiling of the vestibule is vaulted, and has a fresco painting of Aurora.

A marble staircase leads to a suite of salons overlooking the Seine. These are decorated in ebony and gold, with frescoed ceilings, one representing Venus in a chariot, conducted by cupids, and another Glory Crowning Music.

The dining hall has an old Flemish fireplace, above which is Mlle. Louise Abbema's salon picture "Diana and the Hounds."

The Festival Salon is sixty feet square. The walls are covered with tapestries, and four frescoes portray the Nibelungen legend. It is also used as a picture gallery, and in it Mr. McCormick's collection of portraits of Napoleon, Washington, Emperor William I., and many others is hung. Napoleon's portrait has the post of honor. It shows the Emperor in the height of his glory wearing the imperial robes and a laurel crown.

On the return of President Loubet from his country seat Mrs. McCormick will be presented to Mme. Loubet, after which the Ambassador and Mrs. McCormick will dine at the Elysée Palace. They will be present at the diplomatic dinner to be given at the Foreign Office on May 15.

King Edward sent a carriage to Victoria Station for the use of the Crown Prince, and the German Ambassador, Count Benckendorff, and the Embassy Staff welcomed him when he arrived.

French Praise Mr. Stillman's Gift.

PARIS, May 6.—Art circles are loud in praise of James Stillman's gift of $100,000 to the School of Fine Arts here for prizes. The Figaro says Americans are giving more substantial support to French art than any other nationality, and recalls the fact that the American Society of Architects had already endowed the School of Fine Arts with an annual prize of $300. This and Mr. Stillman's prizes are exclusively for French students.

Kaiser's Health Much Improved.

His naturally pale face has become browned by exposure to the southern sun. On Monday his Majesty goes to Strassburg for several days' automobiling in Alsace-Lorraine. Three of his motor cars have been sent to Strassburg.

GAVE LIFE TO POOR, NOW IN PAUPER GRAVE

Story Told by Friend of Countess Eleanor del Drago.

SAYS GOULDS HELPED HER

Illness Stopped Her Missionary Work After She Had Labored in the Slums for Years.

If the story told by William Rapp of 230 East One Hundred and Tenth Street is correct, the Countess Eleanor del Drago, a member of a noble Italian family, after laboring in the slums for years and unostentatiously giving the balance of her fortune to the east side poor, died in the Metropolitan Hospital on Blackwell's Island on March 4, and was buried in Potter's Field after her body had lain in the Morgue for ten days, unclaimed and unrecognized.

Superintendent Rickard of the Bellevue Hospital received a letter from Rapp a few days ago asking for information about a woman named del Drago whom he had last heard of as being ill in the hospital. Rapp was informed by letter yesterday that the woman was dead, and was buried nearly six weeks ago. When the woman was received at Bellevue she excited much interest because of her apparent refinemnt and accomplishments. She was a fluent linguist.

William Rapp, at his home last night, told his story of the woman's life.

"I became acquainted with her," said Rapp, "about fourteen years ago, when I owned a little saloon at 13 Crosby Street. In those days she used to come in and take away any children who were there. She was kind, too, to women less fortunately situated than herself. Everybody loved her, for she was the soul of generosity. She was working on behalf of some benevolent institution, but I sometimes thought that she was the whole charity herself.

"My wife got rather friendly with her, and after some years Mrs. del Drago—that's what we all called her—told Mrs. Rapp things about her past life. She came of a wealthy family in Italy, and was married there to Count Ferdinand del Drago, whose father was one of the Papal Guards at the Vatican. The Count was not very rich, and after their marriage it dawned upon Mrs. del Drago that he had married her for her fortune. Anyhow, she said that he made free with it. After the birth of a daughter Mrs. del Drago said she would not stand her husband's behavior any longer, and made over the balance of her fortune to the baby.

"The Count del Drago died when the child was grown up and about to be married. After the marriage Mrs. del Drago decided to come to America and devote the rest of her life to slum work. She was then about forty years of age. Go down to the Italian colony and ask who Mrs. del Drago was and they will tell you that she was the soul of goodness.

"A few years after we became acquainted with her Mrs. del Drago became ill. She was never very strong. She went to the hospital and remained there for a long time. When she came out she was a different woman. She tried to take up the old work, but her strength failed her. I think she was then quite intimate with Miss Helen Gould, with whom she had become acquainted through the slum work and also because the del Dragos were close to the Castellanes in Italy.

"Failing in her missionary work, Mrs. del Drago became very despondent and took to drink. At first she took it only to keep up her strength, but by and by she grew confirmed in the habit, and after a while went off from time to time and was absent for weeks. I don't think she was quite right in her head then. She would talk of her life of disappointment, and say that the del Dragos had weaned her own child from her after the Count's death.

"About a year ago we heard of her, and then not again until last July, when we learned that she wrote that she was in Bellevue, sick. Mrs. Rapp would have gone to see her, but we heard that she had been assisted by Mrs. George Gould. Mrs. del Drago herself in a letter told us that she had written to Mrs. Gould telling her of her connection with the del Dragos and Castellanes. She said that she had received a check, a ticket to enable her to return to Italy, and some clothes.

"When she came out of the hospital, however, she heard that her daughter had died in Italy, and as that was the only thing that drew her back to her native land, she took to drink again.

"We never heard any more of her until to-day when the Superintendent at Bellevue told us that she was dead and in the Potter's Field."

DOCTORS SCORE BELLEVUE.

Meningitis in General Wards, They Say—Hospital Officers Deny It.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, May 6.—Superintendent G. W. Moore of the Bureau of Health and Dr. E. C. Mabon, City Bacteriologist, returned this morning from New York, where they went to study the cause and treatment of cerebro-spinal meningitis. They found that nothing more is known there than here, and that practically the same treatment is followed in both cities. Dr. Mabon said:

"The number of cases there gave us an opportunity to study the disease. We were surprised to find that in Bellevue Hospital the disease is treated in the same wards with other patients. This is one thing we could not understand, if the disease is transmissible. In Pittsburg we have always isolated the cases."

At Bellevue Hospital it was said last night that all the cases of spinal meningitis there were isolated in one pavilion and that it had always been the rule of the hospital so to isolate them.

POSTUM CEREAL CO. POSTUM CEREAL CO. POSTUM CEREAL CO. POSTUM CEREAL CO.

Proclamation of Freedom

Why have the people come to despise the very term "labor union?"

The feeling seems universal and is held by the great general public and by probably more than half of the unwilling members of the unions.

Statistics show about ten "union" members to every eight hundred citizens, and this small minority undertakes to rule the rest of us, and if we don't obey exactly and quickly they slug, throw bricks, shoot, cut, dynamite, boycott and murder.

BORN WORKERS

Most all Americans were born of work people. We know what it is to work, and work hard. We are not children of Dukes, Earls or the idle rich, and we have an inborn sympathy for and a desire to help along every honest, peaceable workman. So merchants, manufacturers and all sorts of employers who used to work with their hands and now work harder with their brains to get together money to pay to those who work with their hands, have, with the general public, borne patiently many acts of tyranny and abuse until the union leaders have become more emboldened and intoxicated with power.

WANT TROUBLE

They must make trouble in order to feed their vanity by seeing themselves discussed in the papers, and also to show the "Union" that hires them that "there's something doing." So they order people about, interfere with business, stop street and R. R. cars, building operations, delivery of goods, serving of meals, delivery of bread, meat, or even milk necessary to keep babies alive, and we have been treated to the horrifying scene of their interfering with the sacred rite of burial of the dead. They have the impudence to interfere in any and every act of life, demanding that all movements be made only according to "the union rule." Their continued abuses and interference with the rights of citizens has so outraged the people that they not only detest the name "labor union," but are forced to take up the most rigorous and emphatic measures to stop these outrages, and stop this interference with the movements of the common people.

PEOPLE ANNOYED

When a man wants to go to business on a car he doesn't want to be told the unions have "tied up the line." When he relies for his dinner on having the meat, bread and vegetables delivered, it doesn't set at all well to lose his dinner because the "unions" had tied up the meat or bread supply, or the teamsters' union slugged and driven off the new teamsters that tried to deliver the goods. His baby needs milk, but the "milk drivers' union" has stopped the supply. "Let a few of the d— babies die, some sacrifices must be made for the supremacy of labor."

He tries to paint his own house at spare times, but the painters' union hoot him, and boycott the paint dealer and grocer that sells him goods.

A sudden leak of a water pipe is flooding his house and destroying his property, but the rules of the plumbers' union impose all sorts of penalties if he tries to help the trouble. So they interfere in all sorts of ways with the liberty and freedom of the common people, making life a burden and man an abject slave to the impudent "orders" of the labor boss, and these labor unions know no limit to their exactions and abuses so long as they have power to ride down the people. They go the full limit even to demanding that the laws of the U. S. Gov't give way to their rules.

A COSTLY BLUNDER

When Pres. McKinley came to lay the cornerstone of the federal building in Chicago (that the unions had delayed for years and forced thereon an unnecessary cost of some millions of dollars which had to be paid out of the pockets of the common people) he made the fearful mistake of bowing his head to the "orders" of the labor bosses and allowed them to put on his neck the yoke of a "Union Card" before he was allowed to lift a trowel and lay that cornerstone. Think of it. The Chief Executive of this gov't made to step down from his eminent position and allow a union boss to sit there and issue "orders." That one act made the labor unions so drunk with power and impudent that it has cost Chicago in losses to business, wages, buildings, depreciation of real estate and destruction of property by fires set by unions, literally hundreds of millions of dollars and many lives.

Is it any wonder the common people are sick and tired of "unions"? They ordered the little Colonel now in the White House to discharge a printer because he wouldn't join a union, and they also ordered him not to ride on a certain R. R. that refused to obey them, but they found there a wise and brave man, the real Executive of all the people and not alone of the ten in eight hundred or the one thousand who seek to corner the labor market and shut out the eighty thousand who do not.

He says: "When any labor union seeks improper ends or seeks to achieve proper ends by improper means all good citizens, and more especially all honorable public servants, must oppose the wrongdoing as resolutely as they would oppose the wrongdoing of any great corporation. Of course, any violence, brutality or corruption should not for one moment be tolerated."

GENUINE TRUST

But here we see a genuine trust, a labor trust, a combination to sell labor, and this arrogant trust proposes by threats of violence to force people to buy its commodity.

And why do they block progress, prevent others from working, separate themselves from other citizens, hate every one not in their "union," boycott and threaten, conduct themselves as bandits and outlaws and commit all sorts of crimes to force themselves and their one-sided ideas upon people?

COST TO CITIZENS

They become criminals in order to force a few cents or dollars extra out of the public.

Thereafter they have forced their labor on some firms, they refuse to do the work as directed by the employer, and a strike occurs, a fight to see if they can force the employer to let them do the work as they want to and not as he requires it.

The Chicago teamsters refused to deliver goods where directed and committed all sorts of outlawry, because the employers hired men who would properly help them do business.

A mechanic pays for a ton of coal, and before it is delivered the labor trust issues orders that the coal shall not be touched. The mechanic's family is cold and suffering, so he tries to deliver his own coal and is slugged unconscious by the "union labor trust committee."

WHAT FOR?

All this interference with the affairs of the people, the violence and criminal ugliness is first to sell labor at higher prices than the market rate, and next to show the men who buy labor that they have no right to say how that labor shall be used, but that the workman shall say what he shall do, how he shall do it and when. These are the reasons you and simple, and the public—you and I—must suffer inconvenience and loss, and ultimately pay all the bills, for maintaining order by our city, county or State authorities, the total cost of prosecuting the criminals, and on top of all that, we, the public, must pay whatever raise in wages is made to buy off the trouble-makers. It is the people who suffer and pay.

Suppose the "Union" flour millers go on strike for a raise from $3 to $5 a day and tie up or blow up the mills, and finally secure the advance in wages. That advance must be put on the price of flour, and the people pay it, and also pay all costs for suppressing the rioters.

So we see a few men become avaricious for money, form a labor trust, and by coercion force the rest of the people in the United States to submit to the impudence and arrogance and also pay all the bills. There would be no limit to the abuse if the "Unions" had their own way unchecked. Is it not time the people took steps to protect themselves from this violent and grasping trust?

ALL JOIN

Suppose every one of us adopts the Labor Union idea (labor trust) and by combination force every one else that doesn't belong to our Union to buy what we have to sell at our price, or slug the life out of them.

Let the farmers' union set the price of wheat at $20 a bushel, and picket, assault or kill the miller and blow up his mill if he tries to buy wheat at less price of any one but a "Union" farmer.

Then the millers' union sets the price of flour at $85 a barrel, and calls every one "scab" that refuses to buy flour with the "Union Label" on, and turns over the wagons, kills the horses and beats the drivers of any "scab" miller. Then everybody, workmen as well as employers, would have to pay about $18 a barrel extra on every barrel of flour to the little labor trust of millers. Some one says, "that's extreme." It is not, but is exactly what would happen if that particular union got power enough. You see the only limit to the avariciousness of a labor trust is set by the people at large, when they are abused long and hard enough to rise and quash it.

Then let the water works "Union" set the price of $1 a pail for drinking water and boycott and assault the family that uses its own well water. "You are no friend of the Union man if you don't drink union water."

Finally the "undertakers' "Union" fixes the price of a burial at $350 (any price they see "goes," for that's the union rule) and the poor corpse whose relatives can't borrow or beg the price to pay the "Union" must go without the privilege or be dumped into the street and the hearse overturned if an independent funeral be attempted.

OIL TRUST

The Oil Trust is a peaceable organization compared with the riotous, arrogant and lawbreaking labor trust, a menace to every citizen, including the upright members of the Unions themselves.

Is a public contract to be let, immediately a demand is made that only "Our Union" be employed and receive the people's money, and threats of all sorts of political defeat and dire disaster are made. Suppose a quarry trust should demand that no other stone be used or the Steel Trust make similar demand and actually tie up the work to enforce "orders."

What a howl would go up, but the public has foolishly cuddled these Labor Unions until they have become diseased and are a public menace and nuisance.

Every one concedes the right of any religious body, fraternal society, or a labor union to set up rules for their own guidance. But they have no right whatsoever to make laws for the control of other people, and when they interfere and force their presence where they are not wanted they should be locked up and prosecuted.

These labor union manipulators, and some members of unions are out-and-out anarchists and dangerous enemies to the public.

Their minds turn to anarchy, or "no law," just as true as a needle turns to the north pole.

Have a careful look at the stock and see.

OPPOSE POLICE

When a manufacturer cannot afford to pay the price asked for labor, the unions, in order to force him, go on a strike, picket, boycott, riot, and set up general disorder. Then the police are called in to preserve peace. There has been no disorder by the man who buys labor. It is only caused by the men who have labor to sell and who become outlaws and bandits under the leadership of anarchists. The police are hired by the people's money to protect the community, but when these peace officers appear do the Unions show genuine American citizenship, and that desire for peace, and the maintenance of the people's laws that marks the true man and patriot? Never! They hiss and stone the police, shoot them when they dare, and when whipped into a semblance of decency loudly protest in every possible way against the presence of police, sheriffs, Militia or Regulars. Why? Only one reason, they want to commit crimes and hate anything or anyone that checks them.

MILITIA MEMBERS

Are discharged from the Unions. You see here the same criminal instinct allied in opposition to the people's protectors. Why do they want the Militia broken up—so they can riot and burn at pleasure?

ANTI-INJUNCTION BILL

This has been pushed hard before Congress by the Labor leaders. It is a bill to take away from the courts any right to issue a restraining order to prevent the commission of crime. Under the present wise laws for the protection of life and property, when it seems clear that striking Union men, bandits, and outlaws plan to attack other men or destroy property, the court can issue an order or injuction commanding them to desist or refrain from doing such unlawful act. This has been a great preventive of crime and can never harm any peaceable person, but the "Unions" have the appalling impudence to ask Congress to pass a bill to tie the hands of every court and thus allow the Union strikers full away to assault, dynamite, burn and destroy without hindrance. Does the anarchist spirit show?

UNIONS PROTECT CRIMINALS

When Union men are caught assaulting, burning, or in murder, whose money protects them? Union funds. Are their minds in favor of the law or of the lawbreakers?

After you have decided whether this good-sized body of Union members have the criminal mind or not, have a look at their steady efforts to stop progress and natural growth.

APPRENTICES

They deny the right to young men to learn a trade. This is to keep the supply of workmen scarce, make high wages for the few, and drive all the balance into poverty and perhaps crime by lack of chance to learn a trade and earn an honest living.

BREAK CONTRACTS

A few and very few instances show where Unions honor a contract when it seems to their interest to break it. The wisely managed Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, has deservedly famous for its integrity in this respect, also the Typographical Union, but the great majority have shown themselves entirely unworthy.

PERJURY

In one case in a court in Ohio upwards of 40 Union men swore falsely as shown by the court ordering the Union books and records examined. This is but one of hundreds of cases in the courts in the last 20 years.

They lend themselves to any sort of crime they dare perpetrate to prevent other Americans from earning a living.

They seek in every way to prevent immigration when our farmers and housewives need help most seriously.

They encourage workmen to do as little as possible.

They put the botch workman (if he belongs to the Union) on the same wages as the skilled mechanic.

They continually seek means to stop work, harass those who pay labor, and have ruined countless enterprises that formerly brought money and prosperity to communities.

RUIN TO ENGLAND

The "Union" plan has been so effectively conducted in England, by keeping down the output, "soldiering," and doing as little work as possible, keeping out improved machinery and conducting all industries under Union rule, that other countries have taken the business and we see a tremendous army of "unemployed" all over England now crying for work and bread which their "union" rules have driven away.

The Unions will produce the same conditions here if they are not curbed. They have driven away millions of dollars worth of work in the past two years by their eternal fight against progress. They stop work and tie up industry on the slightest pretext.

DANGER TO PEOPLE

If this trust be allowed to grow and increase in strength it will dominate and direct every act of the people—the common people, who are now abused, tyrannized over, and the cost of their actual necessities increased by strikes and labor troubles, in order to foster the power of the leaders of the trust. It must be curbed, and no time should be lost.

Question, how?

A REMEDY

First let every citizen refuse to humiliate himself by joining the nefarious boycott in any case, and remember the "union boycott" takes a form called the "union label," by which the unions say: "Don't buy anything except that which we make. Boycott whatever is made by independent workmen."

A self-respecting American who has any regard for the rights of his fellow man, and for his own guarantee of freedom, will remember that many of the finest and most skilful American workmen are not union men and do not require a union label on their productions to force them on the people; but the high character of their work shows in the articles they produce, which sell better without a "union label" than with it. This is true of hats, shoes, clothing, and the great variety of human necessities.

The arrogance and impudence of the proclamation of the Unions, "buy only of us, all else is bad," has driven hundreds of thousands of the best class of buyers to refuse to prostitute themselves to these "union orders," and they decline absolutely to buy anything with a union label on it.

SEAL OF SLAVERY

Remember the union label as managed under "diseased unionism" is the seal of servitude and contribution to the most arrogant and abusive trust extant.

When a self-respecting patriot thinks of the demoniacal acts, indignities, and abuses heaped upon free Americans, in forcing this modern "diseased unionism" upon them, in order to support a few trust leaders (alias labor leaders) it makes the blood boil and the good old fathers' spirit of freedom and justice arise and demand of us that we use the sternest measures to free our people from this new and hated form of tyranny.

ORGANIZE TOWNS

The next step toward freedom is for each city, town, and hamlet to form a Citizens Association for mutual protection; band together and by public sentiment and act protect your citizens in their freedom to work when and for whom they please, and the freedom of merchants to sell to whomsoever desires to buy, despite any "union" orders.

TRAITORS

If any merchant is coward enough to refuse to help defend his city and her people, preferring to lickspittle for the tyrannous "Unions," don't boycott him, just let the public know it and he will quickly find that 85 per cent. of the people are not "Union" and his cowardice and traitorous attitude toward his townspeople will bring its own reward. Then have your Citizens Association agree, to support and protect your industries in continuous activity, particularly when the "Unions" try to shut them down and thus seek to ruin the town.

Some, yes many, towns have suffered untold loss from being "unionized" and in such it is easy for the citizens to form their associations for protection, for they have seen the necessity. Let other towns that have not yet been through the fire take warning and act in time, for no epidemic of disease can do the financial harm to a town that is sure to come from "diseased unionism" well started, with the certain following of strikes, disorder, assaults, destruction of property, and loss of business.

UNION MEN JOIN

Let the peaceable Union men join with the other citizens so that they cannot be tyrannized by their leaders or the anarchists and socialists.

There are many Unions so unlawful and ugly that even the national labor organizations deplore their existence and sometimes withdraw their charters, but this great movement by citizens to protect themselves does not necessarily mean the destruction of all Unions.

MUST BE CURBED

It is absolutely demanded by public policy that they be strongly curbed and held to strict observance of the law. When they boycott, intimidate, or conspire "in restraint of trade" let the Citizens Association's lawyers proceed against and punish them under the existing laws, and let public sentiment be so pronounced and outspoken as to force the criminals to have a decent regard for the rights of citizens of all classes and conditions.

Don't hesitate to openly denounce a noisy, abusive, and unlawful "Union" man and help lock him up if necessary to preserve the peace.

FEAR NO BOYCOTTS

Drop all your fears of the threats of these bandits. Their boycotts fall flat or help the firm boycotted. If they try to boycott, advertise the fact and the decent people will double your business. It is a notorious fact that it generally means defeat of a political candidate to have him "indorsed" as a "friend" of the labor unions, for the big 85 per cent. of good Americans hate their tyranny and put it on the shelf when they have a chance.

BETTER CONDITIONS

It is a hopeful sign to see the "Unions" slowly crumbling for being and they must continue to improve and become more law-abiding if they expect an indignant public to permit them to exist. One great deterrent is the violent character of the editors of their labor papers, who persistently misstate facts and mislead their readers by highly colored reports and comments that inflame the minds of people, led too often by their prejudice instead of cool reason.

But slowly the Union man is coming to understand that if he becomes a law-breaker in response to the anarchistic suggestions of his labor paper he must pay the penalty of crime against his fellows. When the anarchists, socialists, and criminals are either driven out or suppressed, the unions will perhaps then pattern after the honored Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and win respect for their members by honesty, uprightness, and good citizenship, then the Union man will be known as a capable, thrifty, and high-grade workman (the old Trade Union idea,) and the scrubs and pretenders will not be allowed to flaunt a Union Card as evidence of their right to abuse and maltreat all the balance of mankind. The Unions as now made up need an immense amount of house cleaning, and the public has been forced by their ugliness to demand it. Every right thinking Union man knows this, and is earnest in his desire to have the criminals expunged, for the peaceable members are denounced by the public for their association with the others.

If these high grade men would withdraw from the mismanaged bands of outlaws and set up a union where good workmanship was the test, and then offer their first class labor at even higher prices than common, with their contracts made legally responsible, and if it became known that when a buyer of labor didn't care to purchase this union would peaceably offer its labor elsewhere, but not go bullying about like a lot of bandits and lawbreakers, they would then command the admiration and respect of the entire community, for people like to see workmen prosperous. Observe the high position in the minds of the public that the Locomotive Engineers have won for themselves by just this plan of procedure.

Many and many a high grade man is an unwilling associate and member of the anarchy-tainted unions, and he seeks freedom somehow, somewhere.

Help him.

It is no insult to tell a man he is in a place that stinks; he may know and deplore it, but if he defends the stinking place he insults himself.

CRIMINAL BRAND

So when you hear a Union man denounce those who point out the crimes of the Unions and seek to purify them, you may know to a certainty that he is of the anarchist, criminal type and squirms when the sunlight of publicity is turned upon him. Among this class will be found the majority of labor paper editors.

We should demand of our public officers that they proceed as they did in the beef trust and give the people protection from this labor trust that oppresses the common people more than a dozen meat or oil trusts.

What is a cent or two on a gallon of oil as compared with the hundreds of thousands of decent bread-earners thrown out of work from time to time, and the hundreds of millions of dollars in business lost to the people by the withdrawal of capital from industry.

REFUSE TO BUILD

It is a common remark nowadays that no one but a fool will start a new building or a new industry and subject himself to the tremendous losses, indignities, and worry from the labor unions.

The proposed building operations and new industries that have been abandoned in the past two years amount in dollars and cents lost to our work people more than would keep an army in meat and oil for a lifetime.

Citizens, high and low, you must rise in your might and free yourselves from this worst of all trusts—this startling menace to human liberty. It is before you, and its injuries are felt by every man but the few easy-living leaders who have by organization of the 15 per cent. of workmen threatened the complete domination of the 85 per cent. of unorganized citizens.

This fair country has already been injured hundreds of millions of dollars and its people subjected to countless scores of indignities by the labor trust.

ACT

We have conspiracy and trust laws. Write President Roosevelt urging that he direct the proper government officers to do their duty with this most ruinous of all trusts, then don't forget your own duty towards the boycott, the union label, and to organize your towns for protection.

Read this article over again carefully and Act.

C. W. POST.

N. B. You ask what motive inspires me to pay about $20,000.00 to print this "proclamation of freedom" in the various papers in the United States sure to bring down on me hundreds more of coarse, vilifying, abusive letters from labor union thugs and many kind letters from law-abiding members of Unions.

The officials of the Labor Commissioner's Office of Michigan say I pay the highest wages in the state for like work. But I will not bow to the comic opera kings and potentates of the labor unions or allow them to "unionize" the Postum factories. Therefore they boycott "Postum" and "Grape-Nuts."

I was trained to run my business and they were not; yet they propose to, and their abuse has been sufficient to interest me in a study of the fearful conditions that confront our country to-day.

The people of the world have given me money enough to spend in these talks through the papers in trying to make better and safer conditions for the common people, whether the Postum business runs or not.

Scores of letters have come to me from work people and others, some from union men, recounting their sufferings from union domination and urging that their cases be laid before the public.

It will not answer for us to only sympathize with the poor, the oppressed, those who haven't power enough to drive off tyrants and resent oppression; we must help them tie the hands of the oppressors. America must act.

Some of my forebears in New England left comfortable homes, took with them the old flint locks, slept on the ground in rain and frost; hungry, footsore, and half clothed, they grimly pushed on where the Eternal God of Human Liberty urged them. They wove for me and for you a mantle of freedom, woven in a loom where the shuttles were cannon balls and bullets, and where swords were used to pick out the tangles in the yarn.

These old, sturdy grandads of ours stood by that loom until the mantle was finished, then, stained with their life blood, it was handed down to us. Shall I refuse to bear it on my shoulders because the wearing costs me a few dollars, and are you cowards enough to hide yours because some foreign labor union anarchists orders you to strip it off?

I have faith that the blood of 1776 still coursing in your veins will rise and call until you waken. Then labor pains will act.

LATEST TAX FIGURES INDICATE HIGHER RATE

Probably Will Be 1.55 as Against 1.5134 for 1904.

REAL ESTATE OVERESTIMATED

Early Guess at Increase in Values Was $173,376,047, While Late Reports Show But $140,640,552.

Indications of a higher tax rate this year were made stronger yesterday, when the figures of the Tax Department were laid before Mayor McClellan in the form of a report of conditions on March 31. The report showed that the increased value of real estate in Greater New York amounted to but $140,640,552, as against $173,376,047 estimated by President O'Donnel of the department on Jan. 16, when the tentative figures were announced.

The assessments on franchise taxes amounted to an increase of $50,672,100 over the year before, but as the swearing off of personal taxes is expected to bring the total personal property held at a lower figure than last year, it is believed that the assessment increases of the year will be inadequate to furnish a revenue sufficient to meet the increased expenses of the city. Last year the tax rate was 1.5134, while this year it is expected to reach 1.55, although the actual figures will not be known until after the Department of Taxes and Assessments has computed the swearing off of the personal taxes and the alterations that may be made in the tentative realty figures. The total figures for the realty assessments in Greater New York when the books were opened are as follows:

Manhattan	$3,312,145,701	$3,605,354,941	$92,909,180
Bronx	291,029,397	202,203,538	10,673,141
Brooklyn	803,805,107	802,426,647	28,621,540
Queens	127,459,050	135,687,935	8,178,885
Richmond	43,066,424	43,324,230	257,806
Total	$4,705,396,739	$4,939,037,291	$140,640,552

According to the report the assessments under the special franchise act were as follows:

	1904.	1905.	Increase.
Manhattan	$189,944,100	$228,054,000	$38,109,900
The Bronx	10,791,000	14,117,000	3,325,000
Brooklyn	43,790,950	52,206,950	8,416,000
Queens	5,436,600	6,232,600	736,000
Richmond	1,498,200	1,582,000	84,800
Total	$251,521,450	$302,193,550	$50,672,100

The gross or tentative assessments on personality amounted to $3,630,674,671, or a reduction of $950,291,715, from the year before. The swearing-off process probably will reduce the figures held to less than $1,000,000,000 on the personal property, but this is the usual procedure.

BORN BRONX MANSION.

House, 100 Years Old, Falls Before March of Progress.

To make room for the Bronxward sweeping tide of population the torch was applied yesterday to the old Bathgate-Beck mansion, one of the landmarks of that part of the city lying between Woodstock and West Farms. A crowd of several thousand gathered to see the old house burn.

The mansion figured in the suit involving the estate of Charles Bathgate Beck, which at the time of his death amounted to about $5,000,000. It was probably more than 100 years old, and, standing on a hill opposite Crotona Park, half hidden by magnificent trees, it was always pointed out to strangers. It was once the home of Mrs. Janet Beck and her two sons, James and Alexander, and as such figured as the social centre of the upper Bronx.

The occasion for the burning was the clearing of the Bathgate-Beck tract of land, some nineteen acres in all, on which it stood. The property, now owned by Henry Morgenthau, will be put up at auction on May 23, when the 300 lots into which it has been subdivided will be offered through the firm of L. J. Phillips & Co.

New Sketch for Keith Concert.

Alice Davenport has appeared in the rôle of actress-authoress at Keith's in a one-act drama entitled "Now." In the playlet Richard Chetwynd, a wealthy New Yorker, is captivated by a fascinating little Frenchwoman, named Fanchonette, for whom he neglects his wife and child, passing himself off as a bachelor. A duel ensues between the two women, both loving and being deceived by the same man; but the sight of Chetwynd's child turns the balance in favor of the forsaken wife. Accordingly, when Chetwynd calls a few moments later, he is met with mockery and jeers by Fanchonette, who coolly tells him that she cares only for his money, but faints when she has finally driven him home. It is understood that time is being arranged for a regular tour of the Keith circuit.

Climbers' Dramatic Club.

The Climbers' Dramatic Club will present on the evening of May 10 at Carnegie Lyceum three short plays for their final performance this season. They are "Jephtha's Daughter," a comedy adapted from the Italian of Felice Gavalotto; "Under Two Flags," adapted by Margaret Mayo, and "The Miser," an original play by Rodriguis Ottolengui.

Southern Authoress to Lecture.

Mrs. Jeanette Robinson Murphy of Kentucky, author of "Southern Thoughts for Northern Thinkers," a book dealing with the negro race problem, will lecture at the Waldorf-Astoria on the evening of May 15 under the patronage of Robert C. Ogden, Mrs. Jefferson Davis, the Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes, the Rev. Dr. R. S. MacArthur, and others.

LUNA PARK OPENS ON SATURDAY

New Features at Coney Island Showplace.

DRAGONS 75 FEET HIGH

"Coasting the Gorges," a Novel Sensation, and the "Human Torpedo" One of the New Attractions.

When Luna Park opens its doors to the public on next Saturday it is doubtful if even its oldest friends will recognize it in its new garb. For weeks scores of men have been at work at the transformation. As late as yesterday modelers were putting the finishing touches to the great staff figures and electricians were busy wiring the big steel-ribbed ball, a hundred feet in the air—the circle swing. From the new entrance to the rear wall practically every foot of the inclosure has been rebuilt, and all on an elaborate scale.

One of the largest of the new "sensations" will be the "Coasting the Gorges." This will be in a building measuring 200 by 300 feet, which contains 4,000 feet of track, taking apparently impossible curves and grades. The name is taken from the great waterfall, under which the cars shoot at top speed. A feature of the exterior of the structure is the front; a large opening like the proscenium arch of a theatre rounding back to the waterfall, thirty feet high, and flanked on either side by two enormous dragons with outspread wings, 75 feet from tip to tip.

The dragons are said to be the largest individual casts in the world. In length they measure forty-five feet. Four hundred thousand pounds of lumber and other materials were used in making each figure. Each head weighs five tons. The eyes, formed of huge globes of green electric lights, are each two feet in diameter, while the teeth protruding from the open jaws are three feet in length. In the main entrance Turkish recesses ornament the pilasters on either side of the gates, filled with masses of overhanging flowers, which give brilliant color against the ivory staff.

Of last year's attractions, "The Trip to the Moon" and "Fire and Flames" both have been retained. The admission price of the former show will be 10 cents this year. When the attraction was first exhibited at the Pan-American Exposition 75 cents was the price of admission.

Among the performers brought from Europe this year who will appear next Saturday is Raoul Monbar, the "Human Torpedo." Stretched on a flat truck fitted with bicycle wheels, the performer rushes down an incline seventy-five feet long, with a sharp turn upward at the bottom. Here the truck is caught and stopped, while Monbar is propelled with terrific force into space. For a distance of fifty feet he is hurled through the air, at the end of which he grasps a trapeze, from which he executes an intricate set of evolutions, ending with a triple somersault into an extended net below.

FAVORITES BEATEN IN BELMONT PARK RACES

Choices Failed Straight Through for the Holiday Crowd.

ROSEBEN WON TOBOGGAN

Palette, at 30 to 1, Captured Last Event All the Way—Many Falls in the Steeplechase.

Three head-and-head finishes, two of them for the most important races of the afternoon, made thrilling sport for visitors to the new Belmont Park race course yesterday, but good as were the contests, failure of post favorites straight through the programme left much to be desired by the betting men.

In the big event of the afternoon, the fifteenth running of the Toboggan Handicap, at six furlongs, for three-year-olds and upward, the Winter track campaigner Roseben, in D. C. Johnson's colors, was the victor in a hard-fought finish with Sparkling Star and Passadena, the three being only a neck apart at the end, while in the Bouquet Stakes, selling, at five furlongs, for two-year-olds, the Belmont-bred filly Anodyne just managed to squeeze home first by a short nose from Gallavant and Leonard Joe Hayman, the trio being so close together that any one of them might have been declared the winner.

The attendance was of a size to rival the gathering of the first day, about 25,000 spectators witnessing the racing from club, grand, and field stands. The obstructing tree alongside the stretch, which it had been said was to be removed, still shut off a part of the view of the racing, but the more important change planned in the obliteration of the "path" along the stretch side had been accomplished, and a strip of plowed ground reaching from the outer fence for ten feet or so replaced the old hard surface of the "path" and kept the horses out in the track, though the jockeys still moved to the outside, as far as the good going would permit them to get the benefit of the outer fence as a guide rail. The removal of the path had the desired effect in preventing crowding, however, and except in the contest for the Bouquet Stakes, there was no jostling or foul riding.

Five horses scratched from the race for the Toboggan Handicap left a field of twelve to start, with Adbell and Roseben carrying the top weights, 112 pounds each, and Israelite, from the Keene stable, the post favorite at the long price of 4 to 1. The start, made six furlongs away from the stand up the straight course, was with Wotan first away, but Roseben rushed to the lead in the first few strides and remained in front to the end, hard pressed by Wotan, Sparkling Star, and Pasadena, while Israelite, slow to begin, dropped out of the race in the first half furlong. Into the last eighth of a mile Wotan hung on Roseben's hips, but there fell back, while Sparkling Star and Pasadena went on after the pacemaker, and fought it out with him. Roseben winning hard ridden by a short neck and Sparkling Star second, a nose before Pasadena.

In the race for the Bouquet Stakes nine horses ran, with R. T. Wilson, Jr.'s, entry, Gallavant and Jessamine, equal favorites with Leonard Joe Hayman. Leonard Joe Hayman and Gallavant swerved in the last furlong, causing mutual interference, while Anodyne, fourth, closed and joined them in front. In the remainder of the run to the winning post Anodyne was just far enough outside to escape being jostled, while Gallavant and Leonard Joe Hayman still bumped each other, the filly thus being able to get her nose to the front in the last stride and win by a narrow margin from Gallavant.

Horses were falling all through the race for the two-mile steeplechase, fifth on the card, and only eleven starters out of four got over the course and finished. Jimmie Lane, the favorite, was the first to fall on the back stretch, Imperialist the second choice, coming down a short time later, while others fell in such style that jockeys were strewn through the entire field, none of them, however, being seriously hurt. Flying Virginian, the horse third in favor with the betting men, made most of the running, and won away off from Ivan, ridden by the amateur jockey, Mr. Page, Irene Lindsay easily took the first race, and Palette, a 30 to 1 chance, led from start to finish in the last race.

BETTING RING FIGHT ON.

Back Line Men Put in M. T. A. Places at Belmont Park.

The line of the bookmakers' organization, the Metropolitan Turf Association, was broken in the betting ring of the Belmont Park race course yesterday, when for the first time since the bookmakers organized, ten years ago, non-members of the M. T. A. had places in the inner circle or "big ring." This was the outcome of the decision by the Westchester Racing Association to require from the Metropolitan Turf Association a guarantee of a ring of eighty layers every day, with the alternative that should there be less than that number of members of the Metropolitan Association ready to go on the vacant places should be filled by men from the "back line." Notice of this decision was sent to the organized bookmakers Friday night, but yesterday, as if to make a test, the Metropolitan Association had but seventy-seven men there prepared to do business. As soon as this was known to the manager of the betting ring, John Cavanagh, the "back line" bookmakers were informed that three places in the big ring, the first circle of layers, were to be filled and three back line bookmakers were selected by lot to take the vacant seats.

The action taken by the Westchester Club was regarded as the first step toward the establishment of an open ring, with equal privileges to all who might apply for the right to lay odds, and the establishment of such an open ring will result in the breaking up of the bookmakers' corporation. It was said after much talk among the members of the Metropolitan Turf Association that the organization certainly will make a fight to retain its old exclusive privileges, and a meeting will be held to-day at the clubhouse of the organization in West Twenty-sixth Street to decide on the course to be taken.

Since the present racing law was passed the bookmakers have paid for the privilege in a more or less indirect manner, the fee paid at present through the Metropolitan Association amounting to a little less than $60 a day for each bookmaker. Under the old law the bookmakers paid $100 a day for the same privilege.

A return to the old plan of open betting rings would no doubt be welcomed by the public as meaning more competition for business, and therefore better odds in the average of racing.

Race Horses Sold at Auction.

Draughts of race horses in training, most of them two-year-olds, and all of them from the breeding farms of J. B. Haggin, consigned by Mr. Haggin and Sydney Paget, were sold in the saddling paddock of the Belmont Park race course yesterday. The prices realized were rather small, less than a dozen horses bringing $1,000 or more. The best sales were as follows:

J. E. Madden Signs Jockey Baird.

Harry W. Baird, the lightweight jockey, whose services are the subject of litigation between two claimants to the boy under articles of apprenticeship, and who recently was signed as rider by W. H. Snyder under a contingent contract with the present custodian of the boy, yesterday was transferred to J. E. Madden by Snyder, the agreement made when Snyder got the rider to be in force in the Madden contract. The signing of the boy was completed at the Belmont Park race track yesterday, and Baird at once went to join the Madden Stable. Baird is the most successful and at present the most popular of the new comers among the lightweight jockeys.

Hill School Wins Under Protest.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 6.—Hill School won Yale's interscholastic track meet to-day under protest. Sheppard of Brown won the mile and half-mile, but was protested. If disallowed, Worcester gets the meet. Sheppard broke records in both events. F. F. Risley of Mercersburg broke the broad jump figures.

Columbia's New Shell Van Am.

In the presence of a large number of students the new Varsity shell of the Columbia University oarsmen was yesterday afternoon christened "Van Am" by J. Howard Van Amringe, in whose honor the boat is named. This is the third shell to bear his name, the first being the Henley four which won in the English regatta. The Dean addressed the assembled students, saying he was glad to have his name on a boat which was to bear eight such sturdy oarsmen.

SCHOOLBOYS IN DUAL MEET.

Denroche, Eleven Years Old, Runs 100 Yards in 0:12 4-5.

A large number of enthusiastic youngsters attended the second annual indoor games of the Eighth and Twelfth Public School Districts, held in the Twenty-second Regiment Armory last night. From the first event until the close there was no abatement of the enthusiasm, and the roar was deafening. There was a noticeable improvement in the conduct of the games over those of last year, in that the floor was kept clear at all times and the spectators could see the events without difficulty.

Gov. Frank W. Higgins and Mayor George B. McClellan sent greetings to the committee in charge, wishing them success.

The rival schools, No. 40 and No. 19, held sections in opposite ends of the balcony and were foremost in the cheering as well as in point getting. No. 40 won the meet by a wide margin. The future "stars" ran like veterans and outclassed their opponents in nearly every event.

Earl Denroche, one of the smallest and youngest athletes that competed, ran a splendid race for School No. 40 in the junior 100-yard dash. He looked to be about eleven years old, but he made his opponents hustle from start to finish, and by a pretty sprint won in 0:12 4-5. Summary:

100-Yard Dash, Junior.—Won by E. Denroche, Public School No. 40; Henry Grotheer, Public School No. 18, second; C. Botthner, Public School No. 18, third; C. F. Brand, Public School No. 14, fourth. Time—0:12 4-5.

440-Yard Relay, Junior.—Won by Public School No. 30 first team, composed of Earl Denroche, G. Ottinger, W. Fay, and W. Craig; Public School No. 40 third team, second; Public School No. 40 second team, third; Public School No. 14, fourth. Time—0:57 4-5.

880-Yard Relay, open to elementary school—Won by Public School No. 3, with F. Suarez, J. Bender, Jr., S. Tuttle, and R. Horn; Public School No. 25 first team, second; Public School No. 24 first team, third; Public School No. 24 second team, fourth. Time—1:52.

Potato Race.—Won by Max Deneke, Public School 40; Louis Fremikowski, Public School 40, second; Charles Kleppel, Public School 19, third; John Cronin, Public School 18, fourth. Time—0:27 1-5.

FAST TENNIS DOUBLES.

Hatch and Livermoore Win Hard Match on St. Nicholas Courts.

Six teams of lawn tennis players began play yesterday in the special men's tournament on the courts of the St. Nicholas Rink. Their work was very fast, as they hit the ball with considerable force and made it travel at top speed over the green canvas-covered court. Only one of the two matches started was finished, and in this Cyril Hatch and Philip Livermoore defeated Harry Gray and Albert Gray by the score of 6—3, 10—8. T. R. Pell and his partner, J. Edward Hoffman, met R. C. Burden and Thomas Sydell in the other contest of the first round. This contest was discontinued, however, before the opening set had been completed as Pell had been scheduled to compete in another match on his club's courts, the New York Lawn Tennis Club. The pairs that drew byes in the tournament were Frederick Watson and Francis Potter and George Adee and J. C. Waterbury. Both of these teams will play to-morrow in the semi-finals.

In the opening set of the match in which Cyril Hatch and Philip Livermoore won, their concerted volleying disposed of the opposing pair, Harry Gray and Albert Gray. After taking the first set at 6—3, Hatch and Livermoore let up on the pace somewhat, and this almost cost them the second set. The exchanges were all played to the limit of speed, each side being keen to take advantage of every opening that was offered through which to make a pass or to drive the ball for the point.

QUAKERS WIN DUAL MEET FROM COLUMBIA

Develop Great Strength and Easily Defeat Morningside Men.

GOOD TIME IN TRACK EVENTS

Mile, Two Mile, and Pole Vault Result in Unexpected Reverses for Columbia's Sure Things.

Victory went to Pennsylvania in the dual track meet with Columbia yesterday afternoon at Columbia Oval, William's Bridge, by a score of 73 to 44. The Blue and White athletes did not show up nearly as well as had been expected, several of the men going to pieces at critical times. On the other hand, the Quaker team had several surprises in store for the Morningside collegians, and showed unexpected strength.

The sensation of the afternoon was the win of the mile run by T. J. Leary of Pennsylvania. Columbia was counting on Fulton to capture this event in easy style. Leary won in the fast time of 4:33. C. D. McDonald, the two-miler, also started, and was completely killed for his own event by the pace.

The 100-yard dash furnished a pretty race. Dear, the star of the Quaker team, finishing about a foot ahead of Knakul. George Bull, the Columbia freshman, finished third.

Taylor, the crack negro runner of Pennsylvania, was beaten out in the 440-yard dash by Hyman of the Quakers. The latter also won the 220-yard cleverly. Amsler of Pennsylvania and Taylor of Columbia showed good form, while Kirkpatrick, the Quaker pole vaulter, sprung a surprise by beating Williams with 11 feet 3 inches. Summary:

INGOMAR'S MANY TROPHIES.

Foreign Prizes Won by Commodore Plant's Yacht Exhibited.

The foreign trophies won in European waters last season by Commodore Morton F. Plant's schooner yacht Ingomar were recently exhibited in imposing display at the New York Yacht Club. Mr. Plant, although a member of the New York Club, was Commodore of the Larchmont while his yacht was winning her triumphs abroad. However, he did not stand for re-election this season.

There were over twenty pieces in all, but the foreign prizes numbered seventeen. They include English, German, and French trophies, many of them odd as well as handsome. The gold cup of the Royal Yacht Squadron is especially notable for beauty of design and finish. Not less striking is an elaborately carved ivory cup. The Cowes town cups, with the French trophies grouped between them, made a fine display. The latter are odd little figures with pendulous heads. A unique emblem is a representation in silver of a bell buoy with a bell that really rings.

With the single exception of the schooner America, the Ingomar was more successful than any American yacht that has so far raced abroad. The America won every race she sailed in American hands and was generally victorious under her European owners. The schooner Sappho, under the ownership of Vice Commodore William P. Douglas of the New York Yacht Club, also won a number of races in English and French waters during the seventies, but she did not have as many encounters as the Ingomar, nor was she uniformly successful.

The sloop Navahoe, taken to England in 1893 by Royal Phelps Carroll, failed to win a single first prize; but she did succeed in wresting the Brenton's Reef Cup from the Prince of Wales's Britannia in a grand race from Cowes to Cherbourg and return. The sloop Vigilant, raced abroad by George Gould in 1894, was almost uniformly beaten by the Britannia on the Clyde; but she turned the tables on the open waters of the coast and the Solent.

The Ingomar sailed forty-two races abroad and scored seventeen times, taking 12 first prizes, four seconds, and one third. In only five races did she fail to win prizes. In the long-distance race from Dover to Heligoland she was hours ahead of everything, but lost to a tail-ender on time allowance. A change in the course, of which she was not notified, defeated her in one of the German races. In a race at Dover she was put out at the start by a collision with the Navahoe, which was at fault.

EXPERTS IN TENNIS GAMES.

Grant and Dewhurst Victors at Opening of New York Club Courts.

Expert lawn tennis players met on the courts of the New York Lawn Tennis Club, Manhattan Avenue and One Hundred and Twenty-third Street, yesterday in a series of well-played matches. The occasion was the formal opening of the club's outdoor season, and there was a large and enthusiastic gallery present to witness the racquet work of the men. The indoor pair, Wylie Grant and Edward B. Dewhurst, the latter the University of Pennsylvania expert, defeated Henry W. Mollenhauer and Joseph T. McMahon, the leading team of the Kings County Lawn Tennis Club. This competition went through three prolonged sets before it was won by Grant and Dewhurst at 6—3, 6—4, and 7—5.

Another Kings County pair, Frederick G. Anderson and Frederick H. Heitkamp, also lost their doubles match to the spirited playing of T. R. Pell and Harry F. Allen. This match was decided in two sets, the score being 6—3, 6—4.

In the singles Frederick G. Anderson scored a victory over Edward B. Dewhurst. Anderson's passing shots proved too much for Penn's player. Every time Dewhurst came up to the net Anderson shot the ball down his back-hand line and scored the match at 6—4, 6—2. Harry F. Allen also defeated Henry W. Mollenhauer by the score of 6—2, 6—2. Allen's fast work at the net, his volleys, and cross-court smashes carried this contest to a rapid conclusion. Mollenhauer used all of his skill to check Allen's hard hitting of the ball, but the lobs that he sent over the net all fell so short that Allen was enabled to kill these in his most effective manner. The regular open tournament of the club will begin the last of this

ATLANTIC FAVORITE IN OCEAN YACHT RACE

Popular Choice Favors Marshall Boat, Though Experts Differ.

LUCK AN IMPORTANT FACTOR

In Heavy Weather Valhalla Expected to Figure—Endymion, Apache, and Utowana Are Well Regarded.

When the starting gun sounds off Sandy Hook on the afternoon of May 16, eleven yachts will be sent away across the Atlantic in the first international ocean race in contest for the Kaiser's Cup. Eight American boats, six of them built on this side of the Atlantic; two English craft, and one representing Germany will enter for the coveted trophy. With favorable conditions, the run to the Lizard Light is generally expected to occupy fourteen days, though there are a few who look for record time. The weather will cut so large a figure in the issue that there is wide diversity of opinion as to the outcome. With a course so long—3,020 nautical miles is the distance—and with a tenth that width covered by the courses which will be steered by the various competitors, the element of luck will enter into it largely.

Public interest in the race is sure to be very great, not only because of the character of the contest, but also on account of the prize at stake. The five-thousand-dollar gold cup is worthy of the desire of every yachtsman.

There is entered a variety of boats—one ship rigged, one bark, one topsail schooner, two three-masted schooners, five two-masted schooners, and one yawl. Though five of the schooners are auxiliaries, all will sail under canvas alone, the propeller of each being removed and the raising of sails by steam prohibited. The conditions are as fair for such a contest as is possible.

The international aspect introduces a sentimental interest principally, as most yachtsmen regard an American boat as sure to win. Of the English yachts, Valhalla is thought to be formidable only in very heavy weather. The German schooner is not seriously regarded by many, though her capabilities are little known.

Consensus of opinion appears to strongly favor the chances of the Atlantic, though among old seaman and experienced yachtsmen each of the contestants has its following. Popular interest in the Atlantic undoubtedly derives its force from these facts: Designed especially for ocean cruising, she has in her single season's racing developed unquestioned speed. Her victories in the Cape May and Brenton's Reef Cup races are regarded as indicative of her capabilities. The presence on board of Capt. Barr of cup defender fame assures her being well handled.

The Valhalla has probably next to the Atlantic the larger number of advocates. The Earl of Crawford has undoubtedly provided her with an efficient crew to handle her. She has many points of unique interest. First of all she is the only ship-rigged yacht afloat. She is the largest vessel in the race. In heavy weather her size and immense sail spread are sure to count in her favor.

The Utowana is another good performer with moderately heavy weather. She has probably the most consistently good all-around record of any of the competitors. She has made a number of long cruises, and invariably in good time. She won in 1902 the Channel race against a good class, finishing first over the course from the Isle of Wight to Cherbourg to Eddystone Light, to Cowes. However the experts figure, they all concede her a prominent place, though few expect her to win.

The Endymion is a favorite with many for very similar reasons. She holds the record for the fastest passage from Sandy Hook to the Needles. She is a good performer in all-around weather, but has the reputation of being erratic.

These are the four most prominently mentioned popularly. With the others an expectation of victory must be regarded as restricted to a partisan following. About the Hamburg there is the greatest uncertainty. She is an unknown quantity to ninety-nine out of a hundred. Asked for information regarding her, nearly every yachting man replies with a counter query.

She is said to be a good performer in all-around weather. Europeans attach little importance to her except those whose nationality she represents.

There is another well regarded by a small following, the Apache. The Randolph boat is said to have unrevealed possibilities for speed that will amaze those unfamiliar with her. She is said to have records on her log that prove her formidable character. In heavy weather, strong winds with a fairly heavy sea, they say she will finish first, far ahead of anything in the contest. In the same way the Thistle has a devoted coterie of partisans. This feeling is founded almost entirely on her generally substantial abilities and her enthusiastic skipper. Commodore Tod has worked indefatigably for her success, and during the race it is safe betting that he will be driving her every inch of the way, without fear of taking desperate chances. No happy-go-lucky effort will win this race, and therefore the Atlantic Yacht Club representative will be in the hunt beyond all doubt.

The Fleur de Lys has the smallest, but possibly the most devoted, following. It includes the South Brooklyn colony that knows a yacht's sailing capacity better than it knows the alphabet. They say in light weather there will be nothing to the race except the Fleur de Lys. In heavy seas she must be most uncomfortable. Her size—she is the smallest boat in the fleet—and was only admitted after the race conditions were changed to accommodate her—would certainly seem to put her out of consideration with any unfavorable weather conditions.

This leaves only the Sunbeam, the Hildegarde, and the Ailsa. The Sunbeam is an unknown quantity largely with no established record. The Hildegarde similarly has small chances in popular estimation, though favored by

First of all it must be said she is most unsuited to this kind of a race. So strikingly is this the case that many were amazed that she was admitted. In heavy weather she is sure to be discomfited fearfully, and with Lem Miller, mate to Capt. Barr on the Columbia and Reliance, and former sailing master of the Atlantic, an acknowledged dare-devil, in charge there are those who say they would not want to sail on her. Her record is only fair, since she was changed from a cutter to her present yawl rig. For the past two years she has been out of racing, but is said to be in first-class condition, thanks to her thorough overhauling. While Miller will surely get all there is out of her, it is not believed she will figure.

Of the participants, it may be said that Capt. Barr is confident of success. He does not appear to regard the decided favoritism shown his charge as entailing an obligation which he cannot fulfill. In fact every one connected with the Atlantic appears to feel pretty confident of finishing first or second with chances of victory excellent.

Commodore Tod is not the kind to talk much of his chances save to his intimates. He is quoted by them as saying "They don't seem to figure much on us, but there'll be a few who will know more about it when we finish. I wouldn't give Thistle's chance for that of any other boat in the race. If we have any sort of luck we will be right there at the finish, and any boat that beats us out will know that they have been racing all the way."

Edward Randolph, owner of the Apache, feels well satisfied with his chance. Those who are working for his success say that the boat will prove in public what it has done under private trial on many occasions. "With weather," they say, "we will be first over the course beyond all doubt. The boat can stand up under a breeze better than any of her competitors and she is going all the time."

A. S. McIntosh knows the Apache better than almost any other man on this side of the water. He has raced her, and was instrumental in securing her for her present owner. "I think in heavy weather there isn't a chance of beating the Apache," he said. "I have had two of the best amateur yachtsmen in America on board of her when she was going some and they didn't understand what was driving her. And her speed then was not up to her limit by any means. I look for the Apache to surely win with any kind of luck and weather to suit."

Mr. McIntosh, by the way, is one of those few who favor the Fleur de Lys. "In light weather," he says, "there'll be nothing to it but the Fleur de Lys."

Henry G. Gielow, who is one of the best known designers and yacht experts in New York, favors the Atlantic as first choice. "There are so many possibilities entering into such a race that it is impossible to choose accurately a winner. The length of the course, 3,000 miles, and the width, one-tenth that distance, give a sailing area so vast that all kinds of weather may be encountered by the different boats. Within twenty-four hours they will be so widely separated that one will get advantages from sh

Boston Plays in Improved Form and Beats Champions 2 to 1.

Probably 8,000 persons visited the Polo Grounds yesterday to see the second game of the series between the Bostons, the tailenders of the National League, and the New York leaders, and few anticipated any other result than that which befell the visitors in the first contest. But, instead of disporting themselves like automatons, the team from the Hub showed a surprising reversal of form and put up a game such as only a champion team can exhibit. The players were alert, active, uniformly correct in their fielding, and batted Mathewson to the tune of eleven base hits, including a double and a triple. The result of all this was that they scored two runs to one. Pitcher Young had a great deal to do in securing the victory for his team, and by attending strictly to business without any flourishes in his delivery, he kept the local batsmen guessing from start to finish. Frequently the young left-hander had two strikes and three balls called, but in no instance did he give a base on balls. Mathewson also pitched a steady game and was finely supported. Although the Bostons were credited with more hits than the New Yorks, in only one instance, the fourth inning, did they produce beneficial results. Notwithstanding a wild throw by Abbaticchio to first base and Young's fumble of a hit ball in the first inning, the playing upon the part of both teams was of a decidedly brilliant character. Four double plays, two by each team, were made, and they were of the hurricane kind. Devlin made two wonderful one-handed stops and caught the runner at first base, and Dahlen also accomplished the same kind of a play in the ninth inning, getting two men out instead of one. In the sixth inning Sharpe scored a lucky two-base hit, after Donlin had made a herculean effort to catch the fly. The score:

PHILADELPHIA, 11; BROOKLYN, 0.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., May 6.—The Philadelphia team outclassed the Brooklyns to-day and won an easy victory by the score of 11 to 0. Sparks had the visitors at his mercy, three hits, two of them by Lewis, being their record at the bat. On the other hand McIntyre's delivery was easily solved by the local men, and fifteen singles and a double were the result. In addition to the heavy batting the Philadelphias fielded perfectly. Thomas, in centre field, being especially prominent.

Boston Beats Greater New York for the Fifth Time This Season.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., May 6.—Before a crowd of nearly 20,000 persons this afternoon the Boston Americans won their fifth game of the season from the New Yorks, played all around them, and never were in danger of losing, although four of their eight runs were questionable. Umpire Connolly declared Ferris's hit in the fifth inning fair, while Manager Griffith insisted it was foul.

It was in the fifth inning that the champions made their first run, Griffith having taken Chesbro's place, owing to the latter's arm giving out. Freeman drove a fast ball to right field, which apparently went over the fence. Umpire Connolly, however, thought it dropped in the crowd and called it a three-base hit. Freeman scored immediately afterward on Chase's poor throw to the plate of Grimshaw's hit to first base. In the sixth inning five runs were scored by the local men. Burkett was put out on a fly to Williams. Parent was safe on Yeager's fumble. Griffith allowed Stahl's bunt to get away from him. Collins hit for two bases, scoring Parent. Griffith purposely gave Freeman a base on balls, filling the bases. Grimshaw struck out. Ferris hit past third base for two bases, scoring Stahl, Collins, and Freeman. Griffith contended that the hit was foul. A wild pitch placed Ferris on third and another scored him.

Boston made two more runs in the eighth inning, when Stahl singled to right, Collins sacrificed, Griffith to Chase; Freeman hit to Griffith, who ran over and touched Stahl between second and third. Grimshaw batted for a home run over Fultz's head, scoring Freeman in front of him.

New York's first run was made by Dougherty in the third inning. After Chesbro had been retired by Ferris, Dougherty hit weakly along the first base line. Dineen threw the ball near to right field and "Pat" went to third on the error. Keeler sent Dougherty home with a sharp grounder to Ferris. In the sixth inning Conroy hit into the crowd for three bases and scored on Yeager's long fly to Burkett.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 6.—Hesterfer's splendid pitching enabled Newark to defeat Providence this afternoon by a score of 5 to 1, the locals being unable to get more than three scattered singles off his delivery. In the first inning Cockman was injured by sliding to second base, and it was thought that his nose had been broken. A doctor was called, and the Newark third baseman was able to resume play. HONOR FOR SCHILLER IN SONG AND STEIN

German Students Observe Poet's Centenary.

AMERICAN IN THE CHAIR

Prof. Hallock, Though, Attends to Business in Real German Style—Influence of Poet's Work.

German students and Americans who studied in Germany praised his ideals at Arion Hall last night. There were about 200 men present, all of whom had matriculated at a German university, which is one of the requirements of the group of men who banded together at the time of Prince Henry's visit to this country, and who are now spreading their organization over the entire country.

They sang songs in Latin, English, and German, and while they drank the health of President Roosevelt, Emperor William, and Prince Henry, it was to Schiller and his works that they devoted most of their speeches.

One man was present who had shaken the hand that shook the hand of the German poet. He was Dr. William C. Alpers. As soon as he proudly made known this distinction in his speech the hall shook with applause and stein after stein of beer was drained in his honor.

The kommers was no place for a weakling. It is one of the prescribed rules of drinking the salamander that the glass shall be drained to the bottom. That Prof. William Hallock of Columbia, who presided, knew his lesson, became evident at every salamander which he ordered in honor of this or that distinguished person or guest present.

At the end he suggested a salamander to the future students in Germany who had come to this country to study this or that specialty, and again the hall shook with applause after the glasses had been drained. It was "Schiller! Schiller!" and "Deutschland, Deutschland uber alles!" all night long.

In between these songs of student life in Germany came reminiscent stories. Heidelberg, Berlin, and Wurtzburg were spoken of as lands of perpetual youth and poetry. In between came sentiments and songs by Schiller in solos and in chorus.

The presiding officer of the kommers was to have been Dr. Carl Beck. He arrived from Philadelphia only an hour before the commencement of the kommers, and felt unequal to the task of presiding over the festivities, so his place was taken by Prof. Hallock, who, though American by birth, did his work strictly in the German fashion.

Prof. Hallock, after several salamanders had been drunk to the President, the German Emperor, and Prinz Henry, introduced Dr. Carl Beck, who, after calling attention to the coincidence of the date of the kommers with the centenary of the death of the German poet, said in part:

"To us, the old German students, whether born in Germany or in this country, Schiller is particularly dear, because in no other writer or poet do we find so many connecting links with the students' ideal. 'In his first creation, 'Die Raeuber,' (The Robbers,) his heroes are students. The abnormities and abuses of student life are sharply criticised and exposed, but between these shortcomings the noble, manly, inspiring fire of the true poet steps victoriously forward.

"Schiller was a student of only eighteen years of age when he wrote this great drama, and only a student could have written it. It is symbolical of the period in which he lived, a period of 'storm and stress.' Much in it is crude and awkward, but inspired by his wonderful genius it rises to one of the greatest pieces of dramatic art.

"In his later works the poet's train of thought becomes clearer and brighter. His wonderful diction, his masterly command of language, his depth of thought and purity of heart create one masterpiece after the other, until finally in 'William Tell' he presents us with the most perfect drama that the stage possesses."

Another Salamander to Schiller and to Dr. Beck, and then: "Deutsche Frauen, Deutsche Treue, Deutsche Weln, und Deutscher Sang!" Dr. A. Jacobi then was presented. Dr. Jacobi, who is one of the few survivors of the great revolution of 1848, told of the enormous influence that the works of Schiller exercised on the German students in the years before 1848. Much of the inspiration of those years was due to the study of the dramas of this great apostle of freedom, and equal rights. Schiller's first work, "The Robbers," was inscribed "In Tyrannos," and kindled the revolutionary spirit in the hearts of the young men.

Dr. William C. Alpers, who is a veteran of the Franco-Prussian war, told some reminiscences of his early life in connection with the Schiller celebration. He recalled the centenary of Schiller's birth in 1859, when the school that he then attended in Germany was addressed by an old venerable gentleman, who himself had been a friend and pupil of the great German poet, and who had frequently grasped his hand.

"The failure of the great work of 1848," he said, "and the following sharp reaction did not allow the teachers in Germany to open their hearts to their pupils, and for this reason they turned for refuge to the great German poet. Freedom of thought and press there was none, but they could teach the words of Marquis Posa" and "Don Carlos": to preach of the freedom of the individual was a serious crime, but they could read "William Tell" to their susceptible pupils. Thus Schiller's works became the great centre around which education of the middle years of the last century was built.

"Schiller's ideals, his conception of the world, his notion of country, home, and family, of love, honor, and duty, his unshattered belief in the brotherhood of man and the purity and inherent goodness of the human heart, all this became a pure and radiant gospel in whose warmth the boy grew to manhood."

Dr. Alpers told also how on Christmas eve on the battlefield he had recited to his comrades all the Schiller he knew.

Prof. Hallock spoke of the importance of the interchange of thoughts and education with German universities, having himself spent three years at the University of Wurtzburg. In speaking of the value of educational interchange with foreign countries he said:

"That the most important question of the age in its bearing upon the welfare and advancement of all mankind is the relation of nations to each other requires no demonstration or discussion—it is self-evident to one who will consider the matter even in the most superficial way.

"The most powerful influence of all is that exercised by those who, after completing a course of study here, have gone to the German universities. They have received an intimate introduction to the trials and struggles of another, and have received a broad view of their own country. They are far enough away to lose sight of details and can see more clearly where help and direction are needed.

"Alas! where is the corresponding man who has come to America for a course in our universities to learn from us our inside life and see Germany from the outside, and then returned to his fatherland to give him countrymen the benefit of his experience? May they come, the more the better; they will be most heartily welcome."

GERMAN SCHILLER REVIVAL.

Exercises to be Held Throughout the Empire on Tuesday.

BERLIN, May 6.—Schiller's memory will be celebrated on Tuesday, the one hundredth anniversary of his death, in every city and university town in Germany. There will be no fewer than twenty-three public observances in Berlin.

The principal meeting, under the direc-

Tower will represent the American universities. A choir will sing one of Schiller's poems, Dr. Erich Schmidt, Professor of German Literature, will deliver an oration, and the choir will sing the cavalry song from "Wallenstein."

Most of the magazines print Schiller numbers, Schiller postcards fill the mails, and various publishers have advertised new editions of Schiller's works.

The last direct survivor of Schiller's branch of the family, Count Karl von Gleichen-Russwurm, a grandson of Schiller's daughter, Cecilia, has suddenly become the object of many attentions. The widow of Fritz von Schiller, a grandson of Schiller, is also alive.

Count von Gleichen-Russwurm will take part in the commemorative exercises at Marbach, Schiller's birthplace, where the King and Queen of Würtemberg will also be present.

TEACHERS' ELECTION FIGHT.

Circular Answering Woman Suffrage Contingent Is Out.

The circular issued last week by the woman suffrage contingent of the Class Teachers' Association, advocating the removal of the male President of the organization and the filling of his place by a woman teacher, with a view to making a fight for the equalization of the salaries of men and women teachers, has met with some opposition in the association. The members who favor the present policy declare that the new move will do more harm than good. They characterize it as "the notion of a crowd of women suffrage enthusiasts," and have sent out a circular replying to the one issued by the women's faction.

This circular, they assert, will explain the true condition of affairs and will do much toward defeating Miss Anna Louise Goessling, the Recording Secretary of the organization, and the woman suffrage candidate for the Presidency. The election will be held next Tuesday afternoon in Public School No. 15, Schermerhorn Street, near Third Avenue, Brooklyn. John B. Cottrell of Public School No. 19, the President of the association, will run against Miss Goessling.

"We should like to have it understood," said Miss Helen Aitken, Vice President of the association, and one of the leading spirits in the fight against the Suffragists, "that there is a very substantial opposition to the scheme of defeating the election of a man as President. We also want to deny that there was any official or representative sanction back of the circular sent out last week, other than that it was prepared or instigated by one of the present officers who hoped thereby to promote her desire to succeed Mr. Cottrell as President. The other three women officers, including myself, regret that what has been published may have given the impression that the circular in question represented their views, for the opposite is true.

"The women teachers of our organization far outnumber the men, but of the five officers, four are women, and this is surely a fair representation. I know that I am voicing the sentiments of many members when I say that because of the nature of the duties of a President a man is better fitted for the position. I have as much to gain as any one by the equalization of salaries, but I think it is rather a small piece of business to create the impression that this cause is in any way dependent upon the question of whether a man or woman is President of the organization.

"We shall try to show at next Tuesday's meeting that the majority of those present cannot be led like simpletons into supporting the petty ambition of the opposition."

LOSSES IN WATER WASTE.

Register Says $65,000 for More Help Will Add $200,000 to City's Income.

Water Register Joseph W. Savage has a proposition to enrich the city which will come before the Board of Estimate next week. He says he is not in a get-rich-quick syndicate, but he offers the city a return of from $200,000 to $500,000 a year on a $65,000 investment.

Mr. Savage says that the city is losing large sums of money yearly through water waste because of leaks in pipes, defective fixtures in buildings, and from roof tanks. He says that he has only fifty-four Inspectors and that no matter how hard they work they cannot get around to metered buildings oftener than once in six weeks. The water meters on big buildings register only 100,000 feet. When they get to that point they go back and start all over again. Therefore, he says, it frequently happens that the meter has gone back and begun all over again before the Inspector gets around to take the figures. Because of this a man often pays for 10,000 feet of water where he has used 110,000 feet. In addition to this, there are many unmetered buildings, he says, which should be metered.

"Our present force is inadequate," says Mr. Savage. "Give us fifty more Inspectors at $1,000 each and about fifteen more clerks at the same salary and I will guarantee a yearly return of $200,000, and it may reach to two and a half times that figure."

OIL TRUST MEN INDICTED.

Illinois Grand Jury Seeks Extradition of Two from Ohio.

PEORIA, Ill., May 6.—The Grand Jury at Pekin, Ill., has returned indictments against two high officers of the Standard Oil Company. Requisition papers will be asked of Gov. Deneen next Monday.

The two officials are charged with having induced Charles Kercher to swear that he owned a horse and tank wagon, which really belonged to the Standard Oil Company, in order to force Fred Hamsuit, a resident of Pekin, to quit selling the product of the Royal Oil Company, an opposition concern. The case was called to the attention of the office of the Attorney General of the State of Ohio and State's Attorney Charles Schaefer.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 6.—The indictment in Peoria of two Cincinnati men said to be connected with the Standard Oil Company, based on the testimony of Charles Kercher of this city, formerly an employe of the Standard Oil Company, came about through information given to the prosecutor by ex-Attorney General Frank Monnett, who was called to Kansas to investigate Standard Oil methods. Kercher appeared before the Grand Jury on advice of Monnett and other lawyers here under promise of immunity. He will be the principal witness for the State of Illinois when the case comes up.

INTERBOROUGH BOND ISSUE.

Of $10,000,000, Already Sold, for Improvements on Line.

It was announced yesterday that an issue of $10,000,000 three-year 4 per cent. gold notes of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company had been bought by the banking houses of August Belmont & Co., W. A. Read & Co., and Lee, Higginson & Co. The purpose of the issue, which is said to have been already disposed of to investment buyers, was not divulged by August Belmont & Co., at whose office no information on this point was obtainable, but it is generally believed that the issue is to be used for improvements to the syndicate's properties, particularly the New York City Interborough Railway, its new Bronx enterprise.

Pigeon Replaced Wine at Christening.

BANGOR, Me., May 6.—The four-masted schooner Augusta W. Snow was launched at the yard of E. and I. K. Stetson in Brewer to-day. As she left the ways her sponsor, Miss Armstrong, daughter of Capt. Frank W. Armstrong, instead of breaking a bottle of wine over the bow, released a pure white carrier pigeon. The bird circled around in the

LORD BRASSEY HERE IN YACHT SUNBEAM

Yachting Dean Doesn't Think He'll Win Ocean Race.

IN IT FOR THE HONOR ONLY

70-Year-Old Peer, His Own Skipper, Encouraging the Young Fellows—As to Mr. Carnegie.

Lord Brassey, dean of British yachtsmen, arrived in New York yesterday on his yacht the Sunbeam after a voyage across the Atlantic that extended over 6,500 miles. The Sunbeam is one of the two British yachts that will compete in the forthcoming race across the Atlantic for the cup offered by the Kaiser, although the venerable owner frankly admitted last night that he didn't have the slightest idea that she would win. The Sunbeam is thirty-four years old, and she has sailed over 300,000 miles.

Lord Brassey is stopping at the Lafayette-Brevoort. He is now seventy years of age, but is as spry as he was a decade ago.

"When I first heard of the race for the Kaiser's Cup," said Lord Brassey, "I didn't think it was up to me to compete, as the Sunbeam is thirty-four years old, while I am more than twice that. I've been sailing the ocean, you must remember, for half a century. However, I realized that very few British vessels would enter, so I decided to go in for the honor of it, and to encourage the younger men of my country who were less enthusiastic than I.

"Another reason was that nearly my entire life has been passed in the public service, and I know of no higher aim for British public men than to seize every opportunity to strengthen the bonds of friendship uniting the English-speaking peoples. Such contests as this tend to that end. Still another reason was to discourage what appears to me to be a decreasing interest on the part of the English people in maritime affairs.

"Speaking of the Sunbeam, I will say that in my fifty years at sea I've never had a finer crew than the one that now mans her. Every voyage I have ever made across the Atlantic in her has been over the southern course, which course I recommend as the most expeditious for sail power. I came the southern way this time because Lady Brassey, who is in full sympathy with me, was to meet me at Madeira.

"We have been on the way thirty-four days, but that was due to a certain extent to my cook. For some reason he failed to adequately provision the Sunbeam at Madeira, and even forgot about the ice. The result was we had to put into Las Palmas, and also at St. Thomas, thereby losing probably 700 miles. On the voyage we averaged 144 knots a day. The winds were too light for fine work under sail. Who is the Sunbeam's skipper? Well, so far as I know, I am that man.

"Reverting to the coming race," added Lord Brassey, "in strong winds I think the Earl of Crawford's Valhalla should prove the victor. In light winds, one of the schooners will probably win. Personally, if I should build another yacht it would not be another Sunbeam. I would be inclined to build along American lines."

Lord Brassey talked briefly of the East Side Immigration Association, and Dr. Bernardo's association of London, he being President of both organisations.

"If I had arrived earlier," he said, "I would have gone to Montreal to see how the people sent over by these associations are getting along. Dr. Bernardo's association, which claims to keep an open door for every miserable child who seeks shelter, now has an annual income of £200,000, whereas when it started its funds totaled only £200."

When he was told of Andrew Carnegie's remarks about honest coachmen and worthless Dukes, Lord Brassey smiled and replied:

"Mr. Carnegie has many friends in England, including John Morley and the Lord Chief Justice. We all know of his liberality. We know very little, however, of the Steel Trust."

COACH NOT STONED.

The Venture, with Bicycle Policeman at Call, Goes Safely.

The coach Venture, with its load of society folk, including Miss Alice Roosevelt, made the trip from the Holland House to the Belmont track and back yesterday without having a single pebble thrown at it by east side boys.

The zone of trouble for the coachers is said to be Eighty-sixth Street, between Second Avenue and Avenue A. Backers of the coaches at the Holland House are said to have worried a little because neither Commissioner McAdoo nor Capt. Cottrell of the Tenderloin Station will authorize bicycle policemen to escort the coaches to and from the Ninety-second Street ferry, although bicycle policemen, particularly Policeman Debes, are riding right along each day, serving as outriders to the Venture and the Pioneer.

On the Venture's trip on Friday, it was reported, some bad boys threw pebbles at the passengers.

Yesterday the Venture had no adventures at all. Debes was on hand at the Ninety-second Street ferry, several miles out of his precinct, to meet the coachers. He declared last night that some five hundred boys were waiting for the Venture at Eighty-sixth Street. They blew horns and yelled derisively, he continued, but seeing him they didn't throw a pebble.

Robert L. Gerry was the whip of the Venture yesterday. J. R. Townsend was the host, having the following as his guests: Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goelet, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coster, Miss Alice Roosevelt, Miss Cornelia Harriman, Bradish Johnson, and J. Frederic Kernochan.

RETURN PAINTING OR VALUE.

Dealer's Methods Call Forth Rebuke from Magistrate.

Miss Lillie Spencer, an artist, living in the Windermere apartments, Fifty-seventh Street and Ninth Avenue, was the complainant, in the West Side Court yesterday, against Jacob Lowenbein, a picture dealer, of 849 Amsterdam Avenue, whom she charged with refusing to turn over to her the proceeds of the sale of a valuable oil painting.

The picture in question was called "The Springtime," and was painted by Miss Spencer's mother, Mrs. Lydia Martin Spencer. It belonged to a collection of twenty-five paintings, the rest of which Miss Spencer still retains. It has been valued, Miss Spencer says, at $1,000 by an agent of the Vanderbilt Galleries.

Two years ago, according to Miss Spencer, she placed the picture in Lowenbein's hands, with instructions to sell it for $500. Later, Miss Spencer told him to sell it for $400 if he could get the money at once. When the money was not forthcoming Miss Spencer demanded the picture, and then, she said, Lowenbein admitted that he had sold the picture to George H. Proctor, who lives at the San Remo, in Central Park West, for $350.

In court Lowenbein did not deny that he had sold the picture for the sum named by Miss Spencer, and Magistrate Crane ordered him to return it.

"You must give him back the money, too," the Magistrate said, "and you must not deal in pictures in this manner. You are not a picture dealer, but a picture framer, and you must not sell pictures that are entrusted to you for framing."

MAY STOP EQUITABLE TALK.

Directors to Act, It Is Believed—Hyde Not to Resign, Untermyer Says.

The belief was general in circles connected with the Equitable Life Assurance controversy yesterday that strenuous efforts would be made by the Directors who might attend the conference on Monday to come to some conclusion that would stop the public airing of the Equitable controversy that was taken up afresh last week. Although nobody was found among Directors questioned yesterday who would admit the authorship of the call for the conference, the impression gained ground from the vehemence with which some of the Alexander adherents criticised the move that it at least did not come from friends of President Alexander.

Samuel Untermyer, counsel for James H. Hyde, yesterday denied that Mr. Hyde had any intention of resigning. He said: "All talk of Mr. Hyde's resignation under any circumstances is all bosh and circulated for a purpose. Whatever may be the course of others who have no interests at stake, Mr. Hyde has interests and a reputation to protect, and he will protect them."

The suit to oust President Alexander as a trustee of the Equitable stock contained in the estate of Henry B. Hyde will it is expected be begun early this week.

BOY KILLED IN CAVE.

Earthen Roof Falls In and Seriously Hurts Another.

One boy was killed and another seriously injured by the falling of the earth roof of a cave in which they were playing yesterday. The cave was located in a vacant lot in the block bounded by One Hundred and Forty-seventh and One Hundred and Forty-eighth Streets and Amsterdam and St. Nicholas Avenues. The dead boy is Charles Arni, ten years old, of 1,785 Amsterdam Avenue, and his playmate, who was dug up unconscious, is Frank Roner, aged nine years, who lives in the same house.

In the centre of the vacant lot is a large mound, and early in the Winter boys of the neighborhood had dug into this a place in which to play, making an earthen room 10 by 12 feet in size. Arni and Ronen were at the place early yesterday and went inside, while a number of other boys climbed on top.

Suddenly the roof gave way, precipitating the boys into the cave and burrying Arni and Ronen. The boys on the outside gave the alarm, and Augustus Hackney, who happened to be passing the place on a wagon, leaped to the ground with his shovel. He was immediately joined by other men with shovels, and they began to dig.

In a few minutes Ronen was uncovered. He was quickly revived, and then he told them that Arni was still in there. The rescuers again commenced to shovel the broken earth out of the hole, but stopped work after a while, believing that the boy was mistaken. Ronen, however, kept on insisting, and after considerable work the shovelers uncovered the unconscious form of Arni. Restoratives were applied, but when an ambulance surgeon arrived he said that the boy was dead.

While the men were working over young Arni, the boy's mother arrived. As soon as she saw the boy she went into hysterics and had to be attended by the ambulance surgeon.

STARVED, SHE SAID.

125-Pound Husband Contradicted 308-Pound Wife.

Louise Endrinao, 19 years old, 5 feet in height and weighing 308 pounds, appeared before Magistrate Crane in the West Side Court yesterday with her husband, Tony Endrinao, 5 feet 10 inches in height and weighing about 125 pounds.

"Well?" said the Magistrate, casting a curious glance at the oddly matched couple.

"Your Honor," said Mrs. Endrinao, leaning heavily against the rail, "I have been married to this man for three years and a half."

Tony gazed at the ceiling with melancholy eyes. His long, thin hands were idly clasped behind him.

"For the first two years or more he was all kindness to me."

As Mrs. Endrinao paused to draw in a hurricane of breath, Tony sighed.

"But during the last year," continued Mrs. Endrinao, "he has neglected me, ill-treated me—yes, starved me."

And with this climax, Mrs. Endrinao brought down her hand upon the rail with a slap. The rail trembled.

Magistrate Crane looked at the voluminous Mrs. Endrinao, then at Tony, whose figure he could descry through the railing.

"I deny it," said Tony, mournfully.

"Discharged," said the Magistrate.

W. Bourke Cockran will open the fair, and there will be a drill by a battalion of Irish Volunteers. There will be contests for the most popular Knight of Columbus and most popular letter carrier.

LOADS OF BIRDSHOT FOR BLACK HAND MAN

Women Held Alleged Agent While Baker Got Gun.

VISITOR CAUGHT AT HOSPITAL

Had Fired Two Shots at Mount Vernon Man, Who Had Received Letters Demanding $500.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT VERNON, May 6.—Antonio Fotti, an alleged agent of the "Black Hand Society," fired two shots at Giovanni Barberri, a baker at South Columbus Avenue and Sixth Street, Mount Vernon, last night, and then held the crowd at bay with two revolvers. When Fotti was struggling with the crowd Barberri rushed into the house, and, securing a double-barreled shotgun which he had in waiting for the man, fired both charges at him. The gun was loaded with birdshot, with which Fotti's head and neck were liberally sprinkled. With the blood streaming down his face and neck, Fotti ran to Yonkers, a distance of three miles, and sought refuge in St. Joseph's Hospital, where the police, who had followed the trail of blood, arrested him. Fotti was brought back to the Mount Vernon Police Station, where he remains silent.

Several weeks ago Barberri received a letter demanding that he send the writer $500. The money was to be sent to an address given in One Hundred and Tenth Street, New York. No attention was paid to the letter. In a few days another letter was received by Barberri. It was followed last week by still another. All the letters were signed "Black Hand," and were mailed in Brooklyn. In the last letter threats were made if the money was not forwarded at once to the address given one of the band who had been selected would come to Mount Vernon and kill Barberri.

Although Barberri paid little attention to the threatening letters, the members of his family were nervous over the "Black Hand" business. Barberri decided to be prepared for the coming of the "society's" agent. He got a shotgun, and, loading it with birdshot, put it in a place convenient to his shop.

While Barberri was closing his store on Friday night, Fotti appeared and asked if he had received the "Black Hand" letters.

"Yes, I did," answered the baker, "and they can go to —." With this Fotti drew two revolvers and drove Barberri into the street. Women and children gathered around the baker when Fotti fired two shots into the crowd. Luckily they did not take effect.

The women seized Fotti and attempted to throw him down, but he showed fight and managed to keep his feet. Barberri got his gun, and then yelled to the crowd, "Let him go!". The women did as they were bid, and Fotti started to run. When he was about 200 feet from the crowd Barberri fired both charges of birdshot at him.

"You've killed me!" cried Fotti, as he kept on running.

TO COMPLETE ST. MONICA'S.

Archbishop Will Lay Cornerstone To-day—Work to Go on Rapidly.

Archbishop Farley will lay the cornerstone of St. Monica's Church in East Seventy-ninth Street to-day. Work to complete the edifice will be carried on as rapidly as possible thereafter. Mgr. Mooney will preach the sermon.

The foundation of the church was built by the late Rev. James J. Dougherty. The present pastor is the Rev. J. D. Lemmon. The building will have a frontage of 80 feet and a depth of 150 feet, making it one of the largest Catholic churches in the city. The architects are Messrs. Schickel & Ditmas.

It has been decided not to expend money on a tower. There will be a fine central doorway and an imposing window, flanked by two turrets to indicate the nave. The aisles are somewhat lower, and will be reached by side doors. The material of the front will be of granite for the base and stoop, and the work above will be of gray brick. Steel girders and columns have been adopted to give the church the advantage of modern construction. The style of architecture will be ornate French Gothic.

Musical-Dramatic Matinee.

An all-professional musical-dramatic matinée will be given at the Garden Theatre on May 11, the performance beginning at 2:15 o'clock. The matinée will be for the benefit of the Nazareth Day Nursery. Among the musical numbers will be selections from Gounod's "Faust," by Mme. Selma Kronold, soprano; William H. Rieger, tenor; Claude Cunningham, baritone, and Signor Giorgio Narberti, basso. Anton Hegner will play the 'cello. Mr. Cunningham will give a cycle of songs, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. B. H. Burnett. The third act of

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

A week is an age in Wall Street, and yet it must be remembered that a week ago to-day Wall Street was quaking in fear of it knew not what. There had been a larger decline in a fortnight than in several months, and apprehension was keen lest the fall might run indefinitely further. And lower levels were reached on Monday. After a fainthearted rally, still lower again were made upon Wednesday and Thursday. It might be thought that as the prices fell the chill degenerated into panic. Upon the contrary, those who ten days ago were apprehensively declaring that conditions were about as bad as they had ever known them, were saying cheerfully that after all some things on the list might be worth something, and the week ended cheerfully enough in contrast with the preceding Saturday's gloom. Yet the interval developed nothing adequate to account for the changed sentiment. Not one of the reports upon which the fall was based was denied, and not one of the obstacles to an improving market was removed. The distress of the wheat pool, the distrust arising from the Equitable and Milwaukee episodes, the competitive animus among the railway magnates, have been hustled off the stage, but nobody can say that their baleful influence has been reduced at all. The war in the East has not altered its phase in any respect, and with the approach of the end of the President's holiday it may be anticipated that there will be a revival of anxieties over affairs on this side the Atlantic. Secretary Shaw is walking the floor with his lusty growing infant, the Treasury deficit, and others than he are perceiving that questions of ways and means which may be burked while a surplus is growing become pressing when bank deposits are dwindling. It is equally true that the encouraging features of the situation also are unaltered, but the fact only emphasizes the point that the financial situation, whatever it is, has not altered, although a customer who has been away from the Street for a few days would not recognize the blackboards, so differently do the prices look. A Western visitor whose name is well known, watching the gloom as the list was marked down, said if they would give him a board and a piece of chalk he would mark up prices which would make everybody feel more cheerful, and which would mean just as much regarding values as those coming out of the ticker. It may seem a sorry jest to those whose margins have run off, and who find themselves out on the sidewalk just as the fiddler scrapes a merrier [illegible]. And yet many a true word is spoken in jest.

The most generally important news of the week was the publication of the reports of March net earnings of the railways. The gross earnings we had before, with their testimony to the great volume of traffic moving. With the indicated amount of distribution there is a corresponding volume of consumption and production—for commodities are not moved about aimlessly. But production, distribution, and consumption might all be on a large scale and the railways still be running behind because of the expense of their operation. This was long a bugbear, but experience is lessening its powers for harm. The figures for March take on added significance when contrasted with other years, and with the market movement for the same period. Here are a few individual reports, and some totals, reproduced both as proof of what has been said and as a text:

*Decrease.

It will be remembered that the highest average price for representative railways was 129.30, on Sept. 9, 1902. The lowest later average was 88.80, on Sept. 28, 1903. The present average is 118.66, against 127 on April 14. If the history of speculation affords an equal fall with so little solid reason, it would be interesting to have the citation made. A more solid and stable development of intrinsic factors of value it would be difficult to conceive, and impossible to desire within the limits of the practicable. Yet concurrently there was a fall of 40 points in price, followed by an almost equal rise. Now there is a renewal of the fall, with the earnings still growing. This seems to make a mockery of all rational discussion of stock market movements. How can it be said that the price changes corresponded to anything except a sentimental appraisement, changing as often as the moods of the market. As a matter of fact there were ten distinct rallies while the market was falling from its highest to its lowest average, and there were a similar number of declines when the rally to the recent high average was being made. But nobody can trace any such fluctuation in the values as revealed in the earnings. The year 1903 was one long agony of liquidation, demonstrating that values do not count when stocks are offered in sufficient volume. The year 1904 was marked in its earlier portion by the Baltimore fire and by the Sully failure. The Lawson panic fell in its later months. The iron market, it is true, waxed and waned much as stock prices did, but it is now known that it was a false alarm, springing largely from the idea that the [illegible] market, like the stock market, is a [illegible] and that a fall in [illegible] for example, are running ahead of 1901, although speculation is more moderate this year. In other words, a larger proportion of the larger business is due to trade. That this is upon a sound basis appears from the April failures. Since July, 1902, only one month has made a better showing of insolvencies. Such defaults are always few upon the crest of speculation, when business is supported by rising prices. But we are past the crest, upon a moderate and declining scale of commodity values, so that this test is exceptionally significant. The returns of the New York Custom House and Post Office—postal receipts for April exceeded any other month—prove that these general considerations regarding the country as a whole are even surpassed by the local conditions.

On the other hand the war is nearer its crisis, and labor conditions, which have been exceptionally good for a May, are taking on an ugly aspect in Chicago. Moreover, we are entering upon months which are certain to be marked by crop scares, whatever the harvest, and at the end is the prospect of disturbing legislation when Congress meets in special session. And there is a great deal of financing to be done. A half billion of bonds have been issued this year, and not all of them have found their final resting place. Speaking generally, it seems as though natural conditions were about as good as can be, but that they are offset by artificial obstructions to prosperity in some degree. To some of us it seems as though the railway situation might be left to the present laws, and as though the tariff limitation upon trade might be lessened. But others take a different view with an equal right to [illegible] The outlook is good, but there are [illegible] to catch a cautious eye.

It is to be feared that there is no final answer to these questions applicable to all cases. Beauty lies in the seeing eye, and value—as distinct from price—is largely a matter of the appraiser's temperament. Here, it may be fancied, lies the explanation of our plunging and soaring markets. They are due to our National temperament, rather than to fluctuations in the values of our properties. Englishmen or Germans, given the same counters to play with, would have a more moderate game. They might have a corner once in a generation, but not once a year. They would have cycles once a decade, not once a twelvemonth. It is merely one of our little ways, because we are so youthfully strenuous in speculating, as well as in work and play. Then our tariff gives us an artificial basis of prices, and, too, our values depend so much upon our harvests, which are not under such control as operations of trade. It may be expected and hoped that we shall eventually have sown our wild oats in these respects, and that we shall settle down to more humdrum ways.

Meanwhile—the market aside—it is pleasant to remark that the indications afforded by the railway earnings above are supported by later signs of solidity and prosperity. The April clearings, for the building of warships for the Russian Government.

CLARENCE S. DAY, who has sold his seat on the Stock Exchange to Philip O. Mills, was one of the oldest members of the Stock Exchange, having joined in 1866. For twenty years he was a member of the Governing Committee, and he was on the committee which framed the present commission laws. Up to 1887, his firm was Gwynne & Day. On the retirement of Mr. Gwynne, Mr. Day continued business alone under his own name. In 1897-8 the firm became Clarence S. Day & Co., on the admission of his oldest son to partnership. In January, 1903, the firm became Day, Adams & Co., with Clarence S. Day as one of the special partners. He is still associated with the firm in that capacity.

EZRA LINCOLN, head of the Stock Exchange firm of Lincoln, Caswell & Co., left last week on an extended trip through the Southwest, where he is investigating certain properties in which he is interested. He reports conditions in good shape, although the cotton crop is behind several weeks on account of the cold Spring.

UNION PACIFIC'S PROBLEM

The Importance of the System Discussed.

ITS PAST AND ITS FUTURE

How the Solution of the Northwestern Railroad Tangle Is Involved with It.

The affairs of the Union Pacific Railroad have always been of the most far-reaching interest. Never has there been so much confusion or uncertainty concerning them as at present. Too much gossip is circulated, because there is no one to deny what is perhaps manifestly false, and, if the truth is told, there is none wise enough to recognize it. The value of Union Pacific is as much related to its position in the final adjustment of the Western railroad situation as to its earning power, and it is but natural that the market for the common stock should fluctuate widely as divergent opinions gain currency.

The special meeting on Friday, authorizing the issue of $100,000,000 of new preferred stock, important as it was, by no means clears the situation. It only defines the mystery. The preferred stock is authorized, but not issued. Its purpose is unknown, although variously reported to be for everything from new construction to the purchasing of an interest in other railroads.

The reason for the common stock's decline is as well unknown, for it cannot be said that the weak stock market caused Union Pacific's decline. Rather the weakness in Union Pacific was the weakening feature of the stock market. "As Union Pacific goes so goes the market," has become a truism. The fact is that the Western railroad situation has not yet been adjusted, the tangle brought by the Northern Securities affair has not been straightened out, and the destiny of Union Pacific, which is the crux of the whole situation, is not determined.

Union Pacific's stock market importance is the natural sequel of its vast strategic value. And the strength of its geographical position has been its mainstay from the first. The receivership which came in 1893 was largely the result of lax management of earlier years, which allowed the Burlington and the Northwestern to encroach upon Union Pacific territory and to rob it of its traffic, while Union Pacific itself was making no efforts to secure feeders. Five years later, when Mr. Harriman took hold of the affairs of Union Pacific, his first move was to strengthen its already remarkable natural advantages by acquiring the Southern Pacific, that its Central Pacific might extend the terminus of Union Pacific from the desert of Utah to the Pacific Coast.

The next step was the entire rebuilding of both roads. No such gigantic undertaking was ever known in railroad affairs. "Grading machines and dump wagons were sent into the hills in trainloads. Steam shovels, the leviathans of the railroad camp, crossed the mountains in processions. They scooped the borrow pits, cut the shale from the tunnels, dug the Sherman ballast, and loaded even blasted granite upon cars out of the rock cuts." Thus graphically does Frank H. Spearman describe the work in his "Strategy of Great Railroads," and he adds, in referring to the Central Pacific, "Through a more forbidding country, and under difficulties no less formidable, Hood's Southern Pacific corps has made over almost wholly the Central Pacific. In a distance of 450 miles on the old line they have built 200 miles of entirely new road, bored two miles of tunnels, and put 8,000,000 pounds of steel into bridges. To do away once and forever with the terrific grades and curves made in pushing north around the Great Salt Lake, the Southern Pacific engineers have run a trestle twenty-three miles long across Salt Lake, through water thirty feet deep, taking railroad trains further from land than they have ever yet been run."

But what is the bearing of all this upon the present mysterious situation? Simply this, that it shows what there is to this great Union Pacific system, which now has reached out into the control of some 17,000 miles of railroad, and has in its treasury some $341,000,000 par value of stock and bonds, which give it a voice in the directing of other roads. Well do people ask, Why is not Union Pacific as valuable as Northern Pacific, with which its stock used to be on a par? Well do they wonder at its market weakness at a time when Western combinations are expected to give it market strength. And the answer seems to be that the Harriman policy has reached the limit in the rebuilding and upbuilding of the road, and that through stock market operations, other powerful capitalists have secured a voice in the management, that they may curb Mr. Harriman's specific purposes relating to Union Pacific and may bring it into the scope of their larger plans for the harmonious working of Western lines. The lessening of the Harriman influence has been not without friction among large interests. But the object once fully attained the harmony will be greater than ever.

Henceforth Union Pacific may reap the advantages of combination which have so helped Northern Pacific during the past few years. A Western newspaper took exception to a recent statement in THE TIMES that the wealth of the Northwest—referring to its railroads—is based largely on its mining resources. The critic unfortunately failed to observe, by reading the context, the application of the statement. It is true enough that the Northwest, and the Middle West as well, depend for their wealth upon agriculture, upon grazing and cattle raising, upon dairying, upon lumber and upon manufactures, and not upon mines. But if the railroads of the Northwest have any claim to wealth distinct from the claims of the roads of other sections, it is based largely on the mining resources of that section—the mining wealth that, for instance, has added so richly to the heritage of Great Northern stockholders. The point made then, however, is the point most of all worth repeating in the present instance, namely, that, barring the advantage derived from wealth in mines, the real reason for the greater value and faster growth which railroads of the Northwest claim, is the successful working of the illegal Northern Securities combination, which has put them well ahead of competitors with which they hitherto had but kept pace. The same test can be applied elsewhere, and where logical combinations can be made, greater values can be figured out than appear under present conditions.

The speculative markets may not be as active in the near future as they have lately been—such is common opinion—but the position of the Western railroads, treat the situation too lightly and to expect nothing to develop. Northern Pacific, Great Northern, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, Chicago and Northwestern, and Union Pacific are six great roads of which not one is complete in itself, and several threaten to build, to complete their independent through systems. Regarding the various combinations which are suggested, it can be said only that the final outcome will find through lines cemented together out of this present entanglement. A change in the control of some of the roads may be necessary to overcome opposition. It is believed already that Union Pacific's opposition is being overcome in this way. The uncertainties and surprises in the stock market will not rest until through lines have become assured, and the forces that make for progress in this country are working constantly in that direction.

NEW BOND ISSUES.

Apparent Indifference of Investors—Liquidation in Stocks Likely to Activate Bond Market.

It is expected by bond houses that a continuance of the liquidation in the stock market will again serve to turn the attention of investors from the stock market to the bond market. Thus far, however, there has been no perceptible increase in the business in bonds, it being probably too soon for such a diversion to make itself felt. Meanwhile bonds have been declining along with stocks, and when purchases of the latter are begun on a larger scale the beginning of the movement will find the bond market at a level more advantageous to the purchasers than that which had prevailed for many weeks. In the present state of the market it would appear to be the older issues of bonds rather than the newly announced ones, that will receive the best support. This feeling on the part of the investor appears to exist, for example, in the case of the Pennsylvania Railroad 3½ per cent. convertibles, the right to subscribe to which expired last week. The "rights" which were at first quoted at three-eighths of 1 per cent., were toward the end to be had for the asking. Moreover, there has as yet been no open market made for the bonds, which appears to indicate a lack of any general interest in the new issue.

Another issue of the past week that in some respects is of special interest is the renewal of the $30,000,000 short term bonds of the Southern Pacific Company. In this instance a short-term bond is issued to take the place of another similar issue. Apart from the attitude of investors toward the new issue the incident is interesting as showing that, despite the excellent conditions that for some time had existed in the security markets, the short-term obligation is still in vogue. The essential difference, however, as compared with the former use of these short-term issues, is that two years ago a long-term bond could not have been sold at any reasonable price, whereas now the chief reason for issuing such short-term obligations, apparently, is to provide temporarily for requirements for which, for some reason or other, the management of the properties concerned are not prepared to make permanent provision. In this instance the rate of interest on the two five-year bonds is reduced from 4½ per cent. to 4 per cent., but apparently the retirement of the old issue six months ahead of maturity was not for the purpose of effecting any saving in interest, for the reason that the new bonds are being sold at a 2 per cent. discount from par, which is sufficient to offset the lower interest rate.

THE BANK STATEMENT.

Favorable Showing, Including Further Reduction in Loans.

Another substantial reduction in loans reflecting continued sales of securities held on margin was the most favorable feature of yesterday's bank statement. The falling off in loans amounted to $5,780,200, and deposits were smaller by $2,630,700. There was an actual increase in cash holdings of $1,406,500, which, with the reduction in reserve requirements, resulted in a gain of $2,064,175 in surplus reserve. The banks are thus further prepared for the return of Government deposits, of which a portion under the recent withdrawals is to be returned during the coming week. The surplus reserve now stands at $18,729,425 as compared with $22,724,200 at this time last year.

BRITISH IRON TRADE.

Animation and excitement have prevailed all the past week in the pig iron warrant market, the persistent buying being an even more conspicuous feature than the general selling, the purchasers to all appearance being identified with the prolonged operations, having as their object the uplifting of prices. Rumor has had it that some of the leading parties connected with the campaign have been quietly disposing of their holdings, but the market generally judges now that this is not the case, and fears of a scarcity in the supplies of warrants are being entertained despite the steady increase in the quantity of iron which is being placed in store. The more sanguine party are still pinning their hopes upon American purchases of foundry iron. America may be contemplating such transactions, but if so she manages to conceal her intentions very cleverly. Buyers of pig iron for the home trades are most unwilling to pay current prices, and in Scotland they are making such free use of local output that the Scotch ironmasters are wellnigh unanimous in saying that they are doing a better trade than for years. Finished iron inclines to dullness, especially in the commoner qualities, and there is an absence of cohesion among makers in the matter of prices. Steel is fairly steady, makers of shipbuilding material holding heavy engagements; but they are feeling the need of prompt specifications from the shipyards of the Clyde and the northeast coast. The general demand is not very brisk, but the new quarter has not opened out so badly, and once the Easter holidays are over the market is likely to assume a more cheerful appearance. Large shipments of steel are still being made from the United States to Wales, and of late for the building of warships for the Russian Government.

Told 'Round the Ticker.

C. J. PEABODY of Spencer Trask & Co. made his appearance on the floor of the Stock Exchange the other morning resplendent in the glory of a silk hat. Much to his surprise, he created quite a sensation. Dozens of members approached him, slapped him on the back, and asked him if the hat represented his "dividend." Others wanted to know if he could not give them a good job with the firm, as they would like to share in the "dividend" also. Mr. Peabody was bewildered and did not understand until they showed him a clipping from THE TIMES to the effect that his firm had just distributed the regular annual dividend to its employes under a profit-sharing plan which had been in operation for twenty-five years. Then he understood, and he now wonders that no one took liberties with the hat.

W. H. MOORE, the head of the so-called Rock Island party has gone West, accompanied by his brother, J. H. Moore, and by D. G. Reid and Robert Mather. This leaves only B. F. Yoakum in the city, as W. B. Leeds is in Europe. The party that started West will make a general trip of inspection over the system. When Wall Street heard of this journey yesterday it began to wonder if on their return East these men would be more willing to permit a market movement in the common stock of their property. Heretofore they have refrained from encouraging any attempt to advance the price of the stock, on the ground that the condition of the road did not warrant such a movement at that time.

J. S. BACHE & CO. and several of the other large brokerage firms who moved to new quarters on April 29 had a very exciting time of it. It was a Saturday, and the market closed in a panicky condition. Between noon that day and 10 o'clock the following Monday morning they had to get things into shape so that they would be able to continue business in spite of the strenuous market without interruption or damage to themselves or their customers. This was not an easy object to accomplish, and required the concentrated attention of every member and employe from the senior partners to the last office boy. The most complicated part of the moving was that which related to the wire service. With Bache & Co. this was particularly intricate, as they operate an unusually large number of wires, but everything was ready Monday morning. Most of the employes and members, however, worked all night Saturday and most of Sunday before everything was in working order.

J. E. HULSHIZER, formerly a special partner in the Stock Exchange firm of T. A. McIntyre & Co., has become a general partner in the firm, while L. T. Feil has retired from the firm and Edward T. White has been admitted. Moses Taylor and D. G. Boissevain have become partners in the banking house of Kean, Van Cortlandt & Co. Henry B. Britton has been admitted to the Stock Exchange firm of Britton & Fiero. M. C. Branch has become a partner in the Stock Exchange firm of Thomas Branch & Co., William F. Velten has been admitted to the Stock Exchange firm of L. L. Benedict & Co., and Dean C. Molleson has become a member of Willard H. Jones & Co., members of the Stock Exchange.

JEFFERSON M. LEVY, the "original bull" on Canadian Pacific, last week moved into a new suite of offices at 27 Pine Street. They are the same offices which were occupied by the Great Northern Railroad before it went into the Northern Securities Company, and Mr. Levy's room is the one which James J. Hill used to occupy when he was in town, and where he is believed to have thought out many of the details of the gigantic merger which was recently dissolved by the courts. Mr. Levy has since been offered an advance of $2,500 over his lease by another man who wanted the offices because of the associations.

VAN EMBURGH & ATTERBURY, one of the most prominent Stock Exchange houses, announced yesterday a change in their firm. S. B. French, who was a special partner, retires, and a new copartnership under the same name was formed by the remaining partners. F. T. Adams & Co. of the Stock Exchange have dissolved partnership. Other changes in Stock Exchange firms include the admission of George A. H. Churchill to C. I. Hudson & Co. and the retirement of W. B. Sancton from the same firm. Mr. Sancton will make his headquarters at Rudolph Keppler & Co.'s. Douglas Henry has retired from G. M. Carnochan & Co., and will be with Wilcox & Co. S. S. Schuyler has retired from Trippe, Schuyler & Co., and the interest of E. O. Schuyler in the same firm has ceased.

F. WILLIAMS, who was Chairman of the committee which arranged the dinner given on the occasion of the second anniversary of the Chelsea Exchange Bank, originated a novel form of invitation to be sent to the guests. It was in the form of a promissory note and read like this: "One month after date we promise to pay to Mr. —— One Dinner on account of the second anniversary of the Chelsea Exchange Bank for value received." The document was dated, numbered, and signed and stamped "due April 29." It was made payable at a prominent uptown Broadway restaurant.

JOSEPH A. BLAIR, a popular member of the Stock Exchange since 1889, has sold his seat to Hubert M. Schott, whose sponsors are W. G. Borland and A. M. Greer. The seat of Thomas E. H. Curtis, who has not been an active member, is posted for transfer to Morton D. Hutzler, whose sponsors are L. Newborg and W. W. Vaughan. One of the Stock Exchange seats sold last week brought only $80,000, which is a decrease from the previous high price, which was $83,000.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB, President of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, is due home from his foreign tour on Wednesday next, according to one of his friends. Mr. Schwab will bring back with him the secrets of his mission at St. Petersburg, and his friends will be eager to hear how he has fared. Up to his departure from the other side they say that they had received no definite information of the results of his journey, which was

DIRECTIONS TO BROKERS.

Experience of Some Customers Who Gave Peculiarly Restricted Stock Market Orders.

Stories of poor execution of orders are frequently told in Wall Street, the general tenor of which is that the broker cares nothing for the interest of his customer and handles the orders intrusted to him with a carelessness that often brings serious loss. Perhaps because of the currency given to such stories some customers take it upon themselves to direct their brokers as to the manner in which they are to execute their orders. If the experience of such customers generally is that of a few whose transactions have recently been talked about in the Street it would appear that after all the customers had better leave the broker to use his discretion as to the manner of executing the orders intrusted to him. In Northern Securities recently an order was given to sell the stock at 164, but the broker was specifically enjoined from offering the stock. It was the day after one of the recent sharp declines in that stock, and when the stock opened that morning the stock was offered at 164½, and several lots were taken on the offer at that price and at 164, although at no time was there a bid of 164 for the stock. The result was that the broker who had the stock to sell at the latter figure, but was enjoined from offering it, sold none, and almost before the customer could be informed of the course of the stock the price had declined several points, subsequently selling as low as 154. In another case a short time ago an order surrounded by similar restrictions was left unexecuted, although a large quantity of the stock sold at the stipulated price. It would appear that the better method for the customer to follow would be to use judgment in the selection of his broker, and then leave the latter to employ the knowledge of the market of which presumably he is possessed.

WAR TAX AT A DISCOUNT.

Sale of Certificate of Stock Bearing $7.25 in Stamps for $3.12.

There was sold on the curb last week a hundred-share lot of old White Knob Copper stock at 1-32 of 1 per cent. The certificate delivered by the seller was one of the original issue, and as such, having been put out during the time when the Spanish war tax was in effect, bore a $5 stamp and also a $2 stamp covering the transfer tax and in addition a 25-cent stamp covering the power of attorney indorsed on the certificate. This was a total of $7.25 in stamps, and all that the seller realized on the certificate was $3.12½. Thus, in the course of about three years the value of stock had been so completely wiped out that all that was left of it was about half the amount that had been paid in taxes to the Government. Under the circumstances there is something amusing in the fact that the stock was in that class of mining shares specifically stated to be unassessable, but upon which holders are nevertheless requested to contribute for the rehabilitation of the company.

A RAILWAY TREATISE.

RAILROADS OF THE UNITED STATES. Supplement to The London Statist, March 11, 1905.

If it were suggested that an American should write an exhaustive and authoritative treatise upon the leading railways of England—comparable with if not superior to the best British handbook—it would be esteemed an extravagant and presumptuous idea. Yet that is just what Mr. George Paish has done for The Statist, a British periodical distinguished for the friendly and favorable yet judicious and critical, tone of its discussion of American financial affairs. The introduction marshals in orderly array the sources of the true prosperity of the United States and of its railways, and is followed by a discussion of individual leading railways and industrials. The book is not a mere compilation of details, and is in no sense a substitute for the indispensable Poor's Manual. It is a more philosophical and reasoned attempt, and is the best antidote to the bears and the blues which can be found. Not that there is anything in it of prophecies about prices or market movements. Quite the contrary. But there may be found here a reasonable basis for the invincible optimism of American captains of industry.

FOREIGN COPPER MARKET.

The price of standard copper has again lost ground during the past week, the decline being sufficient to check the demand from consumers for refined material, and the margin between these descriptions has become abnormally wide. All the same, the most favorable accounts are still circulated concerning the American position, and a reasonable view of the situation is that the drooping tendency of standard copper must soon cease. Aggressive selling for the fall and unceasing realizing by tired holders are chiefly responsible for the cheerless surface appearances. The large American producers still command the market, and heavy consumptive demands are shortly falling due which cannot be met without there being some response in values, for a good deal of second-hand metal has been taken during recent weeks, and thus, when demand again becomes active, producers will benefit to a greater degree than latterly. First-hand holders show no wavering. Invisible supplies, it is said by the larger dealers, are rather smaller now than when the year began, and shipments from American ports are fair to Europe and large to the Far East, where the full extent of absorbing power is still an unknown quantity. It is a reasonable assumption that the recent depression in

STOCK SPECULATIONS SHARE IN CLEARINGS

Record of Past Four Months Compared with 1901 Figures.

PRESENT ACTIVITY IN TRADE

Market Prices and Transactions Fluctuate More Violently Than Bank Clearings—Some Suggestions as to Values.

Transactions on the New York Stock Exchange for the month of April amounted to 20,371,530 shares of stocks and to $75,111,800 par value of bonds. In April, 1901, the record month on the Exchange, the sales of stocks amounted to 41,688,897 shares and of bonds to $115,875,500. The bank clearings in New York for these two months were respectively $8,681,000,000 and $8,636,000,000. These figures are interesting as an indication of the source of the record clearings which have been reported this year and show pretty conclusively that in the three-year interval the gain in activity has been in legitimate business, while speculation has suffered in activity if in nothing else. There can be no doubt of the speculative character of the bulk of the business that was done in stocks in the month of April, 1901, and that the record of clearings established in that month should now be outdone in a month in which speculation in stocks was on a much smaller scale is suggestive of conditions outside of the Stock Exchange which in the long run count for more than the operations of pools in the stock market. Outside of New York City the record of increase in clearings is still more remarkable, having grown from $3,332,000,000 in April, 1901, to $3,901,000,000 for the month just past.

Comparing the clearings and New York Stock Exchange transactions for the first four months of the present year with the corresponding periods for the previous four years, it is seen that the fluctuations in clearings are much less marked than the fluctuations in stock and bond transactions. The following table gives the record in detail:

Jan. 1 to Apr. 30.	Stock Exchange Transactions. Stocks. (Shares.)	Bonds. (Par.)	Clearings All Cities.
1905	104,535,531	$420,827,050	$47,911,000,000
1904	40,380,741	219,822,300	32,630,000,000
1903	54,207,430	232,162,500	38,515,000,000
1902	66,248,494	380,080,100	38,089,000,000
1901	120,779,566	446,779,270	40,931,000,000

Among other things the table indicates that while the very heavy clearings reported during the first four months of 1901, which until the present year held the record for large clearings, included very heavy speculation in securities, the 1901 total has now been passed with much less assistance from the stock market. This would seem to show that the activity four years ago was really in the nature of a discounting operation, speculation playing more than a normal part in establishing the record for clearings. Since that time the clearings arising from other sources than the dealings in stock and bonds on the New York Stock Exchange have gone on increasing until now the four months' clearings have risen nearly $7,000,000,000 above the 1901 record, although this year the trading in securities for the period showed a falling off as compared with 1901 of about 16,000,000 shares of stock and of bonds to the par value of about $16,000,000.

More instructive still of the excesses of the stock market is the record of prices during the same period. The report of clearings throughout the country, which as closely as any other one factor reflect the conditions which actually prevail in trade, shows only a moderate deterioration from 1901 to 1903, the decrease amounting to about 5 per cent. for the four months' period, while the course of stocks during the same period is too well remembered to need to have more than passing attention called to it. A question which suggests itself is whether or not the stock market will again repeat its performance of 1901 and 1902 and run ahead of the development of the country this year just as it did in those years. In a great many instances the earnings of properties of various kinds and the manner in which they have withstood a period of moderate depression which in some particular industries was a period of decided depression have justified the level to which prices had risen four years ago, even though it is admittedly speculation rather than investment demand that succeeded in carrying them to that level not this year but four years ago. Were investment considerations solely to rule the stock market it would be a much better guide than it now is to conditions elsewhere. But a market from which all speculation was eliminated would be too tame for the tastes of our operators.

The question, What is the actual value of securities? is one often asked, but which never receives a satisfactory answer. The activity now prevailing in trade and the earnings that are accruing to railroads and industrial concerns show that there was no reason for the pessimism which so long governed the course of stocks. On the other hand it can be advanced that because stocks are now worth their price they were worth the price several years ago. The market will always to a certain extent discount the future, but the tendency is not without its drawbacks, for there comes a point at which it is realized that conditions as they are at the moment are below the standard set by the stock market, and the realization is calculated to bring a revulsion of speculative sentiment, which in turn carries the market too low, just as previously it had been carried too high. At the moment conditions appear to be better than the stock market, a fact which it is hard to construe into a bear argument. If Steel preferred was really worth par in 1902, it is doubly worth the price now, after it has shown itself capable of withstanding a period of depression such as the iron trade experienced a year ago. At the same time stocks are bought to keep, or at least the investor buys them with such a view, and for this reason it is as little reasonable to argue that a stock should advance steadily with improving conditions as that it should decline to the bottom with deterioration of conditions. Securities ought to reflect the average of conditions rather than the extreme of prosperity or the extreme of depression.

New Directory of Directors.

The 1905 edition of the Directory of Directors, corrected to March 31, is now ready. In the first part of the Directory is furnished a complete alphabetical list of Directors or Trustees having New York City addresses, followed by the names of the companies with which each man is identified. The second part includes selected lists of corporations in banking, insurance, transportation, manufacturing, and other lines of business, arranged alphabetically and accompanied by the names of their principal officers. The book is now in its seventh year, and has grown in volume from

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Dull; Call Money Nominal, 2 Per Cent.

A Small Business, of Holiday Character, with Interest Only in Specialties.

A week ago yesterday the stock market was in a demoralized and despondent condition. Yesterday it was without any other distinctive general quality than its dullness, qualified by several special movements of individual interests, but without wide significance. Consolidated Gas and People's Gas leaped about again in a manner which leaves nothing to the imagination regarding the connection between Legislatures and stock markets. Union Pacific also lost the improvement of Friday upon the anticipation of the authorization of its $100,000,000 stock issue, and Northern Pacific rose 5 points so easily as to suggest that under similar influences it would fall as many or more. Advances and declines by points instead of eighths is rather repellent than attractive to a market shocked as this one has been. Stability rather than vivacity is the menu attractive to disordered nerves and depleted margins. The bank statement showed the expected increase of cash and growth of surplus due to the week's liquidation of loans. The banking situation, so far as it is revealed in the bank statement, calls for no remark. The surplus is larger than some years, smaller than others, and adequate to prospective demands. It had no influence on the day's business, which also was but slightly affected by some tension in foreign politics, a canard regarding disagreement between the French President and the French Minister of Foreign Affairs being one cause.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 6.—The money market to-day was very quiet and a shade easier. Call loans, 3@3½ per cent.; time loans on collateral, 3½@4½ per cent.; time loans on mercantile paper, 3¾@4 per cent.; Clearing House loans, 2½ per cent.; New York funds at par; clearings, $25,057,455; balances, $2,120,772; Sub-Treasury debit, $36,136.

For the week: Clearings, $187,740,989; balances, $16,234,836.

There has been but a moderate demand for bank stocks during the week. Sales are reported as follows: Fifteen Boylston National at 98¼@99; 15 Prescott National Lowell at 108; 2 Merchants' National, New Bedford, at 203; 4 New England National at 139½; 7 State National at 150½, and 1 National Exchange at 150.

The stock market was dull and featureless. Amalgamated showed some activity, and United Shoe Machinery common was weak, but with these exceptions nothing happened to attract attention.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 6.—The money market to-day was very quiet and a shade easier. Call loans, 3@3½ per cent.; time loans on collateral, 3½@4½ per cent.; time loans on mercantile paper, 3¾@4 per cent.; Clearing House loans, 2½ per cent.; New York funds at par; clearings, $25,057,455; balances, $2,120,772; Sub-Treasury debit, $36,136.

For the week: Clearings, $187,740,989; balances, $16,234,836.

There has been but a moderate demand for bank stocks during the week. Sales are reported as follows: Fifteen Boylston National at 98¼@99; 15 Prescott National Lowell at 108; 2 Merchants' National, New Bedford, at 203; 4 New England National at 139½; 7 State National at 150½, and 1 National Exchange at 150.

The stock market was dull and featureless. Amalgamated showed some activity, and United Shoe Machinery common was weak, but with these exceptions nothing happened to attract attention.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

So far as the general characteristics of the market are concerned, the week has witnessed no new developments. The delayed action on the Mortgage Tax bill at Albany is still acting as a very effectual damper on building activity, and, while plans for new structures are being filed at the rate of over $3,000,000 a week, this figure probably represents to a large extent business arranged several weeks ago, and reflects only slightly the present unwillingness of lenders to enter upon building loan operations before they are certain what their exact position is to be. Such transactions as the sale of a $600,000 group of apartment houses in the Bronx before completion, and a long list of similar deals on the upper east side and throughout Harlem, show the generally sound and healthy condition of the building situation, and that the Mortgage Tax suspense should make itself felt just at the season when builders seek to avoid delay is particularly unfortunate.

That the next month or six weeks will produce an unusually large amount of dealing, both speculative and investment, in high-grade properties, is an opinion expressed by many of the more prominent operators. The sale of the Park & Tilford property on Fifth Avenue between Fifty-ninth and Sixtieth Streets was typical of this class of business, as was also the deal for the Rhoades parcels on Seventy-third Street, between Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue, at the northerly end of Sherman Square. The Fifth Avenue transaction, so far as can be learned, is of purely investment character, and is thus deprived of some of its interest for those who had regarded it as a matter of course that any transfer of so prominent a parcel must mean some improvement of it. The Sherman Square purchase, while it carries with it nothing more than the remodeling of the dwellings now on the property, marks an important step in the invasion of that centre of business. Among other items in the week's news affecting properties of high value were the sale of the eleven-story building at 11 and 13 West Thirty-second Street and the leasing of a fifty-foot plot on Thirty-fourth Street, near Broadway.

Buying in the area between Madison and Lexington Avenues, Twenty-sixth and Thirty-fourth Street, is still a noteworthy feature of the market. What the Pennsylvania-New Haven-Metropolitan alliance may do with the old car stables block at Thirty-second Street furnishes interesting gossip for speculative purposes, and the announcement that the Pennsylvania had bought a twenty-five-foot lot on Thirty-second Street, near Park Avenue, has been sufficient to enliven this gossip a bit. The railroad station possibility is pleasant for buyers to contemplate, but it is perhaps worth while to point out that the bulk of the buying is being done by operators who are more interested in the immediate future than in what may take place five years hence, and that their purchases indicate confidence in the Fourth Avenue neighborhood under present conditions fully as much as any belief in its ultimate prominence by reason of railroad improvements.

LATEST DEALINGS BY BROKERS.

C. M. Silverman & Son have bought eight lots on the north side of One Hundred and Forty-fifth Street, 100 feet east of Seventh Avenue, from Harry Matz, and have resold the property to the Times Realty and Construction Company for improvement with five six-story forty-foot apartment houses.

R. Bergmann has sold for the Roosevelt Realty and Construction Company to Lowe & Jorrisch the southeast corner of One Hundred and Thirty-sixth Street and Fifth Avenue, a plot 100 by 100, upon which the buyers will erect three six-story apartment houses, with stores.

Barney; also, 10 East Sixty-second Street, a four-story dwelling, on lot 25 by 100.5, for the Farmers' Loan and Trust Company.

THE AUCTION ROOM.

Of last week's large auction offerings, the only one which was thoroughly successful was that held on Wednesday at the Bronx Salesroom. The results in the new Vesey Street room were decidedly disappointing, a long list of parcels offered voluntarily on Thursday, resulting, with but few exceptions, in the bidding in and withdrawal of the properties.

The schedule for this week is again a long one and includes many vacant lots both on Washington Heights and in the Bronx. At Audubon and Jerome avenues, One Hundred and Seventy-ninth Street, a large plot on One Hundred and Thirty-fifth Street, near Lenox Avenue, and Bronx properties on Bathgate and Washington Avenues will be sold on Tuesday by Philip A. Smyth. At the stand of L. J. Phillips & Co., a large plot at Union Avenue and One Hundred and Sixtieth Street will be put up, and James L. Wells will offer the three dwellings 700 to 704 Trinity Avenue.

Partition sales, to be conducted on Tuesday by Auctioneer Day, cover valuable properties on lower Fifth Avenue, between Twenty-first and Twenty-second Streets, and 108, at the southeast corner of Sixteenth Street. One of these sales also affects an odd-shaped interior lot lying just west of Fifth Avenue in the block between Fifteenth and Sixteenth Streets.

Over 100 lots on Washington Heights will be offered on Wednesday by Bryan L. Kennelly. The properties are distributed over the whole of that section from the block on Broadway, between One Hundred and Thirty-first and One Hundred and Thirty-second Streets, to a large plot of thirty lots running through from Fort George to St. Nicholas Avenue, opposite the Cathedral. These will be sold in twelve lots on Hamilton Terrace, near One Hundred and Forty-first Street, corners on Broadway at One Hundred and Thirty-fifth and One Hundred and Fortieth Streets, a block front on One Hundred and Sixty-ninth Street, between Fort Washington and Haven Avenues, and fifty lots on the west side of Amsterdam Avenue, between One Hundred and Eighty-sixth and One Hundred and Eighty-eighth Streets. On the following day Philip A. Smyth will sell the northeast corner of Broadway and One Hundred and Sixty-fourth Street, 75 by 99.

A large Bronx sale, announced by James L. Wells for Thursday, will bring into the market forty-eight lots on Sedgwick and Undercliff Avenues, between One Hundred and Seventy-sixth and One Hundred and Seventy-seventh Streets.

Chief among Friday's offerings is that of the northeast corner of Madison Avenue and Twenty-ninth Street, to be sold in partition by Peter F. Meyer.
